Discount offered to poor power consumers

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

MALACANANG is moving to soften the blow of the hefty power rate increase on the poor by giving them up to a 50-percent discount on their monthly electricity bills.

But households and factories in Luzon will shoulder 94 percent of the power rate increase granted by the Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC) to the state-owned National Power Corp. (Napocor).

The ERC granted Napocor on Saturday a provisional rate increase of an average 98 centavos per kilowatt-hour, half of the P1.87 per kWh that the utility firm had petitioned for in June.

Because of cross-subsidies, the rate adjustment will translate into an increase of P1.23 per kWh in Luzon, 22 centavos per kWh in the Visayas, and about 27 centavos in Mindanao.

The increase, which Malacañang endorsed, would cut P33 billion from Napocor's projected P116-billion net loss in 2005 and reduce by P8 billion the consolidated public sector deficit of P312 billion this year.

Consumers in Luzon, the Visayas and Mindanao are expected to feel the increase in January 2005.

Consumer groups and other nongovernment organizations quickly assailed the power rate increase.

This afternoon, the Association of Concerned Commuters and Consumers (AC3) and other consumer groups in Cebu are scheduled to march on the Fuente Osmeña rotunda to protest the power rate increase.

23,000 churches mobilized

By Blanche S. Rivera and Christine O. Avendaño

NOW ADD the non-Catholic Christian bloc to the growing list of groups and individuals donating to the Bayanihan Fund, which seeks to help the government ease the fiscal crisis.

The Council of Christian Bishops of the Philippines (CCBP), an organization composed mainly of supporters of defeated presidential candidate Eddie Villanueva, has agreed to pass a "second offering" in all services in their churches for the Bayanihan Fund.

The leaders of the council came up with the decision at a meeting on Friday night to discuss the fiscal crisis and how the churches could help.

The CCBP has around 23,000 member-churches all over the country, including the Jesus is Lord Church Worldwide of Villanueva. Magbanua claimed these churches represent around eight million Christians.

"This is one time that the Church and government should do something to stop the crisis, like the Pondo ng Pinoy (Manila) Archbishop (Gaudencio) Rosales," CCBP chair Fred Magbanua said.

Rosales had encouraged all Catholics to set aside 25 centavos daily for the Pondo ng Pinoy, a community foundation that will support projects of nongovernment organizations and provide the people with an alternative to entrusting their welfare to politicians.

To help the government address the fiscal crisis, businessmen, legislators and ordinary citizens are contributing to the

Senate, House lawmakers feast on pork barrel

Philippine Center for Investigative Journalism

(First of two parts)

IN THEORY and in law, the legislators' role in pork barrel allocations remains limited to "consultation" to enable them to recommend priority projects. In practice, however, they have the final word on what projects should be funded.

This setup makes legislators the lords of pork barrel funds. It also makes them natural magnets to contractors and suppliers who offer bribes so they can sell their goods and services.

The release of pork is based on the lawmakers' request to the Department of Budget and Management, detailing the nature and location of the project they want, the implementing agency and the funds required.

No one knows exactly how much is lost to corruption in pork-funded projects. A longtime politician from the North, who admits to accepting "small commissions," says that in a year, corruption in pork barrel projects translates to about P12 billion in losses to the government.

In May 2002, Camarines Sur Rep. Rolando Andaya Jr. gave his own estimate on how much the government loses to wrongdoing.

In a speech seeking to rally his colleagues' support for the procurement reform bill, Andaya, chair of the House appropriations committee, said P21 billion—or a fifth of the government's P104-billion procurement budget in 2001—went to the pockets of legislators, officials and contractors alone.

The amount lost is about half of the 2002 budget of the Department of Public Works and Highways, and bigger than the budgets of state universities and colleges (P16.8 billion) the Department of Transportation and Communication (P13.3 billion), and the Department of Health (P11.8 billion).

Putin vows tough response to terrorists' war

BESLAN, Russia—Wails of mourning echoed through the streets of this southern Russian town on Sunday, and the region's interior minister resigned in the wake of the school hostage-taking that left more than 350 people—nearly half of them children—dead.

A shaken President Vladimir Putin on Saturday went on national television to make a rare and candid admission of Russian weakness in the face of an "all-out war" by terrorists. He urged the Russian people to mobilize against terrorism even as he promised wide-ranging reforms to toughen security forces and purge corrupt officials. (Related stories in The World, Page A10.)

"We showed weakness, and weak people are beaten," Putin said in a speech aimed at addressing the grief, shock and anger felt by many after a string of terrorist attacks that had killed some 450 people in the past two weeks in connection with the war in Chechnya.

Dozens of men dug graves in a football field-sized tract next to the Beslan cemetery on Sunday morning, while surveyors across the road marked out new plots with wooden stakes and string. Coffin lids stood outside the entrances to apartment buildings, along with wooden planks bearing the names of victims who were to be buried in funerals beginning later Sunday. Wailing could be heard from

Poor own more than bird houses in Sin Village

By Blanche S. Rivera

BESSIE Cortez, a laundrywoman from Sta. Ana, Manila, would have settled for a bird house as long as she could call it her own.

On Tuesday, Aug. 31, her heart swelled when she saw the 24-square-meter studio at the Cardinal Sin Village in Punta, Manila, that would soon be her family's home.

Cortez is one of the first 84 recipients of units inside the housing compound that is being built in honor of retired Manila Archbishop Jaime Cardinal Sin.

Sin, who celebrated his 76th birthday on that day, blessed the completed units in a simple ceremony. Although wheelchair-bound, the cardinal personally distributed the certificates of occupancy to the first batch of homeowners.

The three-story building is one of six being built on the two-hectare property on F. Manalo Street in Sta. Ana. When finished, the compound will have 504 units, including a school, clinic and small chapel.

Speaking in Filipino, Cortez told the INQUIR- POOR/A22

MILITARY-ABU SAYYAF COLLUSION

Captain's testimony raises issue anew

By Philip C. Tubeza

THE ALLEGED collusion between the military and the Abu Sayyaf Group in the controversial escape of several bandits in the 2001 siege in Lamitan, Basilan, has surfaced anew following the testimony of a military intelligence captain in defense of an Abu Sayyaf bandit in court.

An official of the Department of Justice, who asked not to be identified, said Capt. C.J. Paolo Perez of the Military Intelligence Group had testified in February in defense of Guillermo Wahid Salcedo, alias Abu Urban, one of the principal accused in the Lamitan kidnapping.

Perez's testimony puzzled the DOJ which is investigating the alleged collusion and has yet to release its report on the matter.

The source, a member of the prosecution team based in Manila, said that although Perez had testified in February, his testimony was noticed only when the decision on the case was handed down on Aug. 13.

The source said Perez would not have been "so audacious" as to testify in court if he did not have the support of some of his superiors.

"This is the first time I encountered something like this, considering the military's strong statements about its all-out war against terrorism. It's very hard to understand from a legal point of view," the official said.

Perez wanted Salcedo acquitted because the bandit was a military deep penetration agent (DPA) whom Perez had handled.

The source said that prosecutors had noticed that many arrested Abu Sayyaf members had claimed they were military agents, again raising questions about the alleged collusion.

"That is where this is leading to. While Gracia Burnham said she had no personal knowledge (of collusion), these isolated things, I think, would again open up (the issue)," the source said.

Salcedo was one of the 19 bandits convicted in the kidnapping of nurse Ediborah Yap and three other hospital workers in Lamitan in June 2001.

Perez allegedly even tried to convince witnesses not to testify against the bandits. He also wanted to testify in behalf of Kamar Jaafar, alias Abu Jude, another alleged military agent, but was not able to do so.

"It was really very disappointing to see a military officer losing his sanity and testifying for the other side. We don't know where his loyalty is," said State Prosecutor Ricardo Cabaron, the fiscal who handled the case.

"We do not know why Captain Perez made a deal with the enemy," he added.

Cabaron said Perez also tried to convince former hostages Reina Malonzo, Sheila Tabunyang and Joel Guilo not to testify against Salcedo and Jaafar.

Perez testified before the Basilan court on Feb. 17 that Salcedo had been recruited by the 34th Military Intelligence Co. in January 2000 although the bandit already had a pending warrant of arrest for kidnapping.

He said that Salcedo provided them with information that led to the arrest or killing of some Abu Sayyaf bandits and the escape of some hostages. To prove that he was a military agent, Salcedo presented in court his Agent's Agreement/Contract, which he had supposedly signed before Perez on Feb. 15, 2000.

Despite Perez's testimony, Basilan Judge Danilo Bucoy convicted

Salcedo, Jaafar and 17 others on Aug. 13 for the Lamitan kidnapping and sentenced them to death.

The INQUIRER source said that if Jaafar and Salcedo were really "military assets" and Perez wanted them excluded from the charge sheet, he could have approached the DOJ and asked to make them state witnesses.

Cabaron cross-examined Perez and asked him if he knew that what he was doing was "treasonous."

The captain allegedly said that he believed that he was "doing more justice" in testifying for Salcedo.

In his landmark 47-page decision, Judge Bucoy also dismissed Perez's defense of his agent.

"This court is not convinced by the testimony of Captain Perez. For while it may be true that (Salcedo) had indeed passed information to the military, it does not follow that he was all-out for the military and against the ASG," Bucoy said.

The judge also said that witnesses also saw Salcedo join the Abu Sayyaf "striking force."

As this developed, the sister of Aldam Tilao, alias Abu Sabaya, the late ASG spokesperson, denied allegations she had been involved in the kidnappings perpetrated by the bandit group.

"I am innocent, the only crime I know is being a sister of Sabaya," Satra Abdulaup Tilao (not Tillah as earlier reported) said in an interview at the Basilan provincial police jail.

Sabaya was killed in a botched operation in Zamboanga del Norte in 2002.

Former hostage Sheila Tabunyang claimed that after their release in Sumisip town, they were brought to Satra's house in Barangay Tabuk in Isabela City, Basilan.

But Satra said she even spent P500 to feed the hostages and bring them to Zamboanga City.

Forgotten hostage's family seeks help for his release

By Christian V. Esguerra

A FORGOTTEN military intelligence officer has been in the hands of the New People's Army exactly 1,096 days today.

No one seems to be looking for Army Sgt. Jeremias Rosete, save for his family who's been grieving since he and his three civilian "assets" were captured in Barangay Datal Blao in Columbio town, Sultan Kudarat, on Sept. 4, 2001.

Communist guerrillas seized Rosete, including Herminia Sorongon, Wilfredo Maldecir and Pepito Simbulan, on the suspicion that they were spying on the NPA unit based in the area.

Rosete was then assigned with the Intelligence Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

No action, no salary

His 18-year-old daughter Rosemarie on Friday sought the help of the Volunteers Against Crime and Corruption. She and her family were distressed over the alleged lack of government action and the AFP's decision to stop releasing his monthly salary three months ago.

"What could be worse than authorities ignoring a missing loved one and even cutting off his salary?" VACC chair Dante Jimenez told the INQUIRER in a telephone interview. "He's been missing for three years, yet nobody's looking for him."

As it was, Jimenez said, Rosete's P15,000 monthly salary was hardly enough to support his wife Aida and their two daughters, Rosemarie, and 21-year-old Cathrene. They live in Cabatuan, Isabela.

'Unfair'

Quoting Rosemarie, Jimenez said the family felt it was unfair for the Arroyo administration to work on the release of two Army officers last month while ignoring another captive officer.

The government secured the release of Army Lt. Ronaldo Fidelino and Pfc. Ronel Nemeño, nearly six months after they were captured by the NPA's Romulo Jallos Command in Camarines Sur.

The release was the culmination of a series of negotiations between Silvestre Bello III, chief government negotiator in the peace process, and Luis Jalandoni, his counterpart in the National Democratic Front.

Bello yesterday said there had been a similar effort to free Rosete shortly after he and his group were captured.

Bogged down

But he said negotiations bogged down after then Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes refused to grant the NPA's demand for a suspension of police and military operations in South and North Cotabato, Sultan Kudarat and Davao del Sur.

During negotiations on the release of Fidelino and Nemeño, Jalandoni explained that the suspension of operations was not actually a precondition but a standard operating procedure so the NPA could safely transfer a captive to his family.

Bello said he had asked Jalandoni to grant the release of Rosete with no conditions.

"I asked him if he could consider releasing the officer," the chief government negotiator said. "He said he would verify if he's (Rosete) still with the NPA or if he had already joined the movement."

Bello was not expecting a complicated negotiation, after the government's and the NDF's experience in the case of Fidelino and Nemeño.

'Leave the apos, yayas alone'

HER ALLIES in Congress yesterday asked President Macapagal-Arroyo's detractors not to begrudge the First Family its "vacation" in China, particularly the inclusion of her grandchildren and their nannies in the official party to the state visit.

"Let us not begrudge the First Family for being with the President since an official invitation was extended to them," said Rep. Antonio Cuenco (Lakas, Cebu City) in a statement.

Cuenco was reacting to criticism that Ms Arroyo's daughters-in-law, granddaughters and their yayas had come along on the trip just after the President had ordered all government offices to adopt austerity measures to avert a fiscal crisis.

Cuenco said the members of the First Family had been invited by their Chinese hosts. "They acted as ambassadors of goodwill for the Filipino people," he said.

In the same statement, Rep. Lorna Silverio (Lakas, Bulacan) said that members of the First Family were "also human, with a hard-working President who deserves to spend precious time with them."

"The President has not been remiss in her duties and in the next six years, her vacations with her family will be a precious few and far between," Silverio said.

Malacañang had deflected the criticism by stressing that no public funds were spent for the trip of the First Family.

They had been invited by the Chinese government which took care of all their expenses, the Palace said.

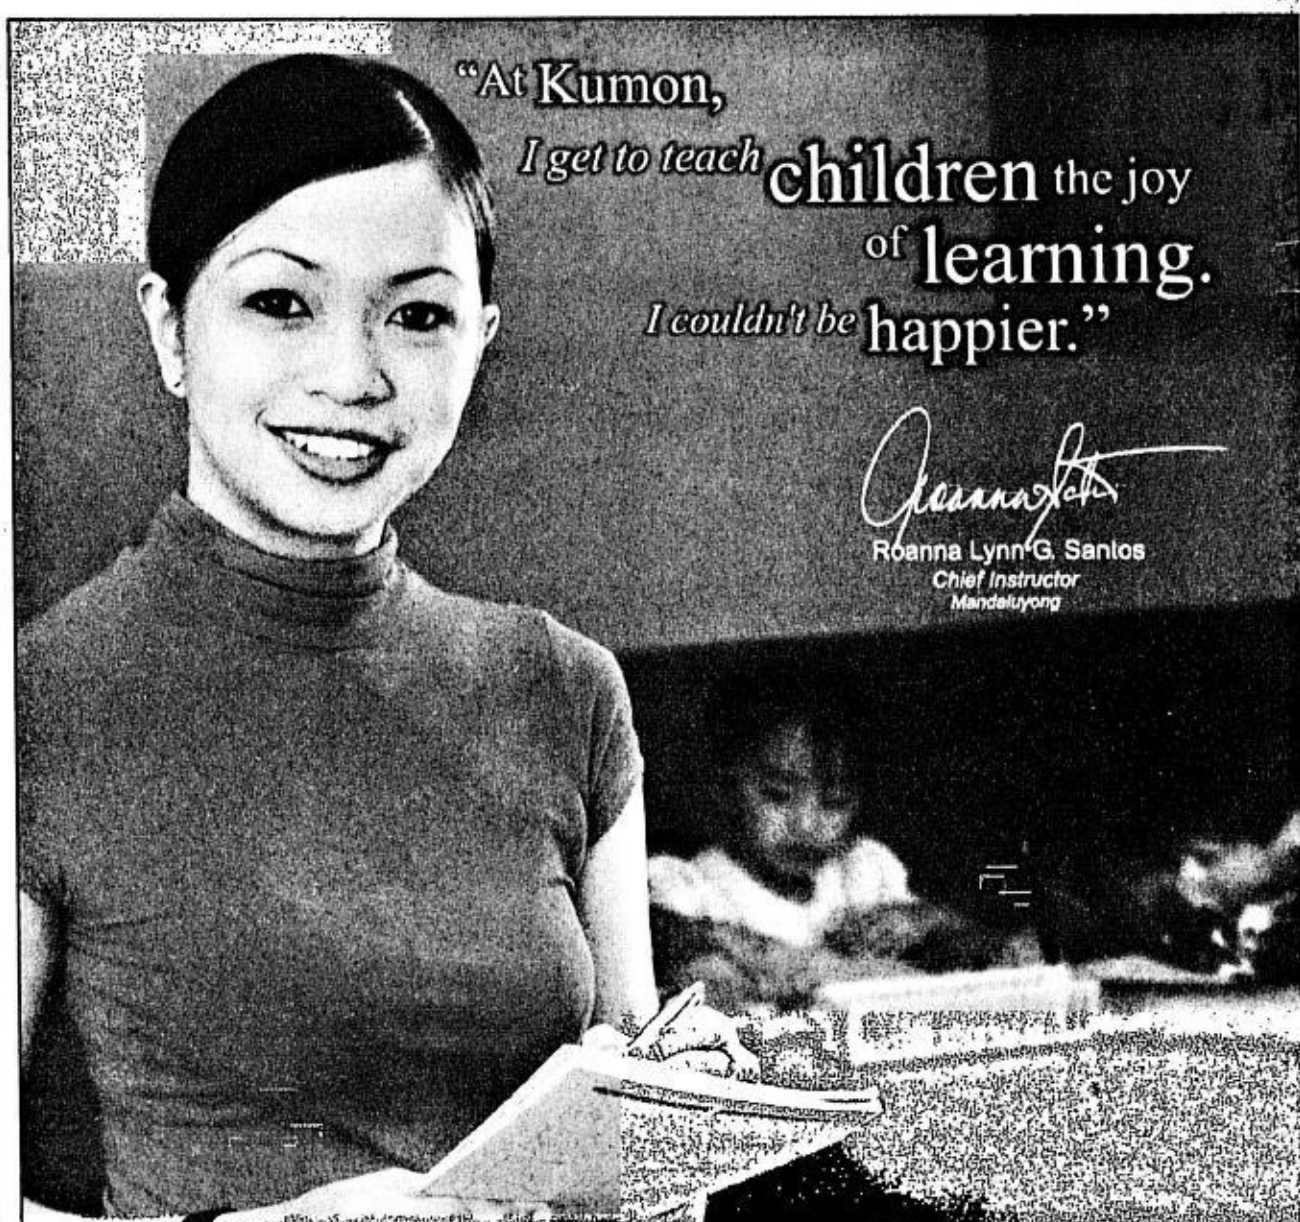

According to Cuenco and Silverio, President Arroyo's China trip paid off handsomely and went a long way in strengthening the ties between the two countries.

They noted that the trip yielded $1 billion in loans and investments, among other benefits.

In another statement, Rep. Antonino Roman (LP, Bataan) pointed out that with the fund assistance commitment made by China during the President's trip, the $400 million North Rail project will get under way.

"People who do not want the President and the country to succeed will always find fault in whatever she does instead of appreciating her for the fruitful products of her endeavors abroad," Roman said.

PHILIPPINE Drug Enforcement Agency Undersecretary and Director General Anselmo S. Avenido Jr. yesterday announced a major reshuffle in the agency to further strengthen the war against illegal drugs.

Avenido said the reassignment of key personnel took effect on Sept. 4 and affected six regional offices and two national staff services.

Given new assignments as directors of the respective regional offices were Senior Supt. Donarado I. Torres, Regional Office II; Supt. Abe L. Lemos, Regional Office IV-A (Calabarzon); Supt. Carlos E. Salazar, Regional Office IV-B (Mimaropa); Supt. Rolan D. Balquin, Regional Office VI; Supt. Amado E. Marquez, Regional Office VII and Supt. Jane A. Aunzo, Regional Office ARMM.

Given new posts in two national staff services were Supt. Roybel M. Sanchez as director, International Cooperation and Foreign Affairs Service and Supt. Rolando G. Rama, director, Logistics Management Service.

Also given new posts were Supt. Lazaro R. Torroja, special assignment, Office of the Deputy Director for Operations; Supt. Wesley A. Barayuga, assistant director, Legal and Prosecution Service; Supt. Edgardo L. Perez, assistant director for administration, Special Enforcement Service; Supt. Gustavo T. Torres, assistant regional director for administration, Regional Office IVB (Mimaropa) and Chief Insp. Eduardo A. Quiocho, assistant director, Public Information Office.

Avenido said the reassignments were also aimed at familiarizing key personnel with the functions of the different PDEA offices and equipping them with the expertise to better fight the drug menace.

Avenido, meanwhile, vowed to ferret out scallaws in the agency. He said he "will not hesitate to fire and file criminal charges against any erring PDEA personnel."

At the same time, he belied recent reports claiming that the country was fast becoming an exporter of prohibited drugs.

He said records obtained from the United States Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) showed otherwise. Nelson F. Flores

Meet reset

The workshop is being held under the auspices of Nova-X Solutions, a business intelligence provider of niche markets.

Cops to receive free medical, legal aid

By Edson Castro Tandoc Jr.

AFTER the threat comes the treat. Philippine National Police Director General Edgar Aglipay yesterday promised to give free health and legal services to policemen, even as he repeated his warning against corrupt and lazy cops.

The promise was made during an award ceremony for 18 Central Police District policemen at the Amoranto Stadium in Quezon City attended by Interior Secretary Angelo Reyes, Mayor Feliciano "Sonny" Belmonte and more than 1,600 cops.

Aglipay said he would be able to deliver the free services despite the government's current austerity program.

He told the INQUIRER the PNP has recruited some 100 doctors who would be given the rank of captain. These doctor-cops would be deployed to the provinces to provide free medical checkups to policemen.

And since police officials have been eating crackers and "economies" during meetings, the savings would be used to provide free medicines to them.

Free legal services would be also provided by at least 50 lawyers, whom Aglipay would be swearing into office today. These lawyer-cops would be assigned to defend other policemen facing charges.

Aglipay also reminded the police force of current efforts to weed out rogue cops.

The strategy this time would be to use anti-kotong (extortion) pins, which the National Capital Region Police Office began giving out yesterday.

IN A RARE opening of its labor market to foreigners, Japan plans to accept up to 200 Filipino nurses and caregivers for the elderly, a report said Sunday.

The liberalization of labor markets is a focal point in Japan's negotiations with the Philippines on concluding a free trade agreement (FTA).

A draft plan by the Japanese health and labor ministry envisages educating selected Filipino nurses and caregivers in the Japanese language and culture in their home country for up to one year, the Mainichi Shimbun said.

They would then be invited to Japan for on-the-job training and to study for national examinations to obtain formal licenses, the daily said, adding that they would be sent home if they failed the exams.

It would be the first time that Japan would accept foreign workers as part of an FTA. Japan and the Philippines are to hold a fourth round of FTA talks in Tokyo for three days from Monday.

Meanwhile, Filipino domestic workers could lose their dominance of the Hong Kong market to Indonesian workers, a labor attaché warned Sunday.

Hong Kong-based Filipino labor attaché Bernardino Julve said the number of Filipino maids sent to Hong Kong fell from 155,470 in 2001 to 123,189 in 2003.

Julve said this was partly due to the economic slowdown in Hong Kong and the outbreak of the Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) in 2003.

He said domestic workers from Indonesia were becoming more attractive to Hong Kong employers because of the training these workers receive before being sent abroad.

Other nationalities, he said, were also willing to work for wages lower than the minimum HK$3,270 monthly. Julve also cited the Filipinos' assertiveness as a factor.

"Filipinos are raised in a democratic society while the Chinese, with their Confucian values, value discipline, order and hierarchy," he said. AFP, Martin P. Marfil

Disaster-prone provinces oppose revenue cut

CITY OF SAN FERNANDO—Local government executives of provinces prone to disasters such as Pampanga and Tarlac have op-

Pampanga Gov. Mark Lapid and mayors in the province said that since Pampanga is prone to disasters, more funds should be allotted to the provincial, municipal, and city governments to allow them to better serve their populace.

Lapid said these measures ranged from organizing barangay disaster coordinating councils, installing monitoring systems and upgrading bridges and roads.

Malacañang earlier announced plans to reduce the IRA of Local Government Units by P35 billion to avert a financial crisis, but this has been strongly resisted by local executives and LGUs who fear that delivery of basic services would be badly affected.

The IRA is the tax share of LGUs, which get 40 centavos of every peso in taxes collected by the government.

This year, Pampanga's IRA is P609.56 million. Some parts of Pampanga and Tarlac were inundated as a result of monsoon rains induced by Typhoons Marce and Chaba. In Pampanga, 151 of the province's 507 villages remained under one to eight feet of water, the latest report from the Provincial Disaster Coordinating Council showed.

Lapid said the lingering floods, the extent of damage and the loss of lives indicated the need to do instigate flood-mitigating efforts. Expenditures in health care also increased, he said.

Lapid said the province's 20-percent development fund and 5-percent calamity fund were not enough to fund efforts to lessen the impact of floods.

In Iloilo City, local councilors are spearheading a provincewide campaign against Malacañang's plan to cut the IRA.

Lawyer Joseph Anthony Lutero, secretary general of the Iloilo chapter of the Philippine Councilors League, said they would discuss the issue with their 432 members in the province's 42 municipalities.

The group has launched a signature campaign against the plan, which it said would cripple the operations of LGUs whose resources are mostly dependent on their IRA share.

"We want to send the strongest message possible to our national government that this will be disastrous to LGUs," said Lutero.

In Naga City, the Naga City Council approved a resolution seeking a legal remedy against the planned IRA cut.

"We are intending to file a formal case against parties concerned in this IRA issue," Vice Mayor Gabriel Bordado told the INQUIRER, referring to Ms Arroyo, Albay Rep. Joey Salceda and other proponents of the measure.

When contacted by the INQUIRER, city legal counsel Nelson Legacion said the case would be filed in the Supreme Court.

Citing SC rulings, Bordado said cutting the IRA of LGUs was against the spirit of the Local Government Code.

"We are appealing to other officials to join hands because it is not only Naga and Camarines Sur, but also all LGUs (will be affected)," he said.

In Tacloban City, an official of the Department of Interior and Local Government has recommended that income classifications among LGUs be used as a basis for reducing their IRA.

William Paler, DILG regional director, believed it would be "reasonable" if reductions in the IRA would correspond to the income classification of the LGUs. For example, he said, LGUs in the first, second and third income brackets could have their IRA shares reduced while those in the fourth, fifth and sixth classes must be spared for the meantime. *Tonette Orejas, PDI Central Luzon Desk; Nestor P Burgos Jr., PDI Visayas Bureau; Alan Pelayo, PDI Southern Luzon Bureau; and Joey A. CFA® "The Global Passport"

The Asian Institute of Management's (AIM) Gov. Jose B. Fernandez, Jr. Center for Banking in Finance (JBF Center) is offering the Chartered Financial Analyst (CFA®) Review Courses in Manila, Cebu and Davao for the June 2005 examinations. Administered worldwide by the CFA Institute®, the CFA® Program sets standards of knowledge, professionalism and integrity in the financial services sector anchored on a practitioner-oriented curriculum. The innate toughness of the CFA® program enables CFA Charterholders worldwide to earn the highest level of respect and recognition from their peers, employers, and the industry.

The AIM-JBF Center has been conducting CFA® Review Courses since 1996. The lecturers are primarily professors of AIM, Asia's first and foremost graduate school of management. In the June 2004 CFA Level I exam, 80% of those who took the Course passed, surpassing the 34% worldwide passing rate.

As a testament to the soaring popularity of the CFA Program and the AIM-JBF Center Review Courses, the AIM-JBF Center will be conducting, for the first time, review courses outside Manila. The Cebu and Davao sites will satisfy a growing demand from non-Manila based candidates.

The review methodology focuses on discussing the Learning Outcome Statements (LOS) and holding a quiz every session. The actual exam questions are patterned after one or more LOS. A performance tracker is set up to track the candidates' progress.

Be grateful you have jobs, Palace tells raise-seekers

By Gil Cabacungan Jr.

WORKERS should be thankful they are employed and should not risk losing their jobs by asking for a raise.

This was Malacañang's advice to labor groups demanding a P125 across-the-board pay hike in the wake of rising oil prices, power rates and the cost of basic commodities.

"We sympathize with our workers but I think this kind of petition is untimely. Most companies are not doing well and we are in a difficult economic condition," said Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye in an interview over RMN radio.

Workers renewed their call for higher wages a few days after the National Economic and Development Authority presented robust economic figures for the first half of the year with the gross domestic product (GDP)—which measures the value of all goods and services produced in the country—rising by 6.3 percent.

"I think what is more important is for our countrymen to maintain their present jobs because the alternative is for some companies to close shop if they insist on a wage hike," Bunye said.

The country's unemployment rate had soared to record-level highs during the first three years of the Arroyo administration, although President Macapagal-Arroyo repeatedly claimed she had created an average of one million jobs a year during that period.

Tutors warned against taking protest to House

THE PARTY-LIST group Alliance of Volunteer Educators (AVE) yesterday warned teachers against pushing through with their planned protest in front of the House of Representatives this week to press for a salary increase, saying this would be untimely.

AVE Rep. Eulogio "Amang" Magsaysay said such an action would only besmirch the image of teachers.

"Let us not be swayed by our emotions," Magsaysay said. "Some sectors might only be using us to further bring the government to its knees."

Several teachers' groups had called for pay increases to meet the rising costs of living due to the fiscal crisis.

While he recognized the teachers' right to stage a rally or organize peaceful assemblies, Magsaysay said a protest at this critical period could do more harm than good. The country would be placed in a precarious situation if shaken by massive protests, he said.

He assured teachers that his group has been working on a legislative measure which would grant them higher wages and non-wage benefits.

Arab world shocked by school siege

Backlash against Islam, followers feared

CAIRO, Egypt — Images of dead, wounded and traumatized Russian children being carried from the scene of a rebel school siege horrified Middle Eastern Muslims, prompting forthright self-criticism Saturday and fresh concern about an international backlash against Islam and its followers.

Arab leaders, Muslim clerics and ordinary parents across the Middle East denounced the school siege that left more than 340 people dead, many of them children, as unjustifiable. Some warned such actions damage Islam's image more than all its enemies could hope. Even some supporters of Islamic militancy condemned it, though at least one insisted Muslims were not behind it.

"Holy warriors" from the Middle East long have supported fellow Muslims fighting in Chechnya, and Russian officials said nine or 10 Arabs were among militants killed when commandos stormed the Beslan school in southern Russia on Friday to end a siege that began Wednesday by rebels demanding Chechen independence.

Middle East security officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said it was too early to know the nationalities of the Arabs among the dead militants. However, a prominent Arab journalist wrote that Muslims must acknowledge the painful fact that Muslims are the main perpetrators of terrorism.

"Our terrorist sons are an end-product of our corrupted culture," Abdulrahman al-Rashed, general manager of Al-Arabiya television, wrote in his daily column published in the pan-Arab Asharq Al-Awsat newspaper. It ran under the headline, "The Painful Truth: All the World Terrorists are Muslims!"

Al-Rashed ran through a list of recent attacks by Islamic extremists—in Russia, Iraq, Sudan, Saudi Arabia and Yemen—many of which are influenced by the ideology of Osama bin Laden, the Saudi-born leader of the al-Qaida terror network. "Most perpetrators of suicide operations in buses, schools and residential buildings around the world for the past 10 years have been Muslims," he wrote.

Muslims will be unable to cleanse their image unless "we admit the scandalous facts," rather than offer condemnations or justifications.

"The picture is humiliating, painful and harsh for all of us."

Arab TV stations repeatedly aired footage of terrified young survivors being carried from the school siege scene, while pictures of dead and wounded children ran on front pages of Saturday's Arab newspapers. AP

Russia has history of using brute force in previous hostage crises

By Dmitry Zaks

MOSCOW—Russia has been struck by a series of major hostage crises over the past decade as separatists from Chechnya resort to extreme measures in their fight. In each case, Moscow chose brute force over talks.

The tactic was first adopted by separatists who appeared to have the support of the Chechen people in the first Chechen war between 1994-96. It has now been adopted by fringe extremists who represent the interest of a specific clan.

But Moscow's refusal to negotiate—at least not on the spot—has been consistent and its use of force despite the threat of killing the hostages is unnerving to some Western states.

Militants demanding the withdrawal of Russian troops from the republic seized a Russian school last Wednesday and after a three-day standoff a brutal six-hour battle ensued.

It was set off by still unexplained explosions that prompted Russian special forces to attack. The death toll stands at 330 people—half of them children—and is growing.

The following is a review of the other three major hostage crises to hit Russia.

• June 1995: Budyonnovsk hospital. 1,500 hostages. 150 killed.

Six months into the first Chechen campaign, a well-armed band led by then still unknown field commander Shamil Basayev—now Moscow's public enemy number one—stunned Russia when they slipped out of Chechnya and crossed southern Russia to seize a hospital in the region of Stavropol.

He let in television crews and ordered the Kremlin to sue for peace and pull out its troops. Then president Boris Yeltsin was attending an overseas summit and authorities in Moscow were scrambling for a response as the world watched.

Eventually its troops opened fire on the building even while the patients were waving white pieces of cloth out of the windows in hope they would not be attacked.

Some 150 people—most of them patients—were killed in the battles and it was believed that the large majority died from Russian bullets.

Basayev's men were then given safe passage back to Chechnya and Moscow for the first time agreed to negotiate.

• January 1996: Kizlyar hospital. 2,000 hostages. Up to 100 killed.

Gunmen crossed into the neighboring republic of Dagestan to seize a hospital there as war continued unabated.

Russia appeared to learn its lesson from Budyonnovsk and offered the rebels 11 buses to return back to Chechnya. They took 100 hostages with them to guarantee a safe return.

But the Russian troops attacked the convoy with mortar and rocket fire when they reached the Chechen village of Pervomayskaya—risking the hostages' lives.

A brutal battle ensued in terrible winter weather condition. The rebels managed to escape. Between 50 and 100 people were killed. Western reports said Russian troops were shooting at each other after encircling the convoy amid fog and poor communications.

• October 2002: Moscow's Dubrovka theater. 800 hostages. 129 spectators and 41 hostage takers killed.

Rebels struck the heart of Moscow when a group of 41 Chechens stormed a theater stage during the performance of a musical. They included female suicide bombers and the rebel leader placed a large bomb in the center of the hall.

They demanded peace in Chechnya and again made the war-torn region—and President Vladimir Putin's inability to resolve the conflict—the focus of world attention.

Putin spent 57 agonizing hours weighing his choices before deciding to pump a lethal gas into the theater, thus knocking unconscious the hostage-takers—and the theatergoers—before crack troops stormed in.

The troops shot dead each of the rebels point blank. But 129 people died as well from a lethal opiate whose exact makeup Russia refused to reveal despite repeated requests from the West.

Putin also came in for criticism because most of the victims died on their way to hospital and doctors—since the makeup of the gas was considered a state secret—did not know which antidote to use to revive the civilians.

Putin said Russia would only press on with the Chechen campaign harder and accused the rebels of being a part of an international terror network—now his favored defense of the campaign. AFP

Suicide bomb attack on Iraq police academy kills 20; blasts hit Baghdad

KIRKUK, Iraq—Municipal workers scrubbed blood off the street and towed away gutted cars in this northern Iraqi city Sunday after a suicide car bombing against a police academy killed 20 people and wounded 36 others in the latest attack aimed at disrupting US-backed efforts to build a strong Iraqi security force.

Also Sunday, explosions and gunfire echoed through Baghdad and two helicopters hovered over the southern neighborhood where blasts apparently took place, witnesses said. A spokesperson for coalition forces in the capital and the Interior Ministry said they had no immediate information.

Police in Kirkuk decided to cancel a planned communal funeral for the victims Sunday out of fear it could be targeted by terrorists.

The explosion Saturday outside the academy went off as hundreds of trainees and civilians were leaving for the day, littering the street with bloodied bodies, charred cars, pieces of glass and twisted metal.

An investigation showed the suicide vehicle was packed with some 500 kilograms of explosives, Kirkuk police chief Gen. Torhan Abdul-Rahman Yousif said. There was no indication about who was behind the attack, which hospital officials said claimed the lives of 20 people and injured 36 others.

The victims' relatives, however, denounced authorities Sunday for failing to boost security around the academy, saying leaflets bearing death threats against people working there were found scattered in the building two weeks ago.

"I saw one of my friends killed before my eyes. I couldn't do anything to help him," said Bassem Ali, a student at the academy who was hurt in the blast.

Insurgents see police as collaborators with US-led forces and are bent on disrupting American efforts to build a strong Iraqi security force ahead of January elections.

Militants have blown up police stations all over the country, gunned down officers in drive-by shootings and battered police recruitment centers with mortar barrages and rocket-propelled grenades—leaving policemen increasingly terrified and deterring would-be recruits.

In another attack on police, insurgents fired mortar rounds at an Iraqi police patrol, killing five officers and injuring 38 others, said Col. Adnan Abdul-Rahman of the Interior Ministry on Sunday. The Saturday attack occurred between the towns of Mahmoudiya and Latifiyah, 40 kilometers from the capital. AP

A HOUSEBOAT is swept into a seawall Sept. 4 as wind and waves from Hurricane Frances pound the Village of Ocean Breeze in Jensen Beach, Fla.

2nd hurricane in 3 weeks strikes Florida, cuts power

STUART, Florida—The center of the eye of Hurricane Frances struck Florida's east coast early Sunday with sustained wind of 170 kph and pelting rain, knocking out power to 2 million people and forcing Floridians to endure a frightening night amid roaring gales that shredded roofs and uprooted trees.

The National Hurricane Center said the hurricane officially made landfall near Stuart, 175 kilometers north of Miami, about 1 a.m. Sunday, a day later than expected.

Transformers popped along streets, sending sparks into darkened skies, as families huddled in shelters, bathrooms and hotel lobbies. The wind-whipped coastal waters resembled a churning hot tub.

"I think I'm not going to sleep all night. I hate it at nighttime," said 64-year-old Vonda Gould, an evacuee who braved the storm at a Palm Bay hotel. "We don't know when something's going to come flying through the window. It's very spooky."

In the largest evacuation in state history, some 2.8 million residents ordered inland, and 70,000 residents and tourists moved into shelters.

The storm's slow-motion assault—Frances crawled toward Florida at just 11 kph—came more than a day later than predicted. The western portion of the hurricane's eye crept over parts of the east-central Florida coast Saturday night, but its strongest winds were expected to begin hitting early Sunday.

Earlier, the storm buffeted the Bahamas, killing two people. The storm shattered windows, toppled power lines and flooded neighborhoods in the Bahamas, driving thousands from their homes. The Freeport airport was partially submerged in water.

Frances' arrival came three weeks after Hurricane Charley killed 27 people and caused billions of dollars in damage in southwestern Florida.

Frances was so big that virtually the entire state feared damage from wind and water. Forecasters said the storm would dump 8-12 inches (20-30 cm) of rain, with up to 20 inches (50 cm) in some areas.

In Washington, President George W. Bush declared a major disaster in the counties affected by Frances, meaning residents will be eligible for federal aid.

Four people were hospitalized in Florida after breathing carbon monoxide fumes from a generator that was running in a house. No other injuries were immediately reported.

Some evacuees, frustrated by Frances' sluggish pace, decided to leave shelters Saturday and return later.

Deborah Nicholas dashed home from a Fort Pierce shelter to take a shower, but stayed only a few minutes when the lights started flickering and trees began popping out of the ground. She has slept in a deck chair at a high school cafeteria since Wednesday.

"I'm going stir crazy," Nicholas said. "I'm going to be in a strait-jacket by Monday. I don't know how much longer I can take it. Have mercy."

Residents could take comfort that Frances weakened as it lingered off the coast. Forecasters downgraded it to a Category 2 hurricane as sustained winds receded, down from 233 kph earlier. But the heavy rain forecast still threatened to cause widespread flooding, and the outer bands of the storm packed plenty of punch.

Frances was expected to push across the state as a tropical storm just north of Tampa, weaken to a tropical depression and drench the Panhandle on Monday before moving into Alabama. AP

Taiwanese man survives plunge but kills motorist

TAIPEI—A Taiwanese man survived a suicide bid when he jumped off a 23-story building but killed a woman motorist when he landed on her car beneath, a report said Sunday.

The 44-year-old, identified only by his surname Chang, leapt from the high-rise in southern Tainan city Saturday noon, hitting the compact car which was parked outside, TVBS cable news network said.

Chang only suffered fractures to his feet, but the woman died before emergency services could get her to hospital.

Chang's mother apologized to the victim's grieving family.

"He (my son) wanted to die. He did not but the other person died," she told reporters, adding that her son had a 10-year record of manic depression.

The television station said the victim's family would seek millions of Taiwan dollars in damages while Chang may face charges. AFP

Saddam henchman with $10-M bounty on head captured

BAGHDAD, Iraq—Saddam Hussein's former right-hand man with a $10-million bounty on his head, Izzat Ibrahim al-Douri, was arrested in northern Iraq, an Iraqi defense ministry spokesperson told al-Hurra television on Sunday.

Seventy people were killed or wounded in clashes between the Iraqi national guard and militants trying to prevent al-Douri's capture, an Iraqi official said.

"He had many militants around him who tried to rescue him. Initial reports say there were around 70 people killed or wounded in these clashes," interior ministry spokesperson Col. Adnan Abdelrahman said.

The former vice president "was arrested by the Iraqi national guard in an area between Ad-Dawr and Tikrit. He was in a clinic having a blood transfusion because he had leukemia," he added.

Since Saddam was arrested close to Tikrit on Dec. 13, al-Douri had taken on the role of the Pentagon's most wanted man in Iraq. He was the highest-ranking member of Saddam's government still at large and regarded as the king of clubs in the deck of cards.

US Maj. Neil O'Brien of the Tikrit-based 1st Infantry Division, however, said he could not confirm the report. A US Embassy spokesperson also said he had no information about an arrest.

"There was a major operation around Tikrit and Ad-Dawr and American forces supported by Iraqi civil defense corps members were able to capture Izzat al-Douri," defense ministry spokesperson Saleh Sarhan told the station in a live telephone interview.

Sarhan said al-Douri was now in the hands of the Americans.

Iraqi officials had mistakenly reported al-Douri's arrest several times before.

Late last year, al-Douri's wife and daughter were detained.

Earlier this year, US forces conducted numerous raids in and around the northern city of Samarra in search of al-Douri, who they believed may have been behind the funding and orchestration of insurgent attacks against coalition forces.

In January, American forces arrested four of al-Douri's nephews who they suspected were aiding in moving Saddam's former second-in-command to different locations to avoid capture. AP/AF

THINKING ABOUT YOUR CHILD'S FUTURE

Kumon seeks to make children's dreams attainable by equipping them with the necessary skills to realize their potential. For them to be the future doctors, lawyers, architects, professors, or even nation leaders, their education should be one of the foremost thoughts in our minds. Kumon has helped millions of parents support their child's studies and enable these young ones to reach their goals.

FORMER President Bill Clinton and wife, Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, in a July 26, 2004 photo.

Relaxed Clinton awaits surgery

NEW YORK—Former President Bill Clinton was in good spirits Saturday, walking around his hospital room in street clothes and buoyed by thousands of get-well messages as he awaited heart bypass surgery early this coming week, people close to the family said.

Clinton was expected to undergo surgery as early as Monday but probably Tuesday, said Democratic Party Chairman Terry McAuliffe, who said the former president was "upbeat" when he spoke to him by phone Friday.

"I thanked him for getting the Democrats back on the front page, and he told me that's about as far as he's willing to go," McAuliffe said Saturday. "I said I needed him out on the campaign trail as soon as possible, and he said as soon as he recuperates he'll be ready to go."

He was to undergo triple or quadruple bypass surgery, according to a person close to Clinton who requested anonymity.

Clinton's wife and daughter visited him in the hospital Saturday, and he had received 15,000 get-well messages relayed from the website of his foundation, a spokesperson said. One message posted on the website Saturday read: "I'm having an awfully hard time imagining anything big enough to block a heart as large and generous as yours, but I hope you have the best surgeons in the country working on it."

Another, from a self-described "Reagan Democrat" said: "While I did not vote for President Clinton, nor agreed with a lot of his points of view, I always liked him. ... In March of 2002, I underwent quad bypass surgery, so I know what he will be going through in the coming hours, days, and months. My prayers are with him."

Clinton was admitted to New York Presbyterian Hospital/Columbia on Friday after suffering chest pains and shortness of breath.

The operation is likely to curtail his campaigning for Democratic presidential candidate John Kerry. Clinton had agreed to campaign for Kerry in the two months before the Nov. 2 general election and had already appeared at some Democratic Party events.

Beyond the minimum

AS columnist Belinda Olivares-Cunanan pointed out the other day, businessman Lance Gokongwei's position on the role of business in helping solve the fiscal crisis is the sensible one. "I rather subscribe to the argument of Lance Gokongwei, president of conglomerate JG Summit Corp., who opined that more than the symbolic gesture of donating cash, what is more important is for big businesses to pay their taxes correctly," Cunanan wrote.

At the minimum, Gokongwei is surely right. Paying the right amount of taxes is the least that business firms can do. But is it enough?

There are many, and here we must include numerous businessmen, who think that the fiscal crisis can be solved if only the government gets its act together: that is to say, if new taxes are imposed, if tax collection is improved, if tax evaders are prosecuted, if unnecessary spending is curtailed, if the pork barrel is reduced. In this school of thought, the problem lies with the government precisely because it is a fiscal (not a financial or an economic) crisis. By the same token, the solution lies with the government too, including the use of its resources to force or to encourage companies to pay their taxes correctly.

But there is another school of thought. Many people have begun to think that, for the fiscal crisis to be resolved, extraordinary initiatives must be undertaken: donations to the so-called Bayanihan Fund, the setting aside of a few pesos' worth of text messages a day, energy conservation and other self-imposed austerity measures. In this line of thinking, the fiscal crisis is not simply the problem of the government's. By the same standard, the solution does not lie in the government's hands alone.

It is quite possible that the first approach to the problem would yield the right solution. The President's use of the word "crisis" to describe the government's deteriorating fiscal condition is based more on a political rather than a technical reading of the problem. Using a stricter definition, credit-rating agencies have declined to describe the government's situation as a crisis. In their view, the problem exists, but it has not reached crisis proportions.

But if the first school of thought has the right idea, the central part of the solution remains the imposition of new taxes. The government has proposed eight new tax measures; at least one needs to be passed within the year to convince its creditors and the same credit-rating agencies that what needs to be done is being done.

But it is precisely these new tax proposals that have met the most resistance, not only from the public but even from the administration's own senators. Sen. Ralph Recto, using the powerful metaphor of a leaking faucet to describe the government's fiscal state, proposes that the reduction in the pork barrel is substantial enough to eliminate the need for any new taxes. And Sen. Joker Arroyo believes Malacañang has not adequately explained why the budget deficit has widened dramatically in the first three years of the Arroyo administration.

(Senator Arroyo's opposition has been unusually in temperate, even by the maverick senator's usual standards. He has called Palace and budget officials "tax terrorists," and he insists—in a sort of a Philippine version of Zeno's paradox—that President Macapagal-Arroyo must first accept the blame for the fiscal crisis before she can solve it.)

It is precisely because of this resistance that the second approach to the fiscal crisis seems more and more necessary. There is real value in the amount of money that a Bayanihan Fund can accumulate; there are real savings from individual efforts to conserve energy. But the true significance of the second approach lies in its participatory nature.

Getting the public to accept new taxes, or higher, market-determined electricity rates, is difficult enough when the old questions about corruption or tax avoidance or government waste continue to nag us. But if the rich are brought out of their comfort zone to donate a million here and there, if the middle class buys into the concept of "text donations" (as the jewelry-donating Silliman alumni now propose), if more and more people accept the inconveniences of austerity, then maybe public resistance to the new taxes may soften.

The second approach makes the first doable.

No right to hike taxes unless...

THE BAYANIHAN Fund, to which the people are asked to contribute, is one of the most idiotic ideas to bail the Arroyo administration out of the financial mess it put itself in. Begging for funds for funerals may be all right; but for a government to resort to it so the President's whole family—grandchildren and their nannies included—can go on a free vacation abroad is certainly not. Is this any indication that we are witnessing the funeral of the Arroyo administration?

"Bawal ang magpalimos at magbigay ng limos (Begging and giving alms are prohibited)," huge billboards warn beggars and good Samaritans alike. The proliferation of beggars here is giving us an unsavory image abroad as "a nation of beggars." Now the government itself is confirming that image by begging for contributions to the so-called Bayanihan Fund.

What will the rest of the world think of us? "That the situation is so bad that the business community must cough up with their private funds to bail out the government for its mis-spending of government money?" asked Sen. Aquilino Pimentel Jr. What will the world's leaders think when they meet with President Macapagal-Arroyo and her retinue (she is going on four more state visits this year, which is astonishing for a country that is short of money).

"Tell me, how can you keep your head up high as a Filipino when you hear this government begging for donations to keep itself afloat?" asked former Budget Secretary Salvador Enriquez. "For many years, we have worked to remove the image of the Philippines as the begging bowl of Asia. Now the government itself is nurturing this image. What is worst is that while Filipinos are willing to give, even small amounts, for the sake of the country, many are one in saying that they will not trust this government with this money. Even the ordinary man on the street says this government is so filled with graft and corruption and incompetents that any donation people give will just be wasted."

"Nanakawin lang yan (That will only be

As I See It

stolen," is the common comment.

Of course, the big businessmen in the President's party readily contributed. How could they refuse? Speaker Jose de Venecia, as if conducting an auction, loudly dunned them one by one as they sat cooped up inside the plane to China. And the President herself was watching; it was a matter of pride. The alternative was to jump from the plane.

Anyway, they would get their contribution back in the form of favors from the government, as they always do when they give to a candidate's campaign kitty. And it would be tax deductible, pa. So they don't really lose anything; sikat pa sila. Besides, it is cheaper than paying the correct taxes. What is P1 million compared to the tens of millions of pesos they save through tax evasion? When tax investigators come to audit their books, they can readily tell them with hurt in their voices: "Nag-donate na kami, bakit i-imbitigahan nyo pa kami (We already donated funds, why will you still investigate us)?"

But then, this unkind cut: policemen were also forced to contribute a day's pay to the Fund so their superiors will look good. This means many motorists will have to support the policemen's families for the day.

They tried to do the same thing to the soldiers who turned out brave enough to resist. "Ano kayo, sinusuwerte?" snorted a sergeant. "It is us who die for a pittance, but it is us who will be asked to give up a day's salary while the fat cats continue to enjoy their privileges and perks?"

Many congressmen have offered to donate one month's salary to the Fund. Cabinet members and mayors have issued press releases for their subordinates to cut costs. But hardly anyone has offered to give up his or her privileges and perks. A few senators (Ping Lacson, Fred Lim, Franklin Drilon, Joker Arroyo) have given up their pork barrel allocations but most of the legislators still cling to theirs, although the whole nation wants this corrupt and wasteful system abolished outright.

The offers of donations, conditions for giving up part of their pork, press releases for austerity measures, etc. are all diversionary tactics to prevent the abolition of the pork barrel. For while a legislator's one month's salary is only P35,000, a senator's pork barrel allocation is P200 million a year, while that of a congressman is P65 million a year.

I think this administration and Congress have no moral right to impose even a single peso in new tax unless the pork barrel system—both for members of Congress and the executive department (yes, they, too have pork)—is abolished. They ask the people to pay more, yet, they continue to steal and waste taxpayers' money? What gall.

The government has no moral right to impose new or higher taxes unless it first makes those who rake in millions of pesos—like the religious organizations—pay taxes, too. It may be all right to exempt the religious services, but universities that cater to the rich are business enterprises that should be taxed like all others. Ateneo, La Salle, University of Sto. Tomas, Letran, etc. make oodles of money. Why shouldn't they pay taxes? Iglesia ni Cristo, El Shaddai, Jesus is Lord collect tens of millions of pesos from their followers every week, why shouldn't they pay taxes?

The President has already said she will not tax the Church. I think she has no moral right to ask the ordinary citizens to pay more unless she demands the same of those who can afford to pay more. She has no right to squeeze more out of the people unless she removes the pork from her proposed budget.

Jokers

THERE'S THE RUB

misery is not my first instinct when I hear their complaint, apprehension is. Apprehension was what I felt as well when Mike Arroyo's guests during his birthday bash complained about being separated from hundreds of thousands of pesos of their money to finance Arroyo's favorite charity. It is not merely that Arroyo fanatically subscribes to the motto, "Charity begins at home," it is that businessmen who are fleeced in this way invariably find ways to recover their wool, with interest—that is, by fleecing others in turn, namely the public.

But it's scary how government officials, elective and appointive, seem to be taking the fiscal crisis as an opportunity for one-upmanship or PR, or worse a joke. Joker Arroyo, who is one of the few non-jokers in government, is not joking when he warns of the severity of the oncoming storm and what it would take to avert it. That is not by token "gestures of serving coffee only during meetings, which will amount only to a few thousand pesos [in savings]."

What will avert the crisis is for GMA first of all to admit her part in making it, which is the only way she can reclaim any right to propose to rescue us from it. No contrition, no forgiveness. Certainly, no credibility. GMA is the chief cause of the budget deficit. As Joker points out: "President Arroyo's borrowing binge for three years, 2001 to 2003, was more than the combined borrowings of Presidents Ramos and Estrada for eight years, 1992 to 2000 (italics mine), data for which is available in Sen. Ralph Recto's Ways and Means Committee." Napocor alone has incurred losses amounting to P60 billion.

GMA did manage in the case of Angelo de la

Cruz to portray herself as his savior—no small thanks to a people who could not remember how she became the spokesperson for George W. Bush's war in Iraq, thereby turning Filipino OFWs in the Gulf into fair game for Arab terrorists. She may not do the same thing here—free herself from blame, or make the country forget about it—at the very least because the stakes are high (it is not just the survival of one Filipino at stake, it is that of the nation). At the very most because we do not understand the origins of this problem, we will be nowhere near to solving it.

Which brings us to the second part of the equation: What will avert this crisis is GMA herself leading by example, which is not just giving up her own pork barrel in the form of billions in contingency funds but in putting a lid on her borrowings. As Joker reminds us, Napocor incurred its debts "in compliance of the directive of President Arroyo." Badgering congressmen to give up their salaries, or even their pork barrel, while allowing government corporations to continue to borrow and government financial institutions to give out corporate loans to cronies, is like putting out a pail to catch drops of water from a leaky faucet in the kitchen while doing nothing about a busted pipe in the bathroom.

The crisis won't disappear with GMA and De Venecia soliciting voluntary or involuntary contributions from congressmen and businessmen, or token scrimping and saving. Though while at this, it won't hurt if GMA did as she preached even at this superficial level. How can you be believed when you issue stern warnings against government officials who waste public funds while bringing your family and friends with you on an official trip to China? Surely, this country does not lack for Chinese restaurants, specializing in Peking duck, to bring them to?

What will avert the crisis is nothing less than a wholesale change of government's lifestyle—before the people decide to make a wholesale change in their government again.

Bonuses and kinks

POLITICAL TIDBITSBelinda
Olivares-Cunanan

Like the royal families in other countries, our First Family has to live by this paradigm. I can easily think of a parallel case: Japanese Crown Princess Masako can't travel abroad or do as she pleases because of noblesse oblige. Even her retreating for a month to her parents' countryside estate stirred such a controversy in Japan. In the case of our First Family, the waves part whenever and wherever they enter, but they always have to watch the way they walk. That's how life is—lagging may kapalit.

Doubtless the biggest bonus from GMA's China trip—reportedly it netted close to $1 billion in benefits—was the release by the Chinese government of $100 million to fund the first phase of the $400-million North Railway rehabilitation project, which will connect Caloocan to Clark. Actually this project has been in the pipeline for a while already, but now GMA will move it, as decongesting Metro Manila is top priority with her. As she explained to the INQUIRER months back, if there is a dependable railway to and from the metropolis, people wouldn't mind living outside of it and coming in here just to work, as millions do in other cities abroad.

As pointed out in a previous column, the Chinese commitment to this project was discussed in 2002, during the visit of Li Peng, then chair of the standing committee of China's National People's Congress. It was cemented firmly during the visit of his successor, Wu Bangguo. The official who buttonholed this project was their host, Speaker Jose de Venecia. Work on the North Railway didn't move as fast, however, as it involved relocating some 70,000 families living along railroad tracks—a tough thing to do before the elections. But now that GMA is on top of this project, it should go fast.

There was a kink in the China visit, though: former Tourism Secretary Roberto Pagdanganan was made to sign a tourism agreement two weeks after it was announced that he was being removed from the Department of Tourism and transferred to the Philippine International Trading Corp.

Apparently his successor, Cebu Rep. Ace Durano, didn't want to take his oath on the eve of the China visit, as GMA had wanted him to do. Durano was quoted as saying he preferred to take over only after his confirmation by the Commission on Appointments.

The embarrassment could have been avoided had the Palace delayed Pagdanganan's removal from the DOT a little bit more. After all, the China trip was planned way ahead, and he had just opened the first tourism office in Beijing to cash in on the annual 20 million Chinese tourists overseas.

Many people want to help out in this fiscal crisis, but they don't know how to go about it. Quiet a number want to make sure their donation goes to a worthwhile cause. One sure way is to invest in educating our young. In this connection, there's the Erda Technical Vocational High School in Pandacan, founded by Fr. Pierre Tritz. Here, about 400 students from the poorest families in Metro Manila receive free high school education as well as training in skills they can immediately put to good use in factories and companies after graduation. Over the years, various individuals and corporate donors here and abroad have sponsored the training of Erda students, who are admitted free of tuition. Sponsorship costs P25,000 per student per year.

For this school year, however, seven students don't have any sponsors yet. In the next few days, I'll be running little backgrounders on these students, and if you feel generous, please call Father Tritz or administrator Wilhelmina Martinez at Erda Tech, Tel. No. 564-2608 or 564-1774.

Delay in corrections

THE "CORRECTION BOX" was conceived by the INQUIRER early this year with the view to coming out with the corrections immediately, preferably, the day after it spots the error or its attention is called to it by any party.

Some readers think along the same lines. Thus, when after two days they do not see the corrections to the errors they have reported, they send tracer letters asking for the reason for the delay. One reader even questioned the sincerity of the newspaper in acknowledging its mistakes when the correction he demanded did not see print at all.

Apparently, there have been some misconceptions about the features of the correction box. Let me point out first that it is not a flash-in-the-pan idea that will quietly disappear when nobody is looking or when the space it now occupies is made available to advertisers.

The box will stay in its slot for as long as it is needed. And considering the pressure of editorial deadlines and the frailties of human nature, it may be in for a long haul on Page A4. The day it becomes irrelevant will be a cause for rejoicing in the editorial room.

The INQUIRER takes at face value the letters of the readers about perceived inaccuracies in some of its editorial content. The presumption is, the reader is motivated by noble intentions in going out of his way to scribble a note or call up the newspaper to correct a possible error of fact. While there may be readers who like to point out editorial lapses for the sheer fun of it, they are more the exception rather than the rule.

Verification

Good faith and all, however, the editorial staff makes sure first that the requested correction is justified. "Trust but verify" is the principle that guides the editors in their evaluation of alleged errors in reporting. After all, the INQUIRER is not immune from false leads ("kuryentes," as they are called in the vernacular) that some people, who have nothing better to do in life, like to play on the media.

Verifying mistakes in names, dates and places that are widely known or of recent vintage is easy. A telephone call to resource persons or offices often produces quick results. The newspaper's database of editorial material comes in handy if the correction sought refers to an item that had earlier been reported on. No need to go over old newspaper copies; a few clicks on the computer will make the archive available for review.

If these measures are not adequate, there is always the INQUIRER research staff to lean on for assistance. With their wide repertoire of information sources that they have developed through the years and their familiarity with Google and other search engines in the Internet, the group can promptly validate or disprove claims of factual errors.

As soon as the inaccuracy is confirmed, the proper correction can be immediately made. And if the space in the correction box is insufficient or additional explanation is required, the item can be discussed in a follow-up story or treated separately in the section where the original news reports or articles appeared.

But not all complained errors can be checked with ease or in time to catch the following day's newspaper edition. There are items that require going through old records or seeking out the best person who can state with certainty whether a certain piece of information is accurate or not.

UP records

The verification process becomes tricky if the news report involves Guinness Book-like distinction or prestige, such as titleholders, record-breaking events and unprecedented actions. Being the "most" or the "best" in any field can be a matter of interpretation; it may also depend on the circumstances surrounding the subject of the news report.

It's good if there is a recognized national or international body that validates the records or titles in question. Its comments on the issue will be controlling. But if no such entity exists, the person tasked with evaluating the correction being sought has to make sure his reference materials are really trustworthy.

A case in point is the Aug. 4 story about the youngest Harvard law graduate, Fil-American Kiwi Camara, whose grandfather, quoting Camara's uncle, graduated summa cum laude from UP in 1927 with a perfect 1.0 grade.

The only way to resolve this conflict was to consult the records of UP. Considering the time gap involved (77 years), not to mention the fragility of school records, the verification took time. It was only after 27 days, or last Sept. 1, that the INQUIRER was able to state in its correction box that the honor of having the highest scholastic achievement in UP belongs to Exequiel Sevilla.

Other claims

Then there is the Aug. 12 report about Edilwasif Baddiri being the first full-blooded member of the Tausug ethnic group to be admitted to the Master in Public Administration Program of Harvard University in the United States. The day after that news came out, the newspaper received several letters contesting the distinction given to Baddiri. The letter writers mentioned the names of other Tausugs who, they claim, deserve that honor.

The "protests" called for a thorough investigation of the conflicting claims. Four days after the news report in question came out, the correction box stated that there have been other Tausugs who have not only gained admission to the program but who have earned master's degrees in public administration at the same school. Among them are Amina Rasul who earned her MPA at Harvard in 1999 and Madge Kho who earned hers in 1991.

The delay in making certain corrections cannot be helped in some cases. Accuracy cannot be sacrificed for speed. It would be more embarrassing if, after making a correction, the newspaper corrects itself again because the first correction turned out to be wrong.

HIGH BLOOD

Aurea C. Gonzalez

WE'D also like to know the concerns of the sixtysomething and above, what makes their blood pressure rise or makes them sit back, content that all's well with their world and with themselves. —Ed.

Marriage, family life and the scintillating jewels of our home: four boys and one girl. Prosperity and the delights of travel. Grandchildren.

A graceful path to a satisfying middle age. All these mixed and peppered with personal griefs, disappointments, illnesses; the occasional fury over death of a loved one; and even of war and its atrocities.

Back to the 91-year-old; what makes her tick? What in the living present occupies her mind and time?

She reads and reads. She has outgrown the women's novelists and relaxes now with Grisham and other law and spy writers. For pure mental discipline, she tackles Stephen Hawking and his notes on Newton. Will she survive this heavy stuff?

At home, she attends to mundane duties like the kitchen. She does not cook. She trains. (She is married to a gourmet.) For physical relaxation, she bowls twice a week; an illness stopped this momentarily, but she plans to resume.

She writes short stories for a woman's magazine, love stories, no less. (At 91 years about love? ha, ha!)

She memorizes telephone numbers. She engages in amicable arguments with friends. She laughs a lot when she talks to her sisters on the phone! Silly, says the serious lawyer husband; which makes them laugh more.

Television? She watches NBA, tennis, etc. with her husband till late at night. She enjoys CNN and newspapers. (Pardon me, only the editorials, front-page news, columnists who use a minimum of "I did this," "I went there.")

Does her blood pressure ever rise? What human being is free from this? From assorted problems in life? Worries? Preoccupations? Predicaments that cannot be solved at the moment?

There have been instances in her life when her heart broke and she shed tears of pain, but in spite of ill feelings and sorrows, the path has been clear and bright. She has a multitude of faults. But why brood over them? Rather, she enthuses over the brightness of the way.

After all, she has magnificent buffers around her. A strong, good husband, loving offspring and 16 grandchildren. Should she fall sick, they are there. When she needs this or that, or the where-withal to get them, thank heaven, they are there. Does she cry? Does she laugh? They are there. So why worry, after all, they are always there!

She is married to a man who does not sit in a corner and whispers his needs. He is a perfectionist; therefore, he demands, he criticizes. Although he is generous and kind to a fault, he keeps everybody on his toes. She cannot afford to be lazy, or old, or apathetic. Yes, he keeps her on the ball as they say. Thank heaven for him.

One more thought for the patient reader. All through my life, all through the 91 years of it, I have held to the Divine Hand. The Hand with the nail mark on it. The Hand that signaled the parting of the Red Sea; that touched the forehead of Mother Mary and the apostles. The Hand that touched my forehead when, first, I was conscious of life. And, heaven willing, the Hand that will keep touching me and I will keep holding on to till the end.

Aurea C. Gonzalez, 91, is a retired teacher from St. Theresa's College who still writes love stories.

Perils of austerity

THE LONG VIEW

creasing number of public servants who'd abuse their positions, rather than engage in entrepreneurship, to improve their finances.

So when officials come up with the idea of giving up their salaries, whether daily or monthly, in the name of the public good, I'm not convinced it makes any sense at all. Assuming an employee deserves the job he is in—unless something glaring manifests itself to the contrary—and is doing his best, what right have you to ask or require him to give up his hard-earned wages?

The public good? Presumably, government workers—being in the public sector to begin with—are supposed to be already attending to that although earning peanuts for doing so. The spirit of national solidarity? Of shared sacrifice? Is that what's required?

I wonder if what we need is sacrifice. We could do with a lot more wisdom and a greater sense of responsibility. Put it this way: it's very easy to say we must give things up, when what is called for is spending what we have more wisely. Doing away with snacks, reducing the number of official trips, trying to look gallant by cutting down salaries and allowances don't seem to me the way to go because they don't get to the root of the problem, which is: too much expenditure on the wrong things, but not enough on the right things.

The rich should not be spending less, they should be spending more: but on Filipino goods and services. The government should not be spending less, but spending more: on infrastructure, nutrition and education; instead of armaments. And government officials should also steal less. Austerity will lead to less turon for the rank and file, but the bosses will still have their steak. Congressmen who give up a month's wages only make you wonder how seriously they take their job, if they don't even care to collect what they've supposedly earned. Giving up the pork barrel will not, in any way, eliminate the evil in the system, which is not the fixed allocations for local communities but the illegal commissions and percentages that leave too little of the appropriated funds for the project they are intended for.

Austerity only aids those already skilled in dodging the law, and makes accountability more difficult. The calls for austerity, as they stand, will not make things better for the many, they will make things worse. If you ban office parties, for example, several things will happen. First of all, you are depriving Filipinos of income and jobs: were every government office to stop commemorating the foundation of their office, or people prohibited from celebrating their birthdays, there would be a corresponding drop in the income of people who make party food and that sort of thing. Add to this the extreme unpleasantness arising from the fact that life is already tough, and by law you can't even have a little fun—what sort of life is this? A sort of grim desire to have everyone live in communal misery, with everyone planting and eating camote and breaking wind on each other's face—in other words, the rigid inhumanity of a Socialist paradise.

The perils of austerity can be seen in snacks having been banned from the Palace, while it turns out the government can't even accept, much less properly allocate, donations that many Filipinos want to make to reduce the national debt. There are many who want to help the country, but there are officials who are too busy waging a crusade against snacking instead of doing the homework necessary to enable the patriotic pitch in.

Comments welcome at www.quezon.ph

THE BLOODY siege of a Russian school by Chechnya militants, which ended with more than 340 people—mostly children—killed and scores wounded, would doubtless strengthen the candidacy of US President George W. Bush over his rival, Massachusetts Sen. John Kerry. A pre-siege and pre-Republican convention poll by Time magazine showed Bush piling up a double-digit lead over Kerry—the biggest in the areas of anti-terrorism, where 57 percent chose him to 36 percent for Kerry, and as commander in chief of the US forces, where 53 trusted him versus 41 for Kerry. The Russian siege has doubtless scared even more US voters toward Bush, as they realize that international terrorism is far from receding. Doubtless they'd fall for the campaign line that here's a leader who would rather fight terrorism abroad than in their shores.

The 40 percent increase that the Energy Regulatory Commission allowed the National Power Corp. on its generation rates is only half of the increase applied for. But for the cash-strapped firm, it's a partial rectification. In May 2002 President Macapagal-Arroyo imposed a cap on what Napocor could recover from the consumers for its onerously priced contracts with independent power producers 12 years before. That cap led Napocor to lower revenues and rising costs of production, jacking up its losses from P4 billion in 1998 to P34 billion in 2002. The alternative would have been for the government to shoulder its interest payments; but the latter is broke, hence the green light to increase rates.

I'm sure the Arroyo family shouldered its own travel expenses; and these were not included as expenses of the First Couple who, as part of the official delegation in the state visit to China, had their bill on the Chinese government, as protocol dictates. But the timing of the "family vacation" was unfortunate, as it came back-to-back with GMA's call for austerity and a cut on official trips. But the Arroyo family should just charge this painful lesson to experience, and from it learn the principle of noblesse oblige.

THIS is neither a thesis of accomplishments nor a tiresome recital of virtues. Call it a commentary, a whim, an impulse to let others view what I consider a self-centered adventure.

If in the reading, some moral lessons are gained, so much the better. But let the young readers make their own mark on their own era, and let the not so young revive and relive their own memories.

How does one feel at 91 years of age?

To say the least—and let me generalize—life has been and still is interesting.

Does it mean that my life—or anybody's life—is a bed of roses? Precisely. Remember: roses come with thorns. Existence is engrossing because it is interspersed with things and events sweet and sour; agreeable and undesirable—what we call the ups and downs of life.

We must not waste time thinking about age, because whether we like it or not, come it will.

Let us instead look at it—and life in general—as a challenge: to tackle, to work on, to enjoy, to be outraged about, to laugh about and, maybe, to shed bitter tears on.

If stories of the past creep into this narration, understand I do not suggest that we live in the past. But then, neither must we belittle our remembrances and the influences and directions that shaped our character. What are these?

A God-fearing family with loving parents and siblings.

A beloved school—the world of education that made my youth one happy experience, leading to an epiphany of pleasures that found love for the written word, making books friends for life. First and foremost was the Bible; then came Shakespeare, Dickens, Shelley and dozens of others.

Friendship? A lasting and marvelous blessing that extends to the end of life.

Teaching? Complete personal satisfaction of my mind. "A teacher is forever."

Days of courtship and love? Topics too precious for public consumption.

I DON'T know about you, but I don't approve of the epidemic of giving up salaries, which seems to have infected government officialdom. Salaries are a serious thing. Unless you quit or you're fired, you should get your salary. A person works and does his job, he should get paid: he shouldn't be asked to "volunteer" his hard-earned wages for donation.

There was a time when government salaries were really rather good. Not anymore. There are many reasons for the decline in government salaries (among them, the continuing subdivision of our country into more and more local units which in turn lead to an ever-increasing number of patronage positions and corresponding increase in the ranks of national government employees) but the fact is, government work doesn't offer the best compensation today. Add to this the perennial problem in the public service—employees not getting paid on time, and you wonder why people turn corrupt?

I've had my share of dealing with people in the government service. While in terms of skills they may lag far behind their counterparts in the private sector, the vast majority of them are simply trying to do their work tolerably well, aiming for what we all want to achieve: a little comfort and security, a promotion here and there, and a secure retirement at the end of it all. God knows the system has made this more and more impossible for the honest civil servant.

Rene Saguisag has said that public service—particularly in the higher levels—demands of the public servant personal wealth to begin with, if one is to avoid corruption. He is right.

What is worse is that public service has also steadily demanded of its lower-level workers an entrepreneurial spirit. And this they have to embrace if they are to keep their heads—and those of the members of their families—financially above water. Not everyone can be a successful entrepreneur, and you have to wonder at the toll sidelines take on the public service. But again there will be an ever-in-

Gov't has no moral stature to demand higher taxes

ENERGY Secretary Vince Perez has asked motorists to impose upon themselves a "car-less day." This car-less day is on top of the MMDA enforced color-coding scheme that bars vehicles from the metropolis a day each week depending on their plate numbers.

Perez says the measure should help a little in easing the fiscal and energy crisis the country is facing. We have no quarrel with Perez's bright idea, except that the government should lead by example. We, the taxpayers, do not feel that government has been putting our money to good use. Thus, how can this administration compel us to pay more taxes, including the much-criticized tax on text messages?

It would be nice to see Perez and other government officials taking the MRT and LRT, instead of plowing through traffic every day with their and their bodyguards' gas-guzzling, road-gorging SUVs. By doing this, government officials would be on the moral high ground when they ask the already suffering people to tighten their belts some more.

But alas!

When government officials play with toys for the big boys, like the latest models of SUVs bearing red plates and gassed up by taxpayers' money, how can they ever justify taxing text messages on the premise that texting is a luxury, therefore subject to excise tax?

Never! They can never justify President Macapagal-Arroyo's new tax measures.

Provide basis for your assumptions

POPULATION control advocates contend that the Philippines is becoming overcrowded, that our resources—both natural and man-made—are fast becoming depleted and that the time is very near when Filipinos will be too numerous to provide for their basic needs. The problem is, they do not provide any basis for their contentions.

The population control advocates must show how long it will take to fill up the vast open countryside with people. They have to prove that the money lost due to corruption or the funds allotted to lawmakers as pork barrel are not enough to provide all Filipino children with good education. They have to prove that Filipino couples are so irresponsible as to go into marriage without making sure that they have the means to provide for the children God will give them.

They have to prove that it is the nation's interest they have in mind and not the interest of big multinational businesses which are here to sell their contraceptive products.

Don't reward cheating gasoline stations

THIS is in reaction to the news report titled "44 gas stations found duping buyers" by Tina Santos in the Inquirer's Aug. 31 issue. The report said, "the gasoline stations were found to be deducting more than the 'tolerable' 10 milliliters for every 10 liter bucket of the oil products."

Can this be an accurate measure? Gasoline is a very volatile liquid and it can only tolerate 0.1 percent volume deviation using the calibration bucket. Do gasoline pumps have better than 0.1 percent accuracy (to allow such tight tolerance using open bucket)? As a consumer of gasoline, I will be very happy if the report is accurate. Kindly verify.

On the other hand, fines of P400 and P800 for first and second offenses are too low, if these numbers are correct. The government should not make cheating or negligence rewarding for gasoline stations.

Who cares for the elderly?

I HAVE been urging my parents, who are both 78 years old, to take advantage of their senior citizens' discount privilege, particularly in the purchase of medicines; but their medical booklets, issued in 1994 yet, have remained blank.

My mother was hospitalized recently. After she was discharged, I went to one of the outlets of a well-established drugstore with a nationwide network to buy her medicines. I tried to use her senior citizens' card, only to be told that it couldn't be accepted because the prescription did not contain the generic names, address, sex and age of the senior citizen. Therefore I needed to have a letter of authorization from her. I had to buy a few of her medicines without the 20 percent discount. Immediately after that, I had to look for the generic names of her medicines because it would take a half day to go to the hospital (to have the prescription rewritten) from our place.

A week after, I brought back my mother to the hospital for a check-up and asked her doctor to include the generic names of the medicines. But this time the doctor forgot to write down my mother's age. When we returned to the drugstore, we were told that since the prescription did not carry information on her age, we could not avail ourselves of the senior citizens' discount.

I did not want to argue with the drugstore's staff about the authorization letter. I instead told them that we could just write down the age right there. But I was told that only the doctor can do that.

My mother was with me at that time and she certainly looks in her 70s. But they would not accept that. It must be the doctor who must write down her age in the prescription slip. My husband tried to reason out with the manager, to no avail.

I know that the drugstore's staff were just doing their job. But couldn't they be flexible on certain cases? Must they wait for an order? From whom? The drugstore owners? From the Office of Senior Citizens Affairs? From the Department of Trade and Industry? From the Department of Social Welfare and Development? Or from the Department of Health?

I asked for the telephone number of the OSCA national office from directory assistance, only to be told that the numbers they have are no longer working numbers. I called the OSCA office in Bacoor, Cavite, but no one there knew the telephone number of the OSCA main office.

To whom do we turn to then if senior citizens are deprived of the privileges they so justly deserve?

Now I know why my mother's medical booklet remains blank after all these years.

Disturbing ignorance

THE LETTER of Elpi Cuna (PDI, 8/20/04) evades the issues and only exposes a disturbing ignorance of what electricity service is all about.

Cuna should know that "only prudent, reasonable and necessary costs are recoverable after audit." The Supreme Court's P30-billion refund order and the Court of Appeals' disallowance of Meralco's rate increase (disguised as rate unbundling) are clear applications of this principle.

Cuna ignores the fact that "smaller franchises charge far lower rates than Meralco." Private distribution utilities in San Fernando and Dagupan charge residential customers P4.809/kWh and P4.696/kWh, respectively; electric cooperatives in Benguet and Ilocos Sur charge P4.4154/kWh and P4.3942/kWh. Meralco charges an average rate of P6.1341/kWh.

Cuna's defense of Meralco raises even more serious questions. Because of my "selective amnesia," he writes, I failed "to consider other components such as, generation, transmission and universal charges." Meralco's generation charge in the decision reversed by the Court of Appeals is P3.40/kWh, derived from the Napocor's selling price of P2.12/kWh and the P4.21/kWh of the Lopez-owned IPPs. If Meralco bought all its power from Napocor, the pass-on cost of generation would be at least P1.2829/kWh cheaper at only P2.12/kWh. Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile has proved that Meralco at one time paid the Lopez-owned First Gas the equivalent of P18/kWh. How will Cuna and Meralco explain this procurement of expensive and excess power from a Lopez-owned generation company?

Meralco walked away from a 10-year power supply agreement with Napocor (at P2.40/kWh) in favor of First Gas (at P4.30/kWh), leading to a P20-billion penalty Meralco must now pay Napocor with money Meralco wants to collect from us.

Cuna claims our consumer advocacy "drive(s) investors away." If these investors are those who make a return on "ghost capital," are more profit than service oriented and are not beneath self-dealing at the expense of the consumers, we are better off if they stay away.

It is not my "objective to demolish Meralco." I want to strengthen it by keeping its management honest, efficient, transparent and fair to its captive customers. If the Lopez management fails that criteria, we will simply have to try harder for Meralco's over 3 million customers.

As to putting Meralco in a "bad light" and creating "a strain on our (their) finances," the former is a consequence of Meralco's present behavior as a utility; the latter, of its management practices now subject of several ongoing regulatory hearings.

My "unsolicited advice" to Cuna: attend the public hearings—even take the witness stand if you have anything worth hearing—understand the electricity industry, and know that it is a service before it is a business.

IRA suspension prejudicial to poor

WE, members of Empowering Civic Participation in Governance, an NGO that advocates participatory local governance and electoral reform, are fully behind the stand of the League of Provinces in the Philippines (LPP) and the Union of Local Authorities in the Philippines (ULAP) opposing the proposal to temporarily suspend the distribution of the internal revenue allotment due local government units.

The proposal violates both Article X, Section 6 of the 1987 Constitution and Section 286 of the Local Government Code of 1991, which safeguard the automatic release of the LGUs' just share of national taxes. The Supreme Court, in fact, has already decided on this issue in two previous cases.

It must also be pointed out that the proposal could paralyze or undermine the basic service delivery and other operations of a substantial number of LGUs, especially barangays, that remain dependent on their IRA. Because the poor and the marginalized are often dependent on their LGUs for social services, they could be the first to suffer from the suspension of the IRA.

Pampanga exec urges strict quarry tax watch

CITY OF SAN FERNANDO—How much revenue has Pampanga received or stands to get from the quarry industry, which has thrived from the sand that Mt. Pinatubo spewed out in its 1991 eruptions?

Vice Gov. Joseller Guiao said that like the lahar canyons in upland Porac or in sandy reaches of rivers in the lowlands of the province, the answer to this question was "gray."

Guiao said the provincial board had no idea if the income from quarrying alone could sustain Pampanga as the national government grappled with huge budget deficit and debt problems.

He said provincial treasurer Vergel Yabut had yet to submit the daily collection report that the board demanded two weeks ago.

The Provincial Mining Regulatory Board, whose members were summoned by the board a month ago, admitted to having no direct hand in monitoring quarry operations and income.

But Guiao said officials in charge of the quarry operations could arrive at an estimate by counting the number of trucks hauling sand out of Pampanga daily.

By determining the actual number of trucks and multiplying this with the P300 tax per truckload, the board can estimate the daily income of the provincial government from quarrying, he said.

The provincial government, the town governments and villages of Bacolor, Lubao, Sta. Rita, Porac, Mabalacat and Mexico divide the amount on a 30-30-40 percent sharing scheme.

On Friday, Guiao explored the possibility of doing the truck counting through the computerized toll collection and traffic management systems of Manila North Tollways Corp. (MNTC).

MNTC, which started rehabilitating the highway in February 2003, will start operating the North Luzon Expressway in December.

MNTC president Jose de Jesus said a memorandum of agreement with the provincial board was possible since the company was also in the lookout for overloaded vehicles.

In 1999 when the state-owned Natural Resources Development Corp. was supervising the collections, the agency reported an income of P150.45 million from 509,805 truckloads of sand.

In a month alone, as in August 2001, the NRDC collected P8.034 million. In contrast, the provincial government, which reclaimed control over the quarry collections through a court battle, earned only P8 million from January to October last year. Tonette Orejas, PDI Central Luzon Desk

Maguindanao doctor honored

COTABATO CITY—For making extra steps in helping improve the lives of poor people afflicted with eye diseases, a Maguindanao physician received honor from the Department of Health and a multinational drug firm.

Ophthalmologist Dr. Kadil Sinolinding Jr. was named one of five medical practitioners and health workers all over the country that DOH and Pfizer Philippines recognized as Heroes for Health.

Sinolinding's project that earned him the award is the Vision 20/20 Cataract Charities Project that he organized in 1998.

"It was a special initiative of the Kabacan Polymedic Cooperative Hospital to address the alarming rate of avoidable blindness," Sinolinding, 39, recalled in an interview.

This project offers affordable and sustainable services in Cotabato, Maguindanao, Lanao del Sur, Sulu and Basilan.

He said the project also contributed in the reduction of the prevalence of blindness by 0.7 percent through the increased Cataract Surgical Rate.

Since 1998, the project has already served thousands of poor patients suffering from cataract, glaucoma, squint, pterygium and other eye ailments.

Citing his records, Sinolinding said the project had initiated the screening of about 35,000 patients, conducted 3,300 cataract and 2,200 other eye operations.

Zambales folk oppose quarrying of stones

STA. CRUZ, Zambales—Enraged by the supposed environmental damage caused by mining activities, residents of three villages in this town have started waging battle to end all forms of quarrying here.

In a petition, various groups from the villages of Lucapon, Tubo Tubo North and Tubo Tubo South denounced the digging of white clay, red stone, limestone and several other open pit mining operations that, they said, had endangered their lives and property.

"We greatly suffer from the harmful effects of mining activities being done in our villages. These (operations) have gradually destroyed our houses, farms and roads," they said.

They also blamed the quarrying for floodwaters that swamped their crops during rainy seasons, resulting in huge losses for farmers and their families.

Rey Biglain, Zambales organizer of the Pambansang Kalipunan ng mga Magsasaka (PKMM), said mining in this town were disrupting the lives of people living in the mine and quarry sites.

He said the garbage and mud dug out of the quarry sites were dumped in nearby rivers, ponds and swamps, affecting quality of water in their communities.

"The residents fear for their lives and properties that have been threatened by the reckless quarrying in their places. We demand that these activities be stopped to bring our lives back to normal," Biglain said.

But Thelma Valiente, records officer of the provincial environment and natural resources office, said their records showed that no quarry operator had been operating in the town since June.

Valiente said only two persons applied for permits to quarry white clay in Lucapon, but their permits had already expired in June.

Salary delay plagues casual workers

CASUAL and contractual employees in Oriental Mindoro have not received salaries since July.

When they do, the amount will be reduced under the new contract that they signed, the INQUIRER learned from employees, who requested anonymity.

Those who used to receive P180 per day will get P150 and those who used to get P150 will now receive only P130 a day.

In the City of Calapan, employees who were paid P190 per day before will now be getting P180.

Contractual employees have complained that under the new contract they signed, P1,000 will be deducted.

Palawan teachers and Puerto Princesa City employees also claimed that they had not yet received their salaries since June.

Puerto Princesa administrator Agustin Rocamora said the problem was due to the delay in the release of the Internal Revenue Allotment from the national government—the first time in years.

In Laguna, government employees said their per diems and allowances were delayed by 15 days or, sometimes, by one month to three months.

Norito Cabotaje, officer-in-charge of the Philippine Information Agency based in Calamba City, said government employees in the province had appealed for an across-the-board increase of P3,000 in monthly salaries.

Although government employees got their salaries on time, these were no longer enough to help them meet basic needs due to rising prices, Cabotaje said.

Quezon, Sorsogon and Albay government employees, however, have not raised any complaints on salary delays, according to government information officials.

Joseph Perez of the Department of Agrarian Reform noted that they were sometimes even paid in advance.

In Ligao City, budget officer Rosalia Boquiron said they had no problem in the release of salaries and benefits because of cost-saving measures they had adopted.

Chinoy traders in shootout in Butuan

BUTUAN CITY—Two members of a wealthy Filipino-Chinese family here were engaged in a shootout in a busy commercial district on Thursday.

Senior Supt. Efren Anggo, city police chief, said they were now rushing against time to reconcile brothers Johnny Dy and Lorenzo to prevent each party from resorting to violent retaliatory acts.

Anggo said the brothers, scions of a rich Chinese trader engaged in construction, export and real state business, are known to maintain each other's private armies.

Prior to the shootout, Lorenzo allegedly ransacked a family-owned hardware being managed by Johnny. Johnny, who was slightly wounded in the stomach during the shootout, said the incident was sparked by a long-running family feud. Franklin Caliguid, PDI Mindanao Bureau

Pampanga board OKs NLEX toll hike plan

By Tonette Orejas
PDI Central Luzon Desk

CITY OF SAN FERNANDO—The provincial board on Friday let down its opposition to the plan of Manila North Tollways Corp. (MNTC) to raise toll fees at the North Luzon Expressway by 600 percent in December.

Eleven of the 13 board members supported the controversial rate adjustment after they heard the presentation of MNTC president Jose de Jesus during a meeting here.

Board member Nestor Tolentino, who opposed the plan and called for its investigation, left before De Jesus began his presentation. Board member Lilia Pineda was absent.

"Subsequent adjustments (in rates) will be smaller" after the initial 600 percent increase," said De Jesus, himself a Kapampangan.

The company, largely owned by the Lopez family, will start collecting P2.49 per kilometer when it takes over management and operations of the 83-km NLEX in three months. The current charge is P0.52 per km for Class 1 (cars and light vehicles), P1.04 for Class 2 (buses, mini buses), and P1.55 for Class 3 (trucks and trailers).

The second increase, coming after two years, will be 4 percent lower, while the third up to the fifth adjustments will be 15 percent higher. A 6-percent increase is planned for the sixth round.

The increases will be spread over 10 years when MNTC is expected to have fully paid the loan to its creditors, De Jesus said. It will operate the NLEX until 2030.

Non-government groups

While the board members took a change of heart, leaders of nongovernment organizations insisted on finding ways to reduce the costs of traveling at the NLEX.

Tootsie Herrera of Nutrilinc said the state-owned Philippine National Construction Corp., which has been operating the NLEX for 30 years, should defer getting its 6-percent share from MNTC revenues.

The rates could then be decreased and not passed on to motorists and commuters, the NGO leaders said.

The board has yet to hold a public hearing on that issue. Showing a graph, De Jesus said the next adjustments would be minimal.

The rehabilitated NLEX, which links 22 provinces in Northern and Central Luzon to Metro Manila, brings many benefits, De Jesus said.

Vehicles can save between 95 centavos and P5.03 for every kilometer, he said, citing results of a study by the University of the Philippines.

Travel time, he said, could be cut by half an hour and with low incidence of road traffic accidents.

He said bus companies had no reason to increase fare because of the savings and opportunities in plying the road frequently.

The new NLEX would boost regional tourism, employment, economic growth and land values, he added.

De Jesus shot down the suggestion of Board member Tarcicio Halili to spread the toll increases over a longer period by extending the MNTC contract for 30 more years.

After noting the controversy over Philippine International Air Terminal Co. (Piatco) and the Ninoy Aquino International Airport Terminal 3 project, De Jesus said foreign investors and lenders were looking at how the government was treating MNTC.

"They're looking at the importance of honoring contracts," he told Halili.

The MNTC loan, he said, carried no government guarantee. The P11.7-billion project cost ballooned to P18.3 billion, but the P6.6-billion increment due to peso devaluation, loan interest and other financing factors was not included in the base toll rate.

MNTC, De Jesus said, was expecting a return of 13.92 percent in investments.

Economics

Much throughout the meeting, the board members showed more interest on the economic benefits of the restored highway than on the toll rates.

Vice Gov. Joseller Guiao said De Jesus made "convincing" explanations. The doubts and even resistance to the toll increase were largely due to lack of an information campaign, he said.

But he said the board's support for the project did "not necessarily" mean that it would no longer protest against the project.

"What we want is to cushion the impact (of the toll fee increase) on the public," Guiao said.

Gov. Mark Lapid said he was still studying the plan and would only arrive at a decision after consultations with various sectors.

De Jesus told the INQUIRER that he would defend the toll increase plan before the House of Representatives during an inquiry called by Pampanga Rep. Anna York Bondoc today.

Senate, House lawmakers feast on pork barrel

The procurement budget includes the pork barrel of senators and congressional representatives. Going by Andaya's estimate, about P4 billion, or a fifth of the P20 billion allocated for pork this year, was likely lost to corruption.

But this may be an understatement.

Web of corruption

In 1998, former Finance and Budget Secretary Salvador Enriquez estimated that as much as 45 percent of pork funds went to "commissions," particularly transactions involving medical supplies and educational materials.

The kickbacks from infrastructure projects, which are traditionally more expensive, ran up to 30 percent of the total project cost, he said.

In 2001, Enriquez asserted that only about 60 percent of government funds went to the implementation of development projects and activities. The balance lined the pockets of a "web of conspirators" that, he said, were "difficult to pinpoint."

Following Enriquez's estimate, the bribes paid from pork funds this year would be in the range of P8 billion of the P20 billion earmarked for pork.

One veteran legislator says that congressmen tend to be more tempted to accept commissions from pork barrel projects than senators. That's because they have to worry about pleasing their constituents, he says.

Beware of Ping

"Contractors give me money, around 5 percent of the project cost, because they know I need it," says the congressman. "I don't demand, but I accept what they give me. I need it to help my constituents. This is common practice. It will be difficult to name a colleague who does not benefit from these projects."

As a rule, contractors are careful in dealing with senators.

Sen. Panfilo "Ping" Lacson says many contractors have approached him to ask how big a cut he wants from his pork barrel projects. But that may not have been a wise move, since Lacson, who has made a study of the pork barrel system, has filed charges with the Ombudsman against people who, he says, had hands that were greasy with pork money.

In 2002, Lacson spent P147 million of his P150 million in pork funds for projects that included building farm-to-market roads and supplying water to some towns. At least two of those projects, however, prompted him to file graft cases against two members of his own staff, as well as against a DPWH regional director, a district engineer and a municipal mayor.

Who gets what

According to Lacson, these people made money from the transactions, which made the government lose millions of pesos in the process.

Last year, the senator announced that he was giving up his P200-million pork barrel. He not only urged his colleagues at the Senate to do the same but also called for the abolition of pork.

Lacson estimates that only less than half of the taxpayers' money actually goes to projects. He figures the breakdown of the kickbacks of the project proponents and implementers is something like this: 20 percent, or the lion's share, to the legislator who identified the project; 14 percent to the contractor; 10 percent to the district engineer and other DPWH officials; 5 to 10 percent to the governor or mayor; 2 percent to the barangay captain; and 2 percent goes to the Commission on Audit official, who is supposed to be the watchdog of the people's money.

Even the billboards that advertise the projects and their proponents are overpriced, says Lacson.

A big-time contractor, who handles the public works projects of senators and congressmen, confirms the continuing practice of legislators drawing kickbacks from pork. But he gives a different kickback breakdown: legislator, 5 to 10 percent; DPWH, 5 to 10 percent; DBM, one percent; COA, 0.5 percent.

The contractor says the amounts have gone down slightly because the payment of the VAT or value-added tax, a stipulation of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, has eaten into the usual share of legislators and DPWH personnel from pork. The VAT accounts for 10 percent of the project cost.

A senator points to dredging, asphalt overlays, and farm-to-market roads as the most corruption-ridden infrastructure projects.

"There is simply no way to monitor how well these are implemented," says the senator. "If they tell you they will dredge x cubic meters, who will check where the hell that number of cubic meters went? The same with asphalt overlay. Whether it is one centimeter or 10 inches, nobody knows."

Another contractor adds that the public will never even know how many times a certain project has been approved for repair by how many agencies.

Decisions for sale

A Commission on Audit insider confirms auditors partake of payoffs, but clarifies that the state auditing agency's total share is bigger than many assume.

"Decisions (of auditors) are really for sale," says the insider. "You have the inspector who does the after-project report and gets 0.5 percent of the pork. You have the director who gives his opinion or approves the report. And you go up the ladder. For the COA, that must be about 10 percent to 15 percent of the pork all in all. It's a small price to pay for politicians when you think of the possibility of going to court."

A 1998 PCIJ study showed that the biggest kickbacks of legislators come from the purchase of medical supplies and educational materials funded by the Countrywide Development Fund and the Congressional Initiative Allocation.

With such purchases, grease money can take up 40-65 percent of project cost. In comparison, commissions from infrastructure projects ranged from 12 percent to 20 percent.

Lawmakers get half of the cut as soon as the deal is struck; the balance, upon the issuance by the DBM of the Special Allotment Release Order (SARO) and/or the Notice of Cash Allocation (NCA). The SARO gives the implementing agency the authority to contract goods and services, while the NCA is an assurance that funds for the project are already available in the implementing agency's bank account.

Legislators, however, do not have a monopoly of the largesse from pork barrel projects.

One PCIJ study tracing the flow of pork, for instance, indicates that heads of implementing agencies get 10 to 12 percent of total project cost upon issuance of the SARO/NCA. Budget personnel are allotted one to 2 percent "to expedite the release" of funds to the implementing agency.

Barangay chairs' share

After the bidding and during the execution of projects by the contractors, local officials are given their share, too: 7 percent to the mayor and 3 percent to the barangay captain, all paid after the issuance of the necessary permits.

During the Estrada administration, kickbacks from various items due to overprice, nondistribution, or cash conversion (in the case of National Food Authority or NFA rice for distribution) reached as high as 50 percent of total pork funding.

A congressional staff member also recalls: "The rice subsidy was the favorite of many congressmen because they could give away just a few and then the rest they would then sell to rice traders. That became rampant until finally it was stopped because too many legislators could no longer explain where much of the rice was going."

Before the practice was halted, congressmen had poured P636.5 million of their pork into the rice subsidy programs in 2001. The amount accounted for 40 percent or the biggest share of the first tranche—amounting to P1.62 billion—of the Priority Development Assistance Fund, or the PDAF, released that year.

But another congressional staff member says legislators found a way to go around this. Soon, the favorite pork project of wily lawmakers became funding "local government unit capability-building"—which could be "almost anything," says the staff member.

From 33 percent of the first tranche of the PDAF in 2001, the share of these types of projects leapt to 60 percent of the second tranche of the facility that very year.

School books

Often, the project involved the distribution of educational materials, which, with the help of local government officials, could easily be faked.

"The money could look used up even if there wasn't anything distributed," the congressional employee says. "All you need is the cooperation of the local executive."

This scheme remains popular. But lawmakers, contractors, and government regulators talk of different percentages and parameters, and give varying justifications for the practice.

Allegations of anomalies attending pork barrel projects have prompted the DBM to limit the funds' use to areas that are less prone to corruption, like scholarships and medical assistance. The DBM under the Arroyo administration has thus prohibited the use of pork funds to buy NFA rice, medicines, and textbooks and supplementary materials.

In 2003, Congress appended a special provision in the General Appropriations Act allowing its members to use a maximum of 10 percent of their PDAF to procure rice and other basic commodities from the NFA. Such authority was included by President Macapagal-Arroyo among the items for conditional implementation in her veto message.

Although spared from direct veto, the disbursement of funds to buy NFA rice required that appropriate guidelines first be drawn up.

Modus operandi

Meanwhile, contractors say that while they are now wary of approaching Lacson, not all senators are above cutting deals with them. Unlike their colleagues in the House, members of the Senate are more discreet, say contractors and Senate insiders.

After a brief casual meeting, negotiations for commissions are couched through coordinators, usually the senator's children, sibling, chief of staff, or project manager, says a contractor. Some congressmen adopt the same modus operandi.

The children of a former senator were said to be part of their father's multimillion-peso gravy train. According to some contractors, they committed projects and accepted the commissions on behalf of the senator.

One contractor recalls advancing P5 million to the ex-senator's son for a P50-million project. When the project didn't push through, the contractor asked for either a refund of his "earnest money" or another project. The senator's son kept the money and the contractor was given another project.

The contractor says there are also cases where a legislator's close aide would cut a deal for himself without his boss' knowledge. The chief of staff of a senator known for turning down commissions, for example, once asked a contractor for a sports utility vehicle.

Payoff time

But the aide failed to deliver the promised contract. The contractor, who had made sure the vehicle remained registered in his name, took back the P1.3-million car.

A Congress insider says some contractors are asked for commissions by the legislator's staff members who assist them. In some instances, the contractors voluntarily hand the staff "tips." And sometimes the liquidation of funds is padded.

The insider says a few chiefs of staff band together and share tips on how to make commissions.

Contractors say they make up for the bribes by ensuring that these are covered by the over-price in project estimates. Some contractors also ignore project specifications to ensure bigger profit margins.

Once an understanding about a project is reached, the lawmaker instructs a member of his staff to write the head of the Senate finance committee or the House appropriations committee to identify the projects. The letter is forwarded to the DBM and the implementing agency.

For public works projects, the contractor then goes to the DPWH regional director with the legislator's letter. He proceeds to the engineering group, which prepares the specifications of the projects based on the contractor's requirement. After this, a bidding notice is announced through the newspapers and the contractor with the legislator's letter is expected to "win" the award.

Except for the amount of funds at the senators' disposal, transactions involving the pork barrel of congressmen follow almost the same pattern.

Unlike in the Senate, though, suppliers and contractors openly trawl the Batasan complex, especially when the SAROs and the NCAs are issued. Some of them seem to feel so at home at the House that they can be seen cooling their heels in the session hall or bantering with Congress personnel.

The same suppliers and contractors also visited the congressman's office carrying bulky bags or envelopes.

Says the staff member: "You'd know right away if it was payoff time. The money would be inside an envelope or bag. Once the (supplier or contractor) came out, the envelope would be gone or the bag would suddenly look flat. And then we'd suddenly have free merienda."

Midair pledging session ...

Macapagal-Arroyo on her China visit last week.

But most of the businessmen whom De Venecia had touched up for donations while they were on the plane carrying the presidential party from Beijing to Xi'an City were not smiling, feeling they had been put in a situation where they could not refuse.

A businessman on the flight told the INQUIRER that, while De Venecia's effort to help the cash-strapped government was laudable, the response of the passengers was not exactly voluntary.

He said the Speaker approached passengers row by row and "suggested" how much they should give.

His line was "You're rich, you can afford to give P1 million," or "Your colleague gave P1 million, so you have to match it," said the businessman, requesting anonymity.

Asked if De Venecia asked for donations with a straight face or jokingly, the businessman said: "As always, jokingly. I know by now he must have forgotten the amount, except that it was written all over the papers."

Whether De Venecia was in a playful mood or not, the effect was the same.

"If you haven't encountered him before, it would be hard to say no to him," the businessman said. "So you will be forced to say yes."

The businessman said he told a colleague: "Just give as you wish ... He (De Venecia) just wants to be in the headlines."

Reached in China by phone, De Venecia said: "Let's set aside this incessant nitpicking. There's too much pettiness around. The point is we started something ... What we did was just to trigger an avalanche of Filipino patriotism."

The businessman said many passengers tried to avoid De Venecia.

Some took their time inside the toilets, others transferred to the other side of the plane when they saw him.

Some kept silent while the Speaker wrote down their pledges—they were determined to give only what they could afford.

This was why, the businessman said, he doubted that De Venecia could come up with the P350 million he had announced.

He said De Venecia tried to pass the hat around a second time on the return flight to Beijing.

But a businessman loudly suggested that lawmakers give up 100 percent of their pork barrel first.

De Venecia dropped his plan and returned to his seat, the source said. With a report from Carlito Pablo

CHAOTIC END TO SCHOOL HOSTAGE CRISIS

Russia's school hostage drama ended in chaos on Friday with Russian forces storming the school after a fire fight broke out. What exactly happened is unclear but here is a provisional version of events pieced together from Russian agency and witness accounts courtyards where families were cutting up meat for ritual meals.

Some 260 people were reported missing after the three-day hostage crisis, which ended in a bloody wave of explosions and gunfire on Friday when militants set off bombs rigged in the school gymnasium and commandos stormed the building.

Russian media speculated that some of the missing could be among the wounded who were brought to various hospitals in the southern Russian region, unconscious or in too deep a state of shock to be able to identify themselves.

'I lost my boy'

Outside the shattered gymnasium on Sunday, Svetlana Deboyeva, 42, clutched a picture of her 11-year-old son Zaur, who was unaccounted for. "I lost my boy," she cried as she approached the building, where she had been squeezed in among the more than 1,100 hostages.

Regional Emergency Situations Minister Boris Dzugoyev said Sunday that 326 people, including 159 children, were killed—three of them children who died overnight. More than 540 people were wounded—mostly children. Medical officials said 423 people remained hospitalized.

Dzugoyev also said 35 attackers—heavily armed and explosive-laden men and women who were reportedly demanding independence for Chechnya—were killed in 10 hours of battles that shook the area around the school with gunfire and explosions. Including the militants, at least 361 people died in the tragedy.

"What happened was a terrorist act that was inhuman and unprecedented in its cruelty," Putin said in his televised speech. "It is a challenge not to the president, the parliament and the government but a challenge to all of Russia, to all of our people. It is an attack on our nation."

Putin acknowledged Russia's weaknesses, but blamed it on the fall of the Soviet Union, on foreign foes seeking to tear apart Russia and on corrupt officials. He said Russians could no longer be "carefree" and urged all of them to confront terrorism.

Putin promised to overhaul the law enforcement organs, which he acknowledged had been infected by corruption.

"We are obliged to create a much more effective security system and to demand action from our law enforcement organs that would be adequate to the level and scale of the new threats," he said.

Resignation

North Ossetian Interior Minister Kazbek Dzantiev tendered his resignation on Sunday morning. "After what happened in Beslan, I don't have the right to occupy this post as an officer and as a man," Itar-Tass quoted Dzantiev as saying.

Itar-Tass quoted an unidentified intelligence official as saying Saturday that the school assault was financed by Abu Omar As-Seyf, an Arab who allegedly represents al-Qaida in Chechnya, and was masterminded by Chechen rebel leader Shamil Basayev.

The militants seized the school on the first day of classes on Wednesday, herding hundreds of children, parents who had been dropping their kids off, and other adults into the school gym. The militants wired the gym with explosives—including bombs hanging from basketball hoops.

Despite the stifling heat inside the packed gym, the hostage-takers refused to allow in food or water. The children were likewise forbidden to use the toilet or drink tap water.

"By Friday morning, many children had lost consciousness," said Sima Albegova, the school cook. "Those who were still hanging on with their last strength started peeing on their shoes and drinking their urine. They would take a few gulps and then cry. The urine ate away at their lips, which were chapped and bitten to the blood."

Diana Gadzhinova, a 14-year-old pupil who survived the carnage, said some of her starving classmates ate the flowers that they had brought for their teachers on the first day of school in Russia.

A freed hostage said a militant told her: "If Putin doesn't withdraw forces from Chechnya and doesn't free our arrested brothers, we'll blow everything up," according to the Moskovsky Komsomols newspaper.

Russian officials said the bloodshed began when explosions were apparently set off by the militants—possibly by accident—as emergency workers entered the school courtyard to collect the bodies of hostages killed in the initial raid on Wednesday. Reports from AP and AFP

Russia-Chechnya feud dates back to 1700s

MOSCOW—The conflict between Russia and the tiny Caucasian republic of Chechnya goes back three centuries to the early 1700s, when Czar Peter the Great used the mountainous region separating Europe and Asia as a staging post for his expedition against Persia.

Russian expansionism and the arrival of Cossack settlers provoked the Chechens, one of several Muslim peoples in the Caucasus, to rise up in rebellion, notably under the leadership of Mansur Ushurma from 1785 to 1791.

During the first half of the 19th century, Chechnya was one of the bastions of Islamic rebels fighting for independence in the Caucasus, with Imam Shamil leading a "holy war" from 1834 to 1859. A further insurrection followed from 1877 to 1878.

Between 1917 and 1924, prior to the formation of the Soviet Union, the Chechens joined with other peoples in the region in fighting the Russian presence—not just that of the Bolsheviks but also the White Russians opposing them.

Under Soviet rule, the Chechens and the Ingushetians were formed into autonomous regions, then united in 1934 into a single region that became a republic in 1936.

Stalin dissolved the republic in 1944, deporting large numbers of Chechens and Ingushetians for alleged collaboration during World War II with Nazi Germany which was interested in the oil fields on the Caspian Sea. They were "pardoned" in 1957 and the Chechen-Ingush republic restored.

Soviet Army Gen. Djokhar Dudayev was elected president in 1991 and in November of that year declared unilateral independence.

The Ingushetians withdrew from the republic in December 1992 following fighting along the Chechen-Ingush border.

In December 1994, Moscow sent in 40,000 troops to crush the independence movement. The fighting ended in August 1996 after more than 50,000 people, most of them civilians, had died. The Russian withdrawal was completed in January 1997.

Russia launched a second offensive to wipe out separatism on Oct. 1, 1999 under then President Boris Yeltsin and then Prime Minister Vladimir Putin, who succeeded Yeltsin in 2000.

Christian bloc joins fund drive for gov't

Bayanihan Fund.

A group of economists from the University of the Philippines had warned that the country faced economic collapse in two to three years unless the government curbed the public sector deficit and debt. The public sector debt stood at P5.3 trillion as of September 2003.

Senate President Franklin Drilon said donating cash, jewelry or even text messages to the cash-strapped government was "good," but the country needed "permanent" solutions to its fiscal problem.

There were other ways of significantly easing the problem "like paying the correct taxes," Drilon said.

Overseas drive

The CCBP is also set to tap Christian churches overseas for the fund-raising drive. The JIL alone has 33 chapters all over the world.

"We will appeal to member churches abroad. Filipinos abroad will be more than willing to help keep the country from collapsing," Magbanua said.

He said the second offering in churches would not be compulsory but it would be encouraged. The CCBP still has to discuss how to collect such contributions.

Magbanua said the CCBP would propose that a member of the council be tapped as a representative to the Bayanihan Fund to ensure its proper use when turned over to the government.

"There seems to be enthusiasm among people about helping out to solve the crisis. People in church also want to be represented," said Magbanua, who represents the CCBP in the recently created Presidential Commission on Moral Values, which is chaired by President Macapagal-Arroyo herself.

Visible projects

Magbanua said the council would want the government to use its contributions for visible projects such as school buildings and other infrastructure.

"The fund should be used for things like school buildings so that government money could be used for debt servicing," he said.

Albay Rep. Edcel Lagman earlier said that safeguards like an enabling law should be put in place before the Bayanihan Fund was used.

Revenues, aside from those obtained through taxes and other regular sources, were "subject to appropriation by Congress," he said.

Taxing Church

Certain officials and legislators had proposed that the Church be taxed to raise funds.

Drilon said he was not prepared to support a measure that would impose taxes on the Catholic Church.

He also said he was not supportive of the proposal as this would violate the principle of the separation of the State and Church.

Ms Arroyo herself had rejected the proposal to tax the Church, but Finance Undersecretary Grace Tan said only religious services or nonprofit activities that fulfilled the objective of spreading religion, such as baptismal, matrimonial and funeral services, were tax-exempt.

The Catholic Church is asking the government to study the possibility of giving back a small part of the peoples' taxes to their religious sects for the members' development.

Rosales last week said a religion tax need not be separate from what the people were already paying but could be a percentage of the current taxes that could be given back to the taxpayer's religious organizations.

This practice is being done in Germany where the state collects from the people a tax for the Church, according to Drilon.

He said he was against it because "it will be using the government structure to collect taxes" for the Church, and thus would violate the separation of Church and State.

"Because in effect it will be using the Bureau of Internal Revenue to collect for the Church," Drilon said.

Convert chapels into classrooms, solon urges

BECAUSE churches are averse to being taxed, a congressman is suggesting that they help the government through public education.

Isabela Rep. Rodolfo Albano III (Kampi, Isabela) urged the Catholic Church, Iglesia ni Cristo and other churches and congregations to convert their chapels into classrooms.

"The religious sector can contribute by allowing public schools to use their chapels as temporary classrooms," Albano said in a statement.

The lawmaker noted that this measure would not disrupt religious services, particularly in the provinces, because the chapels and church buildings were being used only once a week or twice at the most—on Wednesdays and Sundays.

He also urged priests, nuns, lay leaders and other church workers to volunteer as teachers at the chapels.

"They will definitely be A-1 teachers because of their vast experience in basic education," he said. "While teaching academic subjects, they can inculcate in the minds of their students the religious aspects of life."

Albano said the Department of Education could coordinate with churches in making his proposal an official act.

As of the end of 2003, public schools had a backlog of 44,000 classrooms and 49,000 teachers, according to Rep. Rolando Andaya Jr. (LP, Camarines Sur).

In another statement, Andaya, chair of the House appropriations committee, noted that Malacañang's proposed 2005 budget contained P1 billion for the hiring of 10,000 new teachers.

In addition to new teachers, the proposed budget provided P3.2 billion for the construction of new classrooms.

Andaya said the Department of Education was programmed to spend P810 million next year for textbooks and instructional materials, and P1 billion for desks and armchairs.

Funding for education would not be cut during the budget hearings by Congress, he said, as "literacy should not be a casualty of the fiscal crisis."

"Investments in human capital development are not postponable," he said. •

Discount offered to poor ...

AC3 president Souie Mercado said Napocor misled the public by saying it was facing financial problems, when in fact corruption and other irregularities remained rampant in the power firm.

Mercado said AC3 was discussing with lawyer-members possible legal action to prevent the implementation of the increase.

Unjustifiable

The Freedom from Debt Coalition, for its part, said the increase was unjustified.

"Consumers should not be made to bear any more additional burdens from the flawed decisions of the government and its onerous transactions with the private sector," the FDC said in a statement.

It said Napocor was losing money because for every kilowatt hour the utility firm was paying independent power producers (IPPs) to deliver, it was shelling out almost the same amount for electricity that was neither being used nor produced.

"They have been charging us for a big part of this undelivered electricity until the publicity stunt of President Macapagal-Arroyo in June 2002 when she reduced the PPA (purchased power adjustment) but did not change the contracts with the IPPs," the FDC said.

"This led to more losses for Napocor, which we will now pay for with this 98-centavo increase."

Napocor generates its own power which it sells to power distributors, but it also buys electricity from IPPs, companies that were given generous incentives by the Ramos administration to put up plants in the country to solve the power crisis in the early 1990s.

Declare increase illegal

The Pambansang Lakas ng Kilusang Mamamalakaya ng Pilipinas, a fisherfolk group, urged the Supreme Court to declare as illegal the rate hike granted to Napocor.

"Like a thief in the night, the ERC sneaked in this highly revolting rate increase while the people were taking a rest from a week of hard work and less pay. The approval was railroaded, bizarrely illegal and grossly detestable in the highest order," Pamalakaya national chair Fernando Hicap said in a statement.

The ERC approved the increase when hearings were still in progress, according to the Bagong Alyansang Makabayan.

In a text message to the INQUIRER, Energy Secretary Vince Perez said the administration was looking for ways to cushion the impact on the poor.

"President Macapagal-Arroyo wants to ensure that the less privileged among our countrymen are protected from any subsequent rate adjustment by power distributors and the foremost cushioning mechanism is the lifeline discount rate," Perez said.

Aside from strictly implementing the power discounts, Perez said Ms Arroyo had ordered him to "find out if its application can be extended beyond the life provided for by Epira (Electric Power Industry Reform Act)."

Lifeline rate

In an interview with RMN radio, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye explained that the lifeline rate would give a 50-percent discount to households using 50 kWh or less a month, 35 percent for those consuming between 51 and 70 kWh a month, and 20 percent for those using 71 and 100 kWh a month.

"The small power consumers account for one third of the customers in Meralco's (Manila Electric Co.) franchise area and a quarter of the consumers outside the franchise," Bunye said.

Perez said Ms Arroyo had likewise ordered an all-out war to regain millions of pesos worth of power lost to pilferage and inefficiencies of utility firms like Meralco to minimize or avert further power rate increases.

"Power is no longer cheap so we all need to join hands to conserve it and use it wisely," the energy secretary said.

The National Economic and Development Authority earlier said power theft and systems loss were among the reasons for the country's high power costs because utility firms charge the consumers for these losses.

As the government moves to minimize the shock of Napocor's rate increase, Albay Rep. Joey Salceda is asking why consumers in Luzon were slapped a P1.23-per-kWh increase against the rate hike of 22.02 centavos in the Visayas and 26.65 centavos in Mindanao.

"We are puzzled, if not intrigued by the huge disparity in the rate increases because Luzon will effectively foot P31 billion of the P33-billion adjustment while the Visayas will pay a mere P868 million and Mindanao only P1.8 billion," Salceda said.

He said critics might interpret the disparity as a payback for her performance in the recent election where she narrowly lost in Luzon while winning significantly in the Visayas.

Salceda said the ERC could have based its decision on the location of the IPPs as most of them were based in Luzon and that these power plants had more foreign exchange loans compared to plants in the Visayas and Mindanao.

"Surely we can devise a pricing mechanism to equalize or equitably allocate the pain," he said.

Overall, Salceda rated the power rate adjustment as "the most substantial effort by the Arroyo administration."

Two business leaders in Cebu City urged the public to accept the power rate increase.

Saving power better

Carlos Co, vice president of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry (PCCC) Visayas, said the business sector in Cebu recognized that Napocor needed the increase to help stem its huge losses.

Jose Ng, regional governor of PCCI, also believed that the increase was inevitable because the increasing fuel prices caused the generating cost to go up.

"We just have to agree and respect the decision (of ERC) but we hope that the decision (was) based on fairness (for) all the sectors," Ng said. With reports from Carlito Pablo in Manila; Delfin T. Mallari Jr., PDI Southern Luzon Bureau; and Jhunnex Napallacan, PDI Visayas Bureau

ER: "I have long prayed for a house of my own—even if it's just a pigeon house, as long as we will never be evicted from it again."

Evicted squatters

Cortez knows only too well what it's like to be homeless. Twice in the past, she and her husband, with their four children in tow, were driven out of rooms in a slum area because they could not pay the rent.

They were the very people that the cardinal wanted to help, said Fr. Mark Munda, parish priest of the nearby Ina ng Laging Saklolo (Mother of Perpetual Help) parish.

Munda said beneficiaries would not have to pay a single centavo for their units, since only the poorest of the poor would be chosen.

Most of the families in the first batch still live along the Pasig River or under bridges in Manila, where Sin served as archbishop for 29 years before he retired last year. The new homeowners will move in at the end of the month, when the parish shall have worked out electricity and water supplies.

Another qualification, Munda added, was that beneficiaries should be active in parish and community work despite their poverty.

Parish work

Cortez has served the Ina ng Laging Saklolo since 1989, long before she had a family. As a young woman, she also sang in the parish choir. Even now with four kids, and doing laundry for a living, she finds time to do volunteer work for Ugnayon, a community-based Church outreach program.

Her husband drives a jeepney three times a week. He used to nag her to quit her responsibilities for Ugnayon so she could get a full-time job. Instead, she volunteered to help build the village, never guessing that her family would soon be living there.

When disheartened by neediness, Cortez said, she would find comfort in the lesson of the sparrows in the Bible, which she likes to share with other poor people: "If God takes care of the birds, how can He not take care of us? It's natural to lose heart from time to time; but like the birds, let us trust the Lord completely."

Her faith has been rewarded. Cortez said the P1,500 that she and her husband used to pay for the rent could now help send their two eldest children back to school.

The land for the compound, bought by friends of the cardinal, is registered in the name of the Serviam Foundation, which Sin established before he retired.

Slow construction

According to Munda, construction of the next building is under way, if slowly, because funds were not exactly flowing. Each unit, which has its own kitchen and bathroom, costs P70,000.

"We're calling on kind hearts to help in completing this village," Munda said.

The Serviam Foundation and the Catholic charismatic group Couples for Christ—through its Gawad Kalinga program—are working together on the project.

Munda said residents should live a life worthy of the support they would be getting from the Archdiocese of Manila, which would oversee the community.

A long-term goal is for them to be given livelihood loans, he added, because it wasn't just a question of providing shelter for the poor. "We want a transformation of lives here."

Fil-Am preaches honesty to fellow taxi drivers

and the last persons [foreigners interact with] when departing for their places of origin," Filipino-American cabbie Nestor Sulpico told members of the Taxi Drivers Association of the Philippines.

Sulpico, 47, grabbed media attention in the United States two months ago after he returned $70,000 worth of black pearls that a passenger had left in the back seat of his cab in New York City.

He spoke to the TDAP last week at the Department of Tourism. "As taxi drivers, we have a big role to play in the country's tourism industry," he told his audience. "A visitor's first experience will determine his future trips here."

More Sulpicos

The department is hosting Sulpico's visit. Tourism officials earlier cited the driver for his honesty, saying it brought honor to the country and reinforced trust in Filipino workers around the world.

"We are trying to produce more Nestor Sulpicos," said Tourism Undersecretary Rolando Reyes, who attended last week's gathering. "That is why we wanted our local taxi drivers to meet him, a modern-day hero whom they can emulate as role model."

Honesty is an innate Filipino virtue, according to Reyes. "It's only because of certain circumstances that some are tempted to do the wrong thing."

Since he arrived on Aug. 21, Sulpico has also been cited by President Macapagal-Arroyo, the Senate and the Department of Foreign Affairs. The Bureau of Immigration has approved his application for dual citizenship.

Upon learning that the ambition of Sulpico was to become a nurse, the Phillips Beth Israel School of Nursing in New York's East Side district offered him a scholarship.

A native of Laganas, Iloilo, Sulpico migrated to the United States in 1992 and later became an American citizen. For lack of a college degree, he found employment as a cab driver, earning $80 per 12-hour shift. He lives in the Kingsbridge section of the Bronx borough.

Nursing hopes

As a nurse, he said in a previous interview, he could better provide for his 14-year-old daughter who lives with his parents in Iloilo. He is estranged from his wife.

On July 17, Lawrence Policastro, a hedge fund manager, left a backpack containing rare South Pacific black pearls in Sulpico's cab. The driver used a cell phone, which was also in the bag, to locate the dumbstruck owner and ask where the pearls might be returned.

Policastro offered him a $500 reward, which Sulpico accepted with much reluctance. "I just wanted to show people that it pays to be honest," he explained.

The psychic reward was even better, the cabbie was pleased to announce. "I feel like I'm in heaven. People know me, and they know what I did. I get a lot of praise."

But he's "not blinded by it," he said. "I've always known that if you do something good, something right, it's going to make you very happy."

PNCC declares 2-day holiday on SLEX tolls

By Clarissa S. Batino

MOTORISTS will enjoy a toll-free South Luzon Expressway or SLEX today and tomorrow.

The Philippine National Construction Corp. is implementing a toll holiday for two days along the SLEX as a way of refunding motorists for having collected 20 centavos more in tollway fees for about two weeks in July.

Toll free

Starting 12 a.m. today until 11:59 p.m. on Sept. 7, travel along the SLEX from Alabang in Muntinlupa to Calamba in Laguna will be toll-free.

The PNCC said in a statement that the 48-hour toll-free operations was in line with the order of the Tollway Regulatory Board to refund motorists using the SLEX.

"The toll holiday does not include the Skyway segment—the elevated section from Buendia to Bicutan—and the at-grade level from Magallanes to Alabang," said the PNCC in a statement.

But based on its earlier statement, the TRB wanted the PNCC to implement a toll holiday for five days. No PNCC or TRB official was available for comment yesterday.

Overcharged

The PNCC had overcharged SLEX users by 20 centavos for almost two weeks in July when it charged a 72-centavo per kilometer rate.

The TRB asked the PNCC to determine the volume of vehicles that passed through the SLEX between July 5 and July 15 when the rates were higher by 20 centavos per km against what was eventually approved by the regulator.

The TRB ordered the PNCC to impose a uniform rate of 52 centavos per km on both the SLEX and the North Luzon Expressway for cars and jeeps effective July 16. The toll fee was raised from 33 centavos per km.

For light trucks and vans, toll along the SLEX was also reduced from P1.44 per km. The fee for trucks and buses was also reduced from P2.16 per km.

The 30-km SLEX stretches from Alabang to Calamba while the NLEX which runs from Balintawak to Sta. Ines in Pampanga measures 83 km.

Higher still

The 52-centavo per km rate is still higher than the 47-centavo per km rate approved by the TRB.

The rates for both SLEX and NLEX are now 52 centavos per km for cars and jeeps from 33 centavos, P1.04 per km for light trucks and vans from 65 centavos and P1.55 per km for heavy trucks from 99 centavos.

The new toll rate translates to an SLEX fee of P15 for cars and jeeps, P30 for light trucks and vans and P45 for heavy trucks. For NLEX, the rates are P41 for cars and jeeps, P82 for light trucks and P123 for heavy trucks.

MMDA warns it may ban provincial buses

THE METROPOLITAN Manila Development Authority (MMDA) yesterday warned provincial bus drivers against parking along Edsa lest they be banned from entering the metropolis. MMDA Chair Bayani Fernando said in his weekly radio program on dzBB that illegally parked provincial buses had been causing heavy traffic in some parts of Edsa.

Fernando also noted that the improper maneuvering of provincial buses on Edsa was also causing traffic buildup.

"These bus drivers have no right to park their units on the street and impede traffic flow," the MMDA chair said.

Navotas renews dump contract

By Edson C. Tandoc Jr.

THE NAVOTAS town council has renewed the contract for the operation of the Tanza controlled garbage facility, Mayor Toby Tiangco told the INQUIRER yesterday.

Tiangco said the council approved a resolution last week extending the contract of Philippine Ecology Systems Inc. to operate the dump for one more year.

The contract renewal came as the militant group Pamalakaya asked new Environment Secretary Michael Defensor to close the dump.

Stinking health hazard?

Pamalakaya said that the controlled dump had become an ecological and health hazard. They also expressed disgust at the stench allegedly emanating from the facility.

The Navotas dump is near Obando, Bulacan.

Earlier, Tiangco chided Obando officials for protesting the legally operating garbage facility while numerous illegal open dumps were scattered over the Bulacan town. He said the stench could be coming from those sites.

Drive vs cellphone theft goes to stores

By Luige A. del Puerto

STORE owners in Greenhills, San Juan, and the Ortigas Center have agreed to monitor their sale of cellular phones as the police began to focus on possible outlets for stolen mobile units, a police official said.

Starting this week, stall owners will be required to provide the police an inventory of second-hand mobile phones in stock, according to Sr. Supt. Jesus Jose Samson, chief of the San Juan police.

Widespread problem

Police officials and businessmen met last week to discuss ways of preventing stolen cellphones from being sold in Greenhills, Ortigas Center, and other commercial areas.

This widespread problem of cellphone theft is acknowledged by both sellers and the police but is largely undocumented.

"We are doing this to avoid robbers and thieves from selling their stolen goods in Greenhills," Samson said over the phone.

Authorities suspect that some stolen phones end up in Greenhills stores.

Under the scheme, store owners will provide the police a list of cellphones they have on sale and those already sold.

The list will include the brand name and serial number of the phones, Samson said.

Each stall must also get a certificate from the office of the police chief stating that all its phones have been acquired legally.

To make it convenient for the businessmen, Samson said he would be visiting Greenhills regularly to talk to them.

Lawyer Ricardo Lim, general manager of Virra Mall, confirmed the agreements. But he said stall owners have only agreed to "do their best" in complying with the agreements.

Documentation

Persons who sell phones to stalls would be asked to fill up a form, and leave his or her picture. The police have started distributing standard forms to stall owners.

"This would discourage robbers, and also help the shops avoid breaking the country's antifencing laws," said Insp. Miguel Nueva España, Greenhills police precinct commander.

This way, the police can simply check the sellers' photos or the phones' serial numbers, and match them with police records.

This would help trace if a phone on display has been stolen or not, Nueva España said.

Jenny fires 68, trails Kerr by 6 Filipina remains in 3rd place

SPRINGFIELD, Illinois—The Philippines' Jennifer Rosales birdied five of the first nine holes on the way to a four-under-par 68 on Saturday to remain in third place, six shots off new leader Cristie Kerr, going into the final round of the State Farm Classic.

Rosales matched flightmate Kerr birdie-for-birdie in a torrid five-hole stretch in the front nine but tripped on successive missed-green bogeys on the seventh and eighth to stay back at 15-under 201.

Although the Filipina picked up a stroke on No. 9, she wouldn't get another until the 15th for her nines of 33-35.

Kerr continued to amaze with her second straight 9-under 63 to take a four-stroke lead over Christina Kim and a 21-under 195 aggregate on the Rail Golf Course.

Kerr, seeking her third victory of the year and fourth in eight full seasons on the LPGA Tour, set the best 54-hole score on the tour this season. She also moved into position to threaten the 72-hole mark of 27 under set by Annika Sorenstam in the 2001 Standard Register PING.

Kim took a four-stroke lead into the round but could do no better than a 71 on Saturday.

ROSALLES celebrates a birdie on No. 1. AP

She stood at 199, two ahead of Rosales, who is bidding to finish in the top 10 for the fourth time this season.

Canadian Nancy Harvey had a career-best 64 to join Mi Hyun Kim (66), Han Hee-won (68) and Suzann Pettersen (69) at 13 under.

Kerr made a long eagle putt on the par-5 fifth hole and also had eight birdies and a bogey, playing her first seven holes in 6 under.

"I'm not trying to shoot this low, I promise," Kerr said. "You'll shoot as low as you can shoot if you do all of the (little) things well."

Kim, a 20-year-old Californian looking for her first LPGA Tour victory, was frustrated by the slow pace of play, with the final threesome of Kim, Kerr and Rosales spending more than five hours on the course. AP

Tams, Eagles keep tie for premier spot

By Jasmine W. Payo

THE FAR Eastern Tamaraws and Ateneo Eagles chose not to budge from the top two spots as they downed their out-of-it foes yesterday in the 67th UAAP varsity basketball tournament at the Philsports Arena.

FEU and Ateneo, still tied with 10-3 slates, will vie for the twice-to-beat advantage when they battle at the end of the elimination round on Saturday. La Salle is still in the running for the same Final Four incentive at 9-4.

Jeff Chan and RJ Rizada teamed up for 31 points as FEU pummeled the University of Santo Tomas Tigers, 66-57, after Ateneo proved steadier down the stretch with a 62-58 win over the National University Bulldogs.

Ateneo saw a four-point lead in the final minute cut down to 57-56 as NU guard Alex Miclat drilled in a triple.

Paolo Bugia struck for Ateneo, 59-56, and after an NU error, LA Tenorio, who led the Eagles with 11 points and 11 rebounds, split his freethrows for 60-56.

In junior play, Ateneo also remained in contention for the twice-to-beat bonus as the Eaglets whipped the Bullpups, 77-46.

Meanwhile, La Salle's Joseph Yeo, Ateneo's Doug Kramer, UP's Ira Buyco and Adamson's Marvin Poloyapoy will miss their final elimination games for incurring two unsportsmanlike fouls.

SECOND GAME (Srs)

ATENE0 62—Tenorio 11, Bugia 9, Kramer 8, Intal 9, Tiu 7, Del Rosario 6, Escalona 4, Arao 3, Aguilar 2, Membrere 2, Barracoso 0, Quimson 0.

RP must start learning how to win

EVERYBODY loves a winner, so declared Eric Buhain, who definitely knows what winning is all about.

The multi-awarded former national swimmer, visibly leaner, made the statement upon emerging from the failed RP medal hunt in the Athens Olympics.

No need to tape the words of the Philippine Sports Commissioner chair, who spoke clearly, candidly.

So did he mean nobody loved the Philippines, which again suffered a shameful setback after the ouster of its last two taekwondo jins, Tonette Rivero and Donald Geisler, at the Faliru Olympic Hall?

No, no, no, Buhain, holding a tiny RP flag in his left hand, tried to explain.

"You see, everybody also loves great fighters," he said.

Because both Geisler and Rivero had oozed with valor in their losing bouts, Buhain did not appear too bothered by the RP delegation debacle in Athens.

Maybe he had prepared that statement ahead.

Or the words could've come at the spur of the moment.

Good thing for Buhain, because he could've not found a defense more apt for yet another failed RP Olympic medal hunt.

Both Geisler and Tonette did the Philippines proud with their gutsy, gritty stands.

The very courageous RP campaigners also succeeded in proving that we do have with us world-class taekwondo jins.

Geisler, said the RP delegation physician, was lucky to have had a foot bandage for his fateful bout.

The ankle bone actually got unhinged upon impact, but it snapped back into place, thanks to the plaster support.

We all saw in awe how Geisler had tried to keep fighting despite the crippling injury.

As for tiny Rivero, she drew rave comments after she fearlessly slugged it out with the bigger Greek foe, who used to campaign as a heavyweight, while hometown fans had the Olympic hall shaking with roaring support for their bet.

There was this feeling that, given a fair shake in the judging, Rivero could've won that big one and assured herself of no less than a silver medal.

Those brave, proud moments have evidently lessened the pain and brutality that usually come with losing.

But after neighbors Thailand and Indonesia got away with their share of gold medals, three and one respectively, RP it must be stated, will have to count among the big failures in Athens.

That's the reality, and our sports officials would do well to acknowledge this.

Why? It's an accepted axiom that those who are able to realize what defeat is all about strive doubly hard to avoid future setbacks.

The terror of defeat, in a way, could create future winners who normally should put it in their daily regimen the ability to avoid succeeding disasters.

The Olympics is no exception.

The peaceful Summer Games in Athens was made possible after the tragedy of the 1972 Munich Olympics which had become synonymous to terror.

Of course, of great help was the fear and warning that soared following the unthinkable Sept. 11, 2001 attack at the World Trade Center in New York.

It was just too tragic that, although the Athens Olympics got spared from blood and death, Russia, which had scored big in the Summer Games, paid a high price with that terror attack that cost the lives of many school children.

That, a peaceful Olympiad for the Russian bloodbath, should rank as the dirtiest bargain of all time. It could've set a world record in terror and gloom.

Yes, there's a need to know everything about losing in order to avoid future defeats.

Here at home, the ready suggestion after the failure in Athens was to go back to the drawing board.

Everybody appears at a loss again, you know, just like after the Sydney Games from where the RP contingent returned shamed, empty-handed.

Who knows? Maybe Eric Buhain had actually felt the true pain and impact of defeat but had tried to hide it.

What's truly bothersome though was this reported suggestion that RP had failed to win a medal in Athens due to the shortage of prayers.

If it was Eric Buhain who had offered that conjecture, all we could do is pray he had been misquoted.

Nobody loves a perennial loser.

Protect your own health.

You're in a Protected Zone with the Silver Nano Health System™ from Samsung. Its advanced technology protects the air you breathe, the clothes you wear and even the food you eat.

Here's how it works. Utilising the proven anti-bacterial and sterilisation properties of silver, we've developed a unique process to create nano-sized silver ions. These ions kill and prevent the propagation of bacteria.

So now, your clothes will have up to 99.9% sterilisation and an anti-bacterial effect that lasts up to 30 days. The air you breathe will be bacteria-free because it passes through a Silver Nano filter. And the food you eat will stay fresh and healthy for a longer period.

IOC set to tackle Beijing events

WHEN the International Olympic Committee holds its next session in Singapore in July next year, the Philippines should lobby for the inclusion of new sports like billiards and bowling in the 2008 Beijing Games because it is in these sports where the Filipino athletes have a good chance of winning medals, including that elusive Olympic gold.

CLEAN LIVING

Manolo R. Inigo

Philippine Olympic Committee president Celso Dayrit once said that the POC will bat for the inclusion of billiards, bowling, dancsport and wushu, a traditional Chinese sport, in Beijing because they believe the country may win its first ever gold medal in these sports.

FIQ and Philippine Bowling Congress head Steve Hon-tiveros agreed, stressing that although the IOC has limited the number of events in the Olympic calendar, there is still the possibility that bowling and wushu might be included in the Beijing Games.

There has been a strong universal lobby to include new sports in future Olympic Games but this was scuttled by the IOC mainly because the Olympic calendar is already overcrowded. The Games are literally bursting at the seams with more than 30 events in the competition menu.

Still, the huge following of these new sports could help sway the IOC to change its mind. Billiards is played by close to one billion around the world while bowling boasts of more than 100 million active players. Dancsport, too, is not far behind in the number of enthusiasts addicted to it, ditto wushu and golf.

Bowling was held as a demonstration sport in the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul where Filipina Arianne Cerdeña won the gold medal. On the other hand, the legendary Paeng Nepomuceno has safely positioned himself at the top of the bowling scene by earning a spot in the International Hall of Fame and the Guinness Book of Records for being the one and only four-time winner of the prestigious World Cup. Another Filipino bowler, CJ Suarez, also won the World Cup last year.

In billiards, Puyat Sports' mainstays Efen "Bata" Reyes, Alex "The Lion" Pagulayan and Francisco "Django" Bustamante are among the world's best.

NCR goalie Louise Navarro thwarts Davao striker Merlo Albano.

Davao nips NCR on penalty kicks

By Musong R. Castillo

DAVAO, with goalie Levelyn Camarillo pulling off two saves, downed National Capital Region (NCR) in a penalty shootout, 4-2, yesterday to win the 2004 PFF-SuperFerry National Women's Football Championship at the Marikina Sports Center.

The younger but determined NCR booters gained a 2-2 tie earlier through a stroke of luck before Camarillo finally secured the win for the heavily favored Davaoefias with a superb goal-tending display.

Davao was cruising to victory with a 2-1 lead when defender Leonor Satorre put the ball in her own goal during a scramble in the 76th minute.

Striker Merlo Albano scored both Davao goals in regulation.

NCR first equalized in the 37th when Clarissa Lazaro connected from short range.

"We had a tough time. We expected that since teams get better during championship games," said Davao coach Melchor Anzures.

The event was co-organized by the PFF and the Marikina Football Association and backed by Mayor Marides C. Fernando and the city government.

Meanwhile, Iloilo bagged third place after a 3-0 demolition of Dumaguete earlier. The Ilonggos also won the Chris Monfort trophy, in honor of the late secretary general of the PFF, for fair play.

Sheeryn Ambrocio first scored in the shootout for Davao before Lazaro knotted it at 1-1. NCR goalie Louise Navarro was actually the first to deny an attempt by foiling an Albano try.

Camarillo, who won the best goalkeeper award, returned the favor by denying Patty Silva.

Satorre and Lomayn Fama then scored for Davao while Samantha Nieras connected for NCR before Camarillo's other deflection off Mar-tie Plaza led to the decisive 4-2 Davao lead.

PUP, La Salle netters forge title clash

TOP SEED Polytechnic University of the Philippines edged University of Santo Tomas, 2-1, yesterday to barge into the finals of the men's team event in the 2004 Mito All-Students Tennis Championships at the Valle Verde Country Club in Pasig.

PUP arranged a titular showdown with reigning UAAP champion La Salle, which swept College of Saint Benilde, 3-0, in the tournament organized by CTW and supported by adidas, with Prince/Nassau as the official balls.

In women's action, La Salle-A tripped UST, 2-1, to set up a title clash with sister team La Salle-B, which blanked CSB, 3-0.

NCAA arch rivals San Beda tangles with La Salle Greenhills for the high school crown.

LP 5-stag derby gets going today

MORE than 60 top-quality fights are on tap when the Gentleman Cockers Association of the Philippines (GCAP) 5-stag Derby gets going today at the fully air-conditioned Las Piñas Coliseum. Action starts at 5 p.m. in the backlights sponsored by Sagupaan Complexor 3000 and Pagcor Casino Filipino. "It will be a reunion and battle royale of former Ucap members, so we want to make this grand opening derby a memorable one," GCAP president Patrick Antonio said. Seeing action are Antonio, two-time Stag-fighter of the Year Sonny Lagon, Pol Estrellado, Ito Yñares, Richard Bates, Maj. Bobby Doromal, Jet and Joel Fernando, Tony Lasala, Benjie Lim, Ramon Mancaneres Pepito Ngo, Boy de Roca and Blandy Tolentino. Also competing are NCA members Rep. Rudy Albano, Nene Aguilar, Gerry Ramos and Boy Royo as well as Bulljack Fortaleza, Riolchi Saito, Ashley Arayata, Eric de la Rosa, Manny and Arman Santos and Bong Villanueva. For inquiries, call 8731040, 8743910 or 0920-5609404.

Cutting Edge Binanganon solo champ

CUTTING Edge Binanganon BJ, an entry of top Rizal breeder Boy Jiao and Big Dome owner Jorge "Nene" Araneta, emerged as solo champion in last week's National Cockers Association (NCA) 7-Stag Derby at the Araneta Coliseum. Jiao and Araneta fielded the high-breaking Dan Gray fowls to win the event with 6.5 points, beating the entries of Joe Laureno, Rep. Ronnie Puno and Rep. Rudy Albano, Jun Jingco, and eventual runner-up Elboy Enriquez. Riding high on its early lead in the Stag-fighter of the Year race, Cutting Edge Binanganon BJ is expected to figure prominently tomorrow when the second leg of NCA 7-Stag Derby unfolds. Tomorrow's hosts in the event that has lured 46 entries are Enriquez and Raymond Velasco. Meanwhile, NCA president Ito Yñares has reminding all members not to field stags banded by the Pagba and Migba, which are not accepted in all Araneta derbies. "Officials of Pagba and Migba have refused to furnish us the official and true copies of their screening records. Every breeder knows that these records are very important in determining the legitimacy of a stag," Yñares said.

Taguig cagers down Baguio

TAGUIG—Host Forward Taguig kept its home record intact Saturday by getting back at the Baguio Cardinals, 73-70, in a North division contest in the NBC national championship at the CP Tinga Memorial gym here. The Cardinals appeared set to repeat over Taguig when they led 70-69 on back-to-back baskets with 1:40 to go. But the hosts fought back behind Bong Magsambol and Ogie Gumatay to turn the game around. "It was a close call," said Taguig coach Danny Gavierres.

Arce repeats over RP's Rubillar

FILIPINO Juanito Rubillar fought the fight of his life but came up short as he lost by split decision to reigning World Boxing Council junior flyweight king Jorge Arce in their 12-round bout yesterday at the El Tero de Tijuana in Mexico.

A point was taken off Rubillar in the ninth round following an illegal blow behind Arce's head in an otherwise even fight where two of the judges had the champion winning by 119-108 and 115-112. The third judge scored it 115-112 for Rubillar.

It was Arce's seventh defense of the crown he took from Korean Choi Yo Sam in 2002, and his second victory over Rubillar. The duo first fought it out for the interim WBC junior fly title also in Tijuana in 2001, with the Los Mochis native prevailing over the Filipino by unanimous decision.

The victory improved Arce's win-loss-draw record to 37-3-1, with 27 KOs, while Rubillar's slate dipped to 33-8-7.

Meanwhile, top-ranked International Boxing Federation junior flyweight Wyndel Janiola succumbed to a fifth-round technical decision at the hands of second-ranked Eric Ortiz in a scheduled 12-rounder. Salven L. Lagumbay, Contributor

La Salle, UE bets shine in t'kwondo

LA SALLE'S Gernelyn Aranzanso and University of the East's Rotrice Ashlie Lavalan stamped their class over their respective rivals yesterday in the women's junior division of the Samsung Best of the Best National Taekwondo Championships at the Glorietta Activity Center in Makati City.

The 17-year-old Aranzanso, gold medal winner in the World Hwarang Championships, dlobbered Monica Dianelo of Clark Field, 8-4, to bag the flyweight title. The 14-year-old Lavalan, a blackbelter and gold medalist in the 5th Korean Open, sustained the momentum of her 3-0 rout of Ma. Abigail Rustria in the semis and rolled to a 7-4 victory over Cristina Faye Ongpin, also of Clark Field, to claim the finweight crown.

Cathy Jane Hampac of Zamboanga trounced AIDA's Kristie Jane Manapsal, 6-4; Rubylin Mapa of the NTU Tigers downed Kathleen Roble of Cagayan, 6-2; while Elmie Rose Baradas nipped Jessica Joy Ballesteros of Cavite, 3-2, to win the flyweight, lightweight and featherweight crowns, respectively, at the close of the five-day event sponsored by top electronics firm Samsung and sanctioned by the Philippine Taekwondo Association.

Flyweight Jason Sinoy of General Santos City pummeled Vishnu Catarg of Muntinlupa, 11-5, to lead the winners in the men's side of the tournament.

UST's Giorgio von Gerri de Guzman, the 16-year-old mainstay of the national team, edged Dennis Resaba of UE, 4-2, to top the bantamweight division even as Edison Bagaipo took the finweight trolan over Raffy Futolan of RPTC, who was disqualified after receiving 8 warnings for a 4-pt deduction. Jurie Bernardino of UST outthit Benedict Poloso of Rizal HS, 5-4, to claim the featherweight diadem.

Matches in the grade school category were still being fought at presstime.

Mendoza entry scores perfect 3

UNHERALDED Arthur Mendoza of Agoncillo, Batangas, made his presence felt early by being the first to score 3 points in the 99-fight opening salvo Saturday of the 18th Annual Ray-Showdown 7-Stag National Derby at the Relligon Mega Cockpit. The event continues at 5 p.m. today with the second batch of some 50 new competitors aiming to qualify for Wednesday's 4-stag finals. Backed by Thunderbird Power Feeds, Lakpue Drug and Casino Filipino, the three-day derby is hosted by Danny Ty and lawyer Romero Yu. Mendoza's Golden Warrior-70 X 7 Times entry beat the stags fielded in by Blandy Tolentino, Joey and Buboy de los Santos and Roy Gamilla. VCG San Clemente, Barangay Palsayan, San Fer, W&J, Labanan Sa Pasay Oct. 15, RB Spartan's Blood, Gold Cup Argga, and San Pablo Heat of Blandy Tolentino.

VIJAY Singh tees off in hole No. 11.

Singh nears No. 1 spot

NORTON, Massachusetts—World No. 2 Vijay Singh shot 63 to take the second-round lead in the Deutsche Bank Championship on Saturday and move into position to take Tiger Woods' No. 1 ranking, too.

With an eagle on the first hole sparking the best round of the tournament, Singh took the lead from top-ranked Woods with back-to-back-birdies on Nos. 12-13 to move to 11 under.

"It's not going to affect me one way or another if I overtake him," said Singh, who has already won five times this year, including the PGA Championship. "Yeah, if I win this tournament, I'll be No. 1. Fine. But what would that change for me? I'm going to go out there next week and do it all over again."

Billy Haas and John Rollins were tied with Woods at 9 under, two strokes back, with Ryan Palmer and Shigeki Maruyama at 8 under on the par-71, 7,415-yard (6,747-meter) TPC of Boston course.

Woods has held the No. 1 ranking for a record 264 consecutive weeks. Singh would take it over if he finishes higher than Woods or if Woods finishes lower than a tie for seventh.

"The No. 1 ranking takes care of itself just by winning tournaments," Woods said.

That's something Woods hasn't been able to do this year. His only win this year was at the Match Play Championships. His last victory in stroke play was more than a year ago at the Western Open.

But he's not ready to give up the No. 1 ranking just yet. Despite his so-called slump, Woods has finished in the top 10 in seven of his last nine tournaments; five of those were in the top five.

Woods shot 65 Friday to share the first-round lead with Palmer. On Saturday, Woods plodded along at even with 10 pars on the first 12 holes before he sank a nine-foot birdie putt on No. 13.

Bustamante, Diaz outkick Davao rivals

DAVAO CITY—Rodel Bustamante of Tagum City seized the lead early and didn't let up even as local bet Estella Mamac-Diaz was pushed to the limit in topping yesterday's eliminations for the 28th National Milo Marathon at the PIA grounds here.

In the absence of Davao's more seasoned runners, Bustamante took charge to rule the men's division of the 21-km event. Fifth placer here last year, Bustamante clocked one hour, 10 minutes and 59 seconds.

"Malayo pa kinuha ko na yung lead. Pero kailangan pa ng maraming ensayo para sa finals (I took the lead early. But I need to train more for the finals)," said the 25-year-old Bustamante, who went home with the P10,000 cash purse, a trophy, a Globe Handyphone and a ticket to the National Finals on Nov. 14 in Metro Manila.

The top three finishers here last year did not run yesterday, paving the way for the younger road warriors to rule the race held in partnership with Cebu Pacific, Globe Handyphone, Bayview Park Hotel, adidas and the Department of Tourism.

Joining Bustamante in the 42-K national finals were Reynante Villarama, who placed second (1:12:32) and Raul Lamprea, who finished third (1:13:53).

There was more drama in the women's race with Diaz, a three-time leg winner, grabbing the lead from Jho-an Banayag only with five kilometers left before winning in 1:23:29.

Banayag, a former leg winner, followed Diaz home 47 seconds later while Cherrylyn Javellana, 18, came home third in 1:38:29.

The 33-year-old Diaz was last year's National finals runner-up.

Seven thousand two hundred seventy-three runners took part in yesterday's Region IX elimination leg, according to Milo Sports Events executive Pat Goc-ong.

Topping the 5K fun run were Roy Ocon (14:36) and Judelyn Miranda (18:13).

Gorres proves too classy

MANDAUE CITY—Z "The Dream" Gorres made a tough task look routine as he easily decided Sairung Suwanasil of Thailand over 10 rounds here Saturday evening.

The 22-year-old Gorres, who was earlier assured by manager Rudy Salud of a stint in Freddie Roach's Hollywood gym should he hurdle his World Boxing Organization No. 8 rival, used his ring savvy and a vast arsenal of shots to frustrate the durable Thai.

All three judges had Gorres the winner via scores of 100-92, 99-91, 99-91.

"He lacks the killer instinct. He could have stopped the Thai if he showed more aggressiveness," said boxing patron Antonio L. Aldeguer, who handles Gorres with Salud. Salud was at ringside Saturday.

Gorres, who will be joining universal featherweight king Manny Pacquiao on his US trip, improved his win-loss-draw record to 18-1-1, with 10 KOs. Salven Lagumbay, Contributor

MayniLA bet bags 2nd gold in HK tilt

The 14-year-old Arabejo led from halfway in the race to rule the 400-meter freestyle event of the meet featuring the best 16-under swimmers from Hong Kong and South China.

Arabejo's win cushioned the impact of a minor RP defeat as 14-year-old Mathew Tano settled for the silver in a close 200 butterfly final to 16-year-old David Wong Kai-wai of Hong Kong.

Arnold "Ali" Atrizna, chair of the Manila Sports Council (Masco) and the delegation head, praised Arabejo and Tano for their efforts saying: "Both swimmers' will to win and determination to give honor for the country is truly inspiring."

SPORTS

TOP SEED Roger Federer flashes a mean forehand to eliminate Fabrice Santoro of France.

Mary boots out Maria

Tragedy puts US Open defeat in perspective

NEW YORK—Wimbledon champion Maria Sharapova wasn't overly upset after she lost to Mary Pierce, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, in the US Open's third round on Saturday.

Sharapova's silver dress carried a plain black ribbon in memory of the more than 340 people, nearly half children, killed in a hostage-taking at a school in her native Russia.

"I lost today, but I still have to move on. It's not the end of the world," said Sharapova, who double-faulted 14 times and dropped the final five games. "There are a lot more important things in the world going on right now."

Given her almost perfect English, her all-grown-up strokes, and her poise on and off the court, it's easy to forget that Sharapova is just 17 and was born in Siberia.

If she hadn't flashed the tennis ability that prompted a move to Florida a decade ago, Sharapova might very well be just another teen readjusting to high school life this week, half a world away.

"The first of September is when so many kids go to school, the first day back. They go in with flowers and the whole family," she said. "Unfortunately, the terrorists decided to do something bad with those families and kids. It just shows that my loss is a little thing."

As far as tennis goes, though, her exit was the day's most significant development, more surprising than No. 3 Carlos Moya's 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-7 (5), 7-5 collapse against 100th-ranked Oliver Rochus of Belgium, at 1.65 meters (5-foot-5) the shortest ATP Tour regular.

The other top players advanced in straight sets, including Justine Henin-Hardenne, Lindsay Davenport, Roger Federer and Andre Agassi.

Henin-Hardenne beat Lisa Raymond, 6-4, 6-3, Davenport got past No. 26 Elena Bovina, 7-6 (7), 6-2, and Federer's 6-0, 6-4, 7-6 (7) victory over No. 31 Fabrice Santoro put him in the round of 16 for the fourth straight year.

But Federer's never been past the Open's fourth round. If he does reach the quarterfinals, his opponent could be Agassi, an eight-time major champion.

Agassi's next opponent will be Sargis Sargsian, who erased a two-set deficit and saved two match points to beat Paul-Henri Mathieu of France, 4-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, 7-6 (4), in 4 hours, 41 minutes. Add in his second-round upset of No. 10 Nicolas Pietrangeli—at 5:09, the second-longest match in tournament history—and Sargsian broke the record for longest consecutive Open matches.

Often mistaken by security guards for a ball boy or a junior player, Rochus entered the tournament with a 76-101 career mark and a 0-4 Open record. That last fact prompted Moya to ask incredulously, "He never won?"

"That's why you don't underestimate anybody," said Agassi, a 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 winner over No. 25 Jiri Novak of the Czech Republic. AP

Ouzo-Dilema partnership rules Flash

By Edwin Villanueva
Contributor

IMPORTED galloper Ouzo simply loves it when she's setting the pace.

The 6-year-old mare from Australia also got a big lift from the masterful handling of champion jockey Pat Dilema, who guided her to victory in the Flash Mile race yesterday in front of a roaring crowd at the Santa Ana Park.

Blasting out of the gates first, Ouzo dictated the tempo at will and gamely stayed tough down the stretch to outduel slight favorite Dandansoy in the 1,600-meter contest.

Dandansoy looked all set to gobble up Ouzo at midstretch but Dilema applied the whip in rapid-fire succession—a move rarely seen from the 3-time PSA Jockey of the Year—on the bay galloper who responded mightily to pull off the win worth P170,000 for the Hermie Esguerra Stable.

"Basta naka-ayre mahihirapan sila kay Ouzo. Kailangang gamitan ng latigo para lang makasiguro (When she sets the pace to her own liking she'll be hard to beat. I just applied the whip to ensure the win)," said Dilema, the winningest rider for August with 21 first-place finishes.

Former Presidential Gold Cup champion Free Wind came in third, six lengths off the winner, while comebacking Lyonnais arrived fourth in what turned out to be a two-horse affair.

The Justino "Nick" Arienza-trained Ouzo, sired by Australian stallion St. Cover out of New Zealand broodmare Aniseed, covered the route in a fast 1:40.8, submitting dizzying fractions of 24.5-25.5-23.5-27.

Ouzo's victory, her 10th in 20 outings so far, enabled the Esguerra Stable to bounce back after Adam's Call, also handled by Dilema, lost to Diktador in the Blaze Mile earlier.

SM's R-18 ban will kill pornography, says Laurice

By Marinel R. Cruz

AWARD-WINNING actress-director Laurice Guillen said the ban on R-18 movies in SM theaters will lead not to the death of the local movie industry but of pornography in the country.

"I don't believe the film industry is dying," said Guillen. "For me, now is a good time as any. (This ban will lead) not to the death of the film industry but to the death of pornography. I think it's only a matter of zoning, (because) people would always want to make movies for adults."

"Maybe (malls) can do zoning within their complex so that children are not allowed in certain areas," the director added, over lunch with members of the entertainment press. "Or maybe do away with posters and pictures used to promote R-18 films."

SM theaters last week announced they would stop showing movies classified as R-18. Sexy actors and actresses and their producers protested the SM decision, but the Movie and Television Review and Classification Board (MTRCB) supported it.

Sen. Ramon "Bong" Revilla Jr. also protested the SM ban, saying it could kill the movie industry.

Guillen said the SM directive is a "private policy."

She also pointed out that SM's clientele are families. "So you just have to zone," she stressed. "There should be certain theaters just for adults. It's being done in the US, I think it is about time it's done here."

Lauded by MTRCB

A memorandum from MTRCB Chair Marissa Laguardia to West Avenue Theaters Corp. vice president for operations Ric Camaligan said "the board greatly appreciates and lauds your company's intention. Indeed such intention would promote the making of wholesome movies."

SM cinemas are listed under West Avenue Theaters Corp.

"We would also like to ventilate the observations of some sectors that not all R-18 movies are about sleazy sex or violence," Laguardia added. "There are R-18 movies that impart values and do not deal with sleazy sex alone such as 'The Bridges of Madison County' and 'Ang Huling Birhen sa Lupa.'"

Guillen said the MTRCB classified her critically acclaimed film "American Adobo" R-18.

"We lost a lot of audience there," she recalled. "It was a comedy. There was nothing obscene in it. But because of that rating, I became aware of my responsibility to my audience. Before, I only wanted to entertain my audience. Now I try to be clear with the values I impart through my films."

Autonomy

Guillen said she refuses to make a movie if she does not believe in its content. She is directing "Santa-Santita" for Unitel Films, and also plans to film F. Sionil Jose's short story "Puppy Love."

She said she "invested" her talent fee for

STOP SLEAZE!

The movie industry won't die but sleazy movies just might if SM insists on not screening adult movies, says Guillen whose latest work, "Santa-Santita" starring Angelica Panganiban (below), is sure to have a slot in the chain's cineplexes.

"Santa-Santita" in the film. "This means that it is also in my interest to make sure that the film does not go beyond the budget," she explained. "But Tony Gloria (of Unitel Films) is giving me complete autonomy."

Guillen said Unitel decided not to join the Metro Manila Film Festival in December because Gloria wanted to show his movie in the Philippines and in the US simultaneously in November. Unitel produced "Crying Ladies," which won the MMFF best picture award last year.

Where the money is

"If we join the festival, which is December to January, the weather would be too cold in the States and no one would want to watch it," she explained.

She said "Santa-Santita" is one of the 23 films invited to participate in the Busan International Film Festival in Korea in October. "But not in competition," she added. "They have a forum that would showcase select films, and prospective producers who want to put in money for the production of films can do so."

The director explained that, for some time now, she has been more interested in marketing films rather than in the competition. "What

BE A MEMBER FOR ONLY P5,000. NO MONTHLY DUES

GOLD'S GYM, VENICE, CA, USA - Ever wonder how movie stars get their "Hollywood" physique? Ever wonder if that six-pack is special effects or real muscle tone? For the first time ever, the people behind Hollywood's big biceps and trim waistlines, reveal the secrets of what it takes to get in shape for the big screen. Top celebrity trainers from Gold's Gym, home to Hollywood's biggest stars, give us a "sneak peek" of Hollywood's latest fitness trends and how these can work for you. Gold's Gym's Achieving Balance trainer Mike Ryan, who has worked with Mark Wahlberg and The Rock, says it's all about balance: A healthy combination of cardio exercises, resistance training and diet. Ryan prefers that his clients workout for at least 40 minutes with 20-minute focus on cardio and a 20-minute resistance training session each day, or at the very least 3 to 4 times a week. "If you don't have the time for 40 minutes of exercise a day, do your best to do whatever you can. Every little bit helps," says Ryan.

Alicia Silverstone plays matchmaker

RIGHT after we viewed "The Swan" on Studio 23, we were pleasantly surprised to see that its post-programming was another new show, "Miss Match," starring Alicia Silverstone.

We stayed on Studio 23 to watch the new sitcom because we wanted to see if Silverstone, who was such a big hit on the movie "Clueless," still had it in her to set the small screen aglow.

This was a matter of some importance to us because we liked "Clueless" a lot, and thought that Silverstone's work in it was witty and winning. That's why, in the succeeding years, when her follow-up projects flopped one after the other, we were sorely disappointed and frustrated.

We hoped that, with her new sitcom, Silverstone could recover lost ground and become popular again, albeit on the small screen.

Well, after viewing the first episode of "Miss Match," we can say that Silverstone isn't a has-been, not by a long shot. In the sitcom, she plays a divorce lawyer who stumbles on a side "career" as a matchmaker.

Yes, we know that there's little that's new about this format, which has been tackled in previous productions like "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Hello Dolly." But its being given another trot around the park by Silverstone and company isn't exactly a disagreeable proposition.

Silverstone looks more mature now, but that's not necessarily a bad thing, because she plays a lawyer here, not a high school student.

Also, she's able to proficiently manage both her more serious scenes as a lawyer and her ditzy sequences as a modern-day matchmaker.

VIEWFINDER

Nestor U. Torre

personas gives the show the variety it needs to sustain viewers' interest and tickle their fancy.

It also helps that, although Silverstone's character is a past master at making other people fall in love with each other, she has problems with her own love life.

This makes her a vulnerable leading lady rather than a slick, pluperfect one, so viewers' empathy is heightened.

The show's title character is given another thematic issue to contend with: Her father is a top lawyer whose achievements make her insecure, thus adding to her vulnerability, and consequently to her accessibility to viewers.

True, the show comes off more as a proficient production than a family inspired one. But it's still a pleasure to see Silverstone again getting the attention and showcase she deserves.

Here's hoping that her new show won't be a mismatch for her!

'Dodgeball'

Holmes as First Daughter
IN THE ROMANTIC comedy film

"First Daughter," Katie Holmes plays Samantha McKenzie, the daughter of the President of the United States. A cluster of her own bodyguards and a lot of do's and don'ts sum up Sam's world ever since she can remember. But, now that she's about to enter college, she wants to be free—no bodyguards, no rules, no press. But will she ever fit in a world where people know who she really is? Sam's parents are played by Michael Keaton and Margaret Colin.

'How Did You Know'

GARY V has scored another hit with "How Did You Know," which has become a favorite of radio listeners and music lovers. Star Records' AVCD of the song features the single, a minus-one and a music video. It has already been certified gold. The video is available on VHS, VCD and DVD formats.

'All My Life'

AGA MUHLACH and Kristine Hermosa's romantic starrer, "All My Life," is now on video.

Get a DVD copy and a special elephant-shaped disc with special features like Behind the Scenes, The Making, Music Video and Full Trailer.

Co-stars are Bernard Palanca, Ces Quesada, Dimples Romana and Ricky Davao. Call 4152272, local 3436.

Star of the Month

JERICHO Rosales is Cinema One's Star of the Month. His films are being shown on Romance Central every Sunday at 6 p.m.; Sept. 12, "Trip"; Sept. 19, "Forevermore," and Sept. 26, "Noon at Ngayon."

On Drama Studio, his movies are: Sept. 27, "Tanging Yaman"; Sept. 28, "Bagong Buwan"; Sept. 29, "Wansapanataym," and Sept. 30, "Magandang Hatinggabi."

Jaya comes home

Tank tops. "I wear these blouses on 'SOP' They look like they're for sleeping (laughs). When I buy stuff like these, I'm very conscious of the cut and design. First, they must not be too tight. I don't mind showing cleavage, but when the other parts are shown, hindi ko na feel."

"When I brought this halter top to 'SOP' it was Regine who wore it. We borrow each other's clothes a lot. We have the same shoe size and clothes size. The halter top is from Japan. It's pretty expensive. I have a bag to match it."

"I like this black blouse because it's fully beaded. I got this at Macy's in the US. I can wear it both for work and for gimmicks."

"If you want sporty, I have this (a black sports shirt with '68' printed on it). This is from Bebe."

Dresses. "This dress is really, really cheap, but I like it. It's worth P200. It's a little bit daring, backless and with a halter design."

"I'm a denim freak. This denim dress is really nice. It's warm and I wear it in the US."

"I find this striped sun dress very cute. I've worn this on 'SOP' and I'll wear it again. Regine and I are like that. We buy clothes and wear them as much as we can, so it's worth the price."

"The plastic packaging of this dress says you'll lose 10 pounds when you wear it. I wore it on 'SOP' once. Naloka ako! The fats disappeared (laughs)! Only, the dress is kind of heavy."

"Cocoy Lizaro made this yellow-orange dress. I've worn this on 'SOP' once. It has several layers, the first one down to the ankle. But it's really a dress with a micro-mini skirt."

T-shirts. "A friend from Germany gave this to me because he knew that my grandfather is from Jamaica. I like it because the colors remind me of Jamaica."

"This Kitty shirt is from Bahrain. I went there to do a show with Ogie Alcasid. We went shopping and when I saw this I screamed, 'Aay! Timing!'"

"This shirt is from Nordstrom in New York. I like the monkey design (laughs)."

"I like this Oakland shirt because it reminds me of the time I lived in Oakland. I was also a fan of football before, but I stopped watching because people said I was becoming boyish."

Sleepwear. "I bought three pairs of shorts from Victoria's Secret. They have the same style but different colors. When the weather's cold, I wear my sarong pants or nightgowns from Boracay."

"When I buy sleepwear, I wash them a couple of times before wearing them, so that the fabric becomes thin."

Cosmetics. "I do everything in the bathroom—foot spa, etc. Most of the stuff here in the bathroom is for my hair. I have a bubble bath at least once a month. I use a really mild facial wash to remove my makeup."

Bags. "This black Prada is very, very special. My manager,

DENIM FREAK likes this "maong" dress coat for warmth.

Wyngard Tracy, gave it to me. He bought it in Italy. I hardly use this because I'm being careful.

"Regine also gave me a Prada but I can't seem to find it right now."

Accessories. "This arm bracelet is from Ayen Munji. She gave this to me when she was still a princess in Brunei. I did a show with her. All of those who were part of the production received gifts from her. I also like wearing ethnic bracelets on my shows."

Shoes. "Some of my shoes I have given away. When I buy sandals, I make sure I pick something with style so I can use it over and over. For example, this pair of open-toed stilettos, which I bought in New York, can be worn during ordinary gimmicks and in formal shows. It's Anne Klein, and is not very comfortable to wear. Ninety percent of my shoes are for work."

Jackie Lou stars in 555's new earthshaking commercial

FITNESS poster girl Jackie Lou Blanco is in the newest 555 Carne Norte television commercial (TVC).

Like the previous 555 Carne Norte TVCs, the new commercial shows the physical power that comes from a protein-rich diet like 555 Carne Norte. It opens with Jackie Lou listening to her favorite workout music while eating 555 Carne Norte. As the music and her appetite intensifies, Jackie Lou taps her foot to the beat.

The foot-tapping triggers a powerful vibration that causes the floor to crack and the walls of neighboring houses to collapse.

The unsuspecting Jackie Lou, wearing earphones, continues to eat and tap her foot at the same time, oblivious to the tremor that she is causing.

The TVC ends with the 555 tagline: 'Yan ang sarap na may lakas protina!'

Jackie Lou says the commercial is a welcome break from the various things that keep her busy, including hosting a segment of "Unang Hirit," where she gives tips on quick workouts for women, and writing health and fitness columns for different publications like a daily newspaper and several fitness and sports magazines.

Jackie Lou was chosen to be the new 555 Carne Norte TVC model precisely because, as a fitness icon, she personifies health and fitness. The celebrity mom also embodies practicality and fun, which is what the brand is all about, according to its makers.

"You'll find 555 tuna, sardines or carne norte almost all the time on the Pinoy dining table," says 555 Carne Norte product manager Owen Cruz. "We believe this is because the brand captures our uniquely Pinoy taste and mirrors our happy nature and zest for life, at a price that delivers the best value for money."

"Family comes first," says Jackie Lou, mother of three and wife to actor Ricky Davao. "I make sure I spend enough quality time with them. My TV segment is now once a week. I write when I'm at home. I do my workouts when my kids are in school. I know how to balance my time."

"People come up to me and say that I encourage them to go back to the gym," she says.

"It's part of my advocacy. I'm happy I can inspire people to get fit. I'm glad I can communicate this message through my activities, including my role in the newest 555 Carne Norte TVC."

GMA lauds The Filipino Channel coverage of hostage drama

PRESIDENT Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo commended ABS-CBN for the network's coverage of the Angelo de la Cruz hostage drama, which played a significant role in the government's negotiation with Iraqi officials for the release of the contract worker.

In the recent conference of the Manila Overseas Press Club

(MOPC) where the President was the guest of honor, she complimented the ABS-CBN News Channel (ANC), shown on The Filipino Channel (TFC), for its extensive news coverage of the hostage situation.

"Incidentally," the President said during the conference, "may I take this opportunity to acknowledge ABS-CBN in the worldwide beaming (of the hostage situation), when De la Cruz was kidnapped. The Filipino Channel was watched by the captors, and ABS-CBN, recognizing this, changed its programming and included messages from the Philippines in their programs. That helped a great deal in the negotiations that eventually freed our countryman."

SHOW STOPPER

ANC's repeated airing, through TFC, of the Philippine government's decision to pull out the Filipino troops from Iraq was viewed by the captors, who then decided to free De la Cruz. ABS-CBN provided up-to-date reports from the start of the hostage crisis when the network launched the vigil "Kandila at Panalangin," for his homecoming after the terrorists held him captive for almost two weeks.

The highlight of the coverage happened in a room at the Philippine Embassy in Baghdad, where De la Cruz finally saw his wife and family on the TV screen and spoke with them as ANC transmitted the images of his family and their voices from a hotel room in Clark Field in Angeles, Pampanga.

Also aired by TFC from Amman, Jordan was the tearful reunion of De la Cruz with his father, children and wife, Arsenia.

Angela Bofill in Greenbelt celebration

POP and jazz diva Angela Bofill will perform in the second anniversary celebration of Merk's Bar Bistro on Sept. 27 and 28.

"Our original idea was really for Angela to open Merk's Bar Bistro two years ago but she was not available," said singer and bar owner Richard Merk, who met Bofill two years ago during a bar gig in Cleveland.

Known for her jazzed-up interpretations of love and despair, Bofill has been a celebrated recording artist since her recording debut in 1978 with the album "Angie," which produced the hits "This Time I'll Be Sweeter" and "Under the Moon and Over the Sky."

Another album, "Angel of the Night," spawned hits like "What I Wouldn't Do (For the Love of You)," "Too Tough," "Tonight I Give In," "Let Me Be the One" and "Tell Me Tomorrow."

Born and raised in New York City, Bofill has been singing since she was 4 years old and was exposed to a variety of musical styles from Aretha Franklin to Tio Puentes and Celia Cruz. A former member of New York's All City

BOFILL, at Merk's Bar Bistro

Chorus, she majored in theater at the Hart School of Music and trained in opera at the Manhattan School of Music.

Musical director for Bofill's performance at Merk's Bar Bistro is Lorrie Ilustre, who is also the musical director of the concerts of Patti Austin and Martin Nievera.

Angela Bofill's rare engagement in Manila is presented by Trademark Concepts Inc., Premier Wines and Spirits, BMG Records (Pilipinas) Inc., OLT Ventures, Pharmaceutical Products, Medical Supplies and Equipment, and Charm Med (We Care We Provide).

Lamangan, Lee present 'stage event of the year'

THE ULTIMATE symbol of manhood becomes the subject of a stage event as two award-winning stalwarts of the entertainment industry, director Joel Lamangan and writer Ricky Lee, present what they plan to be "the stage event of the year."

After nine years of being away from theater, filmmaker Lamangan returns with a piece that is bound to arouse controversy. "Penis Talks" is a perfect comeback for me," he says. "We want it to be the stage event of the year."

"It took me so long to do theater again because I needed a material that would excite me, that would inspire me," Lamangan adds. "Ricky Lee felt the same way. Ricky and I are confident that 'Penis Talks' is it."

The show, from producers Manny Valera of DMV Entertainment Inc. and Arnold Vegafría of ALV Productions, is live entertainment that the producers predict will be the talk of the town with characters that amuse, shock, jolt and titillate. It features dramatic segments interspersed with musical numbers.

JAY-R. Tense

SHOW TIME

After all, the producers say, the women had their "Vagina Monologues" and now it is the turn of the men to grab the spotlight.

The cast, however, is not all-male as it includes Christian Vasquez, Luis Alandy, Paolo Paraiso, Carlo Maceda, Jeffrey Hidalgo, Douglas Robinson, William Thio, Russel Simon, Jason Colis and Ricci Chan as well as Angeli de Leon and Jenine Desiderio.

"Penis Talks" is slated to be shown on Oct. 2, 3, 15 and 16 at the Music Museum in Greenhills, San Juan.

The show's creative team includes Jesse Lasaten, original score and musical direction; Monino Duque, lighting director; Mio Infante, scenographer; Ed Murillo, stage manager; Roobak Valle, assistant director; Robert Rodolfo, choreographer; and Beth delos Reyes-Rivera, executive producer.

Tickets are P2,000 (limited seats only), P1,500 and P1,000. For ticket inquiries, call Music Museum, 721-0635 or 721-6726, or DMV Entertainment, 415-0373 or 374-1361.

Can Jay-R fill up Folk Arts Theater?

JAY-R, the "prince of R&B," performs in "Gameface Reload!" on Sept. 25 at the Folk Arts Theater.

After turning "Bakit Pa Ba?" into a big hit, Jay-R captivated listeners again with his second single, "Kung Mahal Mo Siya" from Universal Records.

"I'm so tense," Jay-R confesses. "I've never been this nervous. Will I be able to fill up the Folk Arts? It's so huge!"

R&B princess Kyla, together with new show biz sensation Sandara Park and comedy concert queen Ai Ai de las Alas join Jay-R in "Gameface Reload." Front acts are Pretty Triszha and Anton Diva.

Musical director is Mon Faustino. Floy Quintos wrote the script. Louie Ignacio is stage director. Raquel Okada produces for Siegel Production. Jobert Sucaldito produces "Gameface Reload!"

Tickets for P1,200, P1,000, P750, P500, P300 and P100 are available at all National Bookstore outlets, Music Museum, Tower Records (Makati and Alabang), Robinson's Department Stores (including Cavite and Pampanga), Ticketworld (891-9999) and Folk Arts Theater Box Office.

Four 7610 cellular phones will be given away during the show.

JAYA comes home

AS THE DAUGHTER of a struggling Filipino singer-comedienne in the United States, Jaya Ramsey grew up moving from one home to another.

"We lived in LA, San Francisco, Daly City, Missouri, San Leandro, San Pedro, Carson," says the daughter of Elizabeth Ramsey. "Name it, we've lived there. I also tell my friends my mom and I used to live from one garage to another."

Jaya and Elizabeth left the country for the US in 1985, when Jaya was just 15. "I told my mom let's just stay abroad because it seemed like there was no future for us in the Philippines."

"Transferring was really tough. I told myself, one of these days I'm going to have to do something. My mother was not getting any younger, you see."

Jaya joined a band, and from her earnings, plus her mom's pension, they were able to make both ends meet. "We rented a garage converted into a bedroom. It was big enough for us and we were satisfied. That was where cooked, where we slept. We had friends come over who slept there, too."

In 1988, Jaya ran away from home. She got together with the group of singer-songwriter Stevie B and, when she was 19, she released her first album.

"I decided to go back to my mom in '92," says the prodigal daughter. "I didn't want to sing anymore. There was trouble with my lawyer, talent manager and agency. In 1993, I decided to quit singing all together because I figured that there was something other than singing for me. I did some office work."

Jaya met musician Andrew

Buffington in 1995. "He's an excellent musician. My mom and I really admired him." Jaya and Andrew would marry in 1998.

OUT OF THE CLOSET

"But I wasn't really serious about my singing," Jaya admits. "It was all work for me. I kept putting work aside because I was focusing on my marriage and my relationship with my sister, Susan. I was trying to get to know myself but couldn't because there were a lot of problems surfacing."

Two years after marrying, she filed for divorce, reconciled with her sister and bought a new house. "I started fresh," she says. "I felt rejuvenated. I felt like I'm finally doing something for myself, not dependent on anyone anymore."

"For a long time I had no sense of home," she adds. "So I bought a home. This is mine now. I will protect it the way it protects me."

The two-story house in Quezon City has three bedrooms. It is located near the GMA 7 studios, where Jaya works as host of "K! The One-Million Peso Videoke Challenge" and "SOP."

"I don't live with my mom," she says. "But I'm also looking for a place where I can build two houses, for her and for me. Just so I can watch over her."

Jaya and Elizabeth are busy preparing for their first major concert together, "Best of Both," on Sept. 17 and 18 at the Music Museum. Musical director is Gerard Salonga.

"It's our first time to do a show together at a venue this big," says Jaya. "We did a show at the Casino Filipino last year. It was actually a good one. There were positive write-ups about it. My manager said mom and I should definitely do a major concert."

"THIS IS MINE," says the singer of her home. "I will protect it the way it protects me."

For the Music Museum show, Elizabeth will sing songs she sang in the '70s, while Jaya will sing songs that "best describe where I am now in my life and what my mother means to me."

By Doris C. Dumlaog

THE ARROYO administration plans to brave the international capital market anew with a bond offering of at least $750 million despite its recent admission that it was amid of a fiscal crisis.

Banking sources said the government has mandated three investment banks—Credit Suisse First Boston, Deutsche Bank and JP Morgan Chase—to underwrite the new debt offering.

The sources said the fresh offering could be raised to as much as $1 billion depending on the market's appetite for the sovereign bonds.

It will be the first time for the government to test the global bond market again since President Macapagal-Arroyo declared a fiscal crisis two weeks ago.

But her economic managers have explained that based on the technical definition of a "fiscal crisis," the Philippines was not yet in such a situation since it was still able to service debts and to access the global bond markets.

A government source said proceeds from the new offering would be used to help the state-owned utility National Power Corp. with its refinancing requirements.

Over the last few years, the debt-strapped Napocor has not been able to raise funds on its own as investors sought hefty premiums. The utility's total debt is expected to hit $5.23 billion by year's end even without this new offering.

The source said the government's new offering would be done through the reopening of outstanding issuances, similar to the past three bond floats this year.

A reopening of existing bond floats in lieu of a fresh launch is a speedy way of raising funds and is seen as an easier way to gauge market demand.

Another banking source said talks about the government's new bond offering dragged down the prices of Philippine global debt papers on Friday.

Declining bond prices mean that yields are rising, or that it becomes more expensive for the issuer to service the debts.

"The market is now saturated with Philippine debt (paper)," the source said.

However, the source said it was no surprise that the government needed to source more foreign borrowings because it would have to absorb P500 billion worth of Napocor debts.

But the source said the government would still be able to raise funds from the global bond market depending on how much premium it would be willing to pay to investors.

Although the government has completed its $1.8-billion commercial borrowing requirement this year, bankers said it could be working to pre-fund the requirements for next year.

The Philippines' long-term foreign currency debt is rated "BB" by Standard & Poor's and Fitch Ratings and "Ba2" by Moody's Investor Service. These are speculative and non-investment grade ratings.

Market rally seen to continue

THE STOCK market may surrender some of last week's hefty gains, but most analysts expect trading to remain upbeat this week.

"The market's rally is not overdone. After its breakout there will be a pullback," said Joey Roxas,

Piltel seen to take lion's share of revenue split with Smart

By Clarissa S. Batino

PILIPINO Telephone Corp. is likely to end up with between 65 percent and 85 percent of sales from Talk 'N Text—up from 50 percent—once a new revenue-sharing agreement is forged with Smart Communications Inc., according to Smart president and Piltel chair Napoleon Nazareno.

At the same time, Nazareno said the management fees that Smart and Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. have been collecting from Piltel could also go down.

Nazareno said these changes, expected within the fourth quarter, would enable Piltel to post substantial profits and utilize billions of pesos in tax credits incurred from years of operating in the red.

"We hired an international telecom consultant to help determine the appropriate revenue-sharing deal," said the Smart president. "Offhand, I believe it could range somewhere between 65 and 85 percent in favor of Piltel."

Currently, Smart gets half of Piltel's revenues from Talk 'N Text for allowing the latter access to its network. Last year, Piltel's cellular phone revenues reached about P9 billion. In the first half, Piltel and Smart split about P5.8 billion in sales.

In the first half, Piltel's management fees increased 30 percent to P497 million. These are payments related to outsourcing arrangements with PLDT and Smart.

"Since Piltel had crossed the critical mass of subscribers, we are also reviewing the fees, like management fees being charged," said Nazareno. "We could not charge Piltel anymore at the same level we have been charging when it was just building a subscriber base."

As of the first half, Piltel's Talk 'N Text subscribers are pegged at about 3.55 million, up from 2.22 million a year ago and only about 377,000 in 1998.

Nazareno said Talk 'N Text was the brand Smart would use to improve its market share in the "financially challenged" segment of the population.

"Piltel is poised to take advantage of the D and E market," said Nazareno, concurrent president of PLDT. "As we go further into the lower segment, Talk 'N Text is the brand that will allow us to penetrate the market deeper."

Even without the improved revenue-sharing deal and reduced management fees, Piltel ended the first half with an unexpected net profit of P809 million, a turnaround from net losses of P535 million a year ago and double already of the company's P402 million profit forecast for the whole of 2004.

Piltel is now looking at a net profit of P1.1 to P1.2 billion this year, according to Manuel Pangilinan, chair of Piltel parent firm PLDT.

Analysts said that given Piltel's strong potential, its share price could reach between P2.50 and P3 this year, especially once a favorable revenue-sharing agreement was reached.

This year, Piltel's share price had surged by more than 115 percent. But Smart bought a 47 percent stake in Piltel from PLDT for only 20.59 centavos per share. Piltel shares closed at P2.75 each on Friday from P2.60 the previous day.

"I think the market has factored in the impact once all these equity and revenue sharing deals are completed," said Nazareno. "Piltel will be closely aligned with Smart once Smart has completed the purchase of the 92 percent."

Pangilinan said that a new revenue deal between Smart and Piltel would be approved by their respective boards of directors not later than the first week of November.

Price breakdown

THE FILIPINO and American partners of PriceSmart warehouse chain have finally decided to part ways, given their long-festering management differences.

According to the grapevine, the PriceSmart board has agreed that each side has no choice but to either buy out or be bought out by the other. Each side has been given one week to nominate their own appraiser to conduct their respective valuation of the company.

The decision was reached amid a tumultuous meeting Thursday where the Filipino group, led by vice chair William Go and Danilo Olondriz of the Metrobank Group, objected to the proposal of the San Diego, California-based chain to convert the $10.5-million loan extended by International Finance Corp. to the Philippine operations into peso-denominated loan.

Except for the Philippine exposure, the San Diego headquarters earlier agreed to convert the rest of its IFC loans for its worldwide operations into PriceSmart shares on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

According to the pro-Filipino grapevine, the local group decided to immediately shoot down the loan conversion proposal after being informed by the US management that it expects the four Philippine stores to lose another P300 million next year, after posting P300 million in losses in the 2003 fiscal year.

The Filipino partners own 48 percent of the venture, with Metrobank's First Metro Investment Corp. accounting for 10 percent. The US partner, the first foreign retailer to enter the country under the Retail Trade Liberation Law, controls 52 percent of the venture.

under the pricing and supply impositions from the San Diego HQ, resulting in the Philippine operations, according to the grapevine, shelling out to the US principal a whopping 88 percent of total sales just for the cost of goods alone.

In addition, the Filipino partners want to replace the American expatriate country manager, Benjamin Woods, with a local, given Woods' $168,000 a year salary.

The expatriate package also includes a P200,000-month rent for a North Forbes house with a swimming pool, two first class roundtrip tickets to anywhere in the world each year, an Expedition for him and a Honda CR-V for the wife, aside from two full-time drivers and three live-in maids.

Good guys, bad guys

THE GOOD news about the Guy family/3D feud is that the Filipino-Chinese Chamber of Commerce has agreed to mediate but on condition that both sides stop talking to the press.

The not-so-good news is that Gilbert Guy, the 3D heir who is keeping his wheelchair-bound father away from his mother and sisters while the talks are ongoing, has taken the offensive against his banker, Asia United

FirstPac loses interest in SMC stake

By Clarissa S. Batino

FIRST Pacific Co. Ltd. is no longer interested in buying San Miguel Corp. and would rather expand its presence in the Philippines through infrastructure projects like the integration of the South Luzon road network, according to its managing director, Manuel Pangilinan.

"That (San Miguel) is off the radar screen. We would rather concentrate on infrastructure projects," said Pangilinan, who chairs Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. and Smart Communications Inc.

It was reported in June that Pangilinan revived his interest in acquiring SMC, the country's largest food and beverage company owned 20 percent by Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco and about 25 percent by the government.

Before acquiring a 24.3-percent stake in PLDT in 1998, First Pacific was originally targeting SMC.

In turn, SMC also expressed interest in buying into First Pacific's PT Indofood Sukses Makmur Tbk as part of the local firm's regional expansion.

Indofood is 51.9-percent owned by First Pacific and is the leading processed food manufacturer in Indonesia. The listed company is engaged in the manufacturing and distribution of noodles, flour, edible oils and fats, food seasonings, baby food and snack food.

First Pacific, a company that Pangilinan founded in the early '80s using the capital of Indonesia's Salim clan, had been looking to expand in the region through telecom or food.

But its expansion plans in the region shifted to infrastructure after the government invited new investors to consider putting in money into the rehabilitation and integration of the South Luzon road network.

Pangilinan said the Hong Kong-based conglomerate would like to increase its stake in the Manila infrastructure project and become a more meaningful joint venture partner of Indonesian firm PT. Citra Lamtoto Gung Persada.

Non-tax measures

ARE THERE ways we can move toward closing the budget gap without new tax legislation? Is it possible to avoid a looming fiscal disaster without resorting to new tax measures?

The quick answer to the first question is yes. As for the second question, the key word is "possible." Possible? Maybe yes. Probable? No. Let me explain.

Taxpayer honesty is basic

The most important but also the most difficult way would be to plug or at least minimize the massive leakages in the government's potential revenues through tax evasion and graft and corruption. The Department of Finance had estimated in a 2002 study that about P250 billion is lost annually to tax evasion alone. This already far exceeds the government's deficit, targeted at P198 billion this year, and P185 next year.

That is why it is possible, strictly speaking, to balance the budget without new tax measures. This one is entirely up to us taxpayers, large and small alike. This ought to be the main part of the wide-burden-sharing being asked of all sectors. Donating your jewelry and putting some money in the "Bayanihan Fund" are good, but are at best symbolic and can't get us out of the crisis. Needless to say, I would welcome being proven wrong on this. Charity is good, but more basic is honesty.

Beyond moral suasion, tax evaders

No FREE LUNCH

Cielito F. Habito

need to be deterred by a demonstrated determination to bring offenders to justice. Up to now, we're all still waiting for a really big fish to be put behind bars for tax evasion. My continuing lack of optimism on this comes from the widespread perception, justified or not, that rather than pursue the biggest among them, our leadership is even coddling them, beholden to them because of their fat campaign contributions, or because judges are for sale. If in the eyes of the public, the top tax offenders are even being rewarded, how can one expect smaller tax evaders down the line to become more honest with their payments?

Addressing corruption

The P250-billion estimate above doesn't even count leakages of revenues actually collected but finding their way into the pockets of corrupt government officials rather than legitimate government expenditures. Estimates vary widely, but given the wide practice of "SOPs" (the now commonly-used term for illegal commissions and kickbacks), ghost and "15-30" employees, apart from under-the-table deals between taxpayers and corrupt tax officials, the lost amount would be just as staggering.

What can be done? I would begin with a serious management (not just financial) audit of all government agencies. Lifestyle checks on officials are welcome, and need to be institutionalized. More basic is transparency in government operations and transactions. Congress should pass the long-pending bill on Right to Public Information. We should tap our rich and diverse NGO community and formalize a system of accredited NGO "Guardian Angels" in every agency (i.e. to guard them from sin!). There should be at least two such accredited NGOs per agency (so they can watch out for each other), with each being provided full access to agency information and data. I'd suggest including this provision in the above bill. RA 9184 has already instituted procurement reforms, and the government's new e-procurement program should be adopted universally. And we must have a truly independent and unshakable anti-graft body to bring corrupt public officials to justice.

The Indonesian firm and state-owned Philippine National Construction Corp. own Citra Metro Manila Tollways Corp., which operates the 9.3-kilometer Skyway or elevated highway running from Magallanes to Bicutan.

First Pacific's local subsidiary, Metro Pacific Corp., owns 10 percent of Citra Metro Manila through Metro Strategic Infrastructure Holdings Inc.

Pangilinan said First Pacific would like to come in to provide financial muscle to the P12.5-billion upgrade and integration of the South Luzon Expressway (Slex) all the way to Batangas port.

"We would like this to be a joint venture between ourselves and the Indonesian firm," he said.

"We can confirm that work is underway at Metro Strategic Infrastructure Holdings Inc. to develop a business plan for integrating one or more of the various tollway systems in the Philippines," Metro Pacific said in a disclosure to the Philippine Stock Exchange.

The local subsidiary of First Pacific said it was working closely with its Indonesian partner on the project. "We are engaged in discussions at various levels with government regulatory agencies as well as owners and operators of the other tollway systems."

Four Continued Excellences!

Four Continued Excellence!

Continued excellence indeed! For within the span of two years, four prestigious awards can attest to E. Excel's unwavering commitment in providing excellent health and boundless business opportunities.

After being acclaimed as the 2004 Most Outstanding Multilevel Marketing Company from the Asia-Pacific Excellence Awards (APEA), E. EXCEL INTERNATIONAL PHILIPPINES, INC. thought that this couldn't get any better. But this was not until another esteemed award giving body came knocking on its door once again. Within merely four months after the APEA experience, E. Excel yet again received a similar recognition as this year's TOP GLOBAL MULTILEVEL MARKETING COMPANY from the 2004 National Consumers Quality Awards (NCQA). Not only that, but the NCQA also recognized one of E. Excel's foremost products, MILLENNIUM, as the 2004 TOP FORMULATED HEALTH DRINK.

In support of the National Consumers Affairs, NCQA gave the highly desired awards last August 26, 2004 at the AFP Theater, Camp Aguinaldo. Just like all the awards E. Excel reaped, it remarkably struck high points in the criteria of Product Feature and Quality, Contribution to Customers or Public Service, Pricing, Public Opinion and Survey - leaving everyone else awe-struck.

Garnering four celebrated awards within two years, including last year's Outstanding Functional Foods and Skin Care Manufacturer from the Family and Consumers Choice Awards, is clear indication that recognition is inevitable if one is driven by a noble cause – such as sharing the gift of health and knowledge. The very cause E. Excel will continually live and uphold.

Now, all that's left for every E. Exceller to do is surpass the standards it has set for itself.

Morgan Stanley raises 2004 growth forecast for RP to 5.6%

By Michelle V. Remo

INTERNATIONAL investment bank Morgan Stanley has upgraded its 2004 economic growth projection for the Philippines to 5.6 percent following the government's announcement that the economy grew at an unexpectedly robust 6.2 percent in the second quarter.

Morgan Stanley originally forecast that the country's gross domestic product (GDP) growth for 2004 would only reach 4.5 percent.

"The Philippine economy has performed better than we expected in the first half of this year. Despite our belief that the economic deceleration is already well underway in the third quarter, we are raising our full-year 2004 GDP growth forecast," Morgan Stanley said in a paper on the Philippine economy.

The investment bank noted that private consumption remained the key driver of the local economy as it was boosted by increases

No change in SEC, says Barin

By Elizabeth L. Sanchez

THERE will be no reorganization of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), according to Fe Barin, newly appointed SEC chair.

"Directors are already there," Barin said. "It is too early to say that since the existing setup has been in place for only two years."

"Unless their performance is wanting, I trust chair Lilia's choice," she said, referring to Lilia Bautista, Barin's predecessor and RP's new ambassador to Belgium. "If it (SEC setup) is working, so be it."

Barin admitted that she is still studying the securities laws and its related rules. She added that her priority now would be to get to know the capital markets as much as she could, as well as issues pending before the SEC.

Barin has spent most of her professional life at the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas since 1956 in various capacities. She also served briefly as chair of the Energy Regulatory Commission in August 2001 until September 2002. Before she transferred to the SEC on Sept. 1, she was a Monetary Board member of the BSP.

The SEC has been cited as the most "sincere" government agency fighting corruption, according to the results of the Social Weather Station polls.

SEC bested 24 government agencies in the SWS Transparent and Accountable Governance (TAG) Enterprises surveys in 2003 and 2004.

The top three agencies are the SEC, the Supreme Court and the Department of Health. During this period, SEC garnered a gross sincerity rating of 76 percent, followed by the Supreme Court's 74 percent, and DOH's 69 percent.

Last year, the SEC and Supreme Court tied for first place. Then SEC chair Lilia Bautista had said she was heartened by the positive results of the reforms put up since 2000 when the Securities Regulation Code was passed.

These reforms included the reorganization of the SEC, focusing on its regulatory core functions; the demutualization of the Philippine Stock Exchange or its conversion into a stock and profit corporation from a company widely held by stockbrokers; the issuance and enforcement of the Code of Corporate Governance and the computerization of the SEC.

Taguig traders form alliance

BUSINESS locators in Taguig have formed a business council, following the recent holding of the First Taguig Business Conference.

An initiative of the Taguig local government unit, the conference was meant to forge a healthy partnership between the LGU and the Taguig business community.

Taguig Mayor Freddie R. Tinga said he hoped that, through the council, the business sector and the local government would become strong partners in realizing Taguig's objective of becoming a prime growth hub and the No. 1 city of Metro Manila by 2020.

The partnership was meant to ensure that Taguig would have an environment conducive to business.

"For one, we will discuss with the council how to make sure that Taguig has the lowest tax rates in Metro Manila," Tinga said.

Taguig's first business summit, held on Aug. 27, was attended by key executives of existing locators led by Andrew Tan and Luke Tan of Megaworld; Charlie Rufino of Bonifacio West Development Corp.; Isidro Consonji of DMCI Holdings; Francis Roxas and Dindo Fernando of Ayala Land; Wilbur Chan, ARS International and Victor Tan, Heritage Park.

Jose Jesus F. Roces, of the Asian Institute of Management, facilitated the summit. Roces asked the participants to rank Taguig under seven competitiveness drivers: cost of doing business, dynamism of local economy, linkages and accessibility, human resources and training, infrastructure, responsiveness of local government unit and quality of life.

These are the same measures the AIM uses in ranking the economic competitiveness of different urban centers in the country under the Philippine Cities Competitiveness Ranking Project.

On a scale of 1 to 10 percent, with 10 percent as the highest, the 35 summit participants gave Taguig an overall rating of 5.97 percent. Roces said this rating was decent enough considering that Taguig was still a municipality.

Summit participants, divided into smaller groups, were made to propose measures that could improve Taguig in terms of the seven competitiveness drivers.

Other companies represented in the conference were Robinson's Land, NBC, Ford Motors, Philtown Inc., Temic Automotive Philippines, Suy Sing Commercial Corp, PSI Technologies, Hatch Asia Building, Cats Motors, McDonald's and Food Terminal Inc.

LBP loans to priority sectors up

STATE-OWNED Land Bank of the Philippines disbursed P75 billion or 60.5 percent of its total portfolio to priority sectors as of end-June.

Landbank, which has dislodged Equitable PCI Bank as the country's third biggest bank, said on Friday its total lending to priority sectors in the first semester stood P10.4 billion higher than the end-December level of P64.3 billion.

The bank's priority sectors include the farmers and fisherfolk, small and medium enterprises and micro-enterprises, livelihood projects, agribusiness, agri-infrastructure, agri-related projects and environment-related projects.

"This demonstrates Landbank's commitment to its mandate of promoting countryside development," said Landbank president Margarito Teves.

Of the total releases, loans to agribusiness reflected the largest share at 15 percent or P18.2 billion. This was followed by loans to SMEs and micro-enterprises with about 13 percent share or P16.6 billion of the bank's total loan portfolio.

Loans to farmers and fisherfolk reached P14.9 billion, representing a 12 percent share while agri-infrastructure and agri-related projects accounted for P10.2 billion and P10 billion, respectively, both accounting for about 8 percent share. Doris C. Dumlao

DTI proposes establishment of medical zones

By Ronnel W. Domingo

THE GOVERNMENT is looking at establishing "medical zones" in the country as the largest health care provider in Japan committed to build a $100-million hospital and retirement facility in the country.

Trade Secretary Cesar V. Purisima said the government made a breakthrough in its efforts to promote medical tourism through Tokushukai Medical Corp.'s plan to put up a 1,000-bed facility.

"This is a good start (but) we also need to work with Congress for a law that would allow foreign doctors to practice here, even only in designated areas," Purisima said.

If a law is passed creating medical zones, he said patients from overseas—like those from

PURISIMA

Japan—could enjoy care and services similar to what they get back in their home countries.

The official reiterated that it would be good for the country to develop the medical and retirement services sector considering the rapid aging of the population in developed countries, which put pressure on the cost of health services there.

"Even if you have only Japan as your sole market, you will have more than enough (to make a viable industry)," Purisima said.

Tokushukai is operator of Japan's largest chain of hospitals, with 160 facilities including 47 hospitals. Each hospital has between 190 and 600 beds.

In May, Purisima said another Japanese firm—Sanyo Emeritus Corp.—was looking at the possibility of building a retirement village in Tagaytay City.

He said Tagaytay was being eyed due to its proximity to Metro Manila and its medical facilities.

He said the local health care sector had a potential to grow into a $1-billion industry.

"The country's medical professionals are world-class and capable of performing and delivering complicated medical treatment," the official said.

"By supporting the development of the industry, the country can offer cheaper but world-class medical services to overseas patients from the United States, Europe and Japan."

Last week, the European Chamber of Commerce of the Philippines said it was exploring the possibility of making the country a prime health care destination in the world.

However, ECCP executive vice president Henry Schumacher said the country must first address its image problems on health and hygiene as well as peace and stability.

Schumacher said there was also the lack of facilities and infrastructure, the language barrier with the non-English speaking market.

Also, Philippine hospitals should be accredited with public health care systems in the US, Europe and Japan, and with private sector health insurance providers.

Rules on securities custodianship OKd

By Doris C. Dumlaog

THE BANGKO Sentral ng Pilipinas has required banks and quasi-banks to surrender their securities holdings—whether local or foreign currency-denominated—to an accredited third party custodian by Nov. 16 this year.

BSP Officer-in-Charge Alberto Reyes said the Monetary Board approved on Thursday the circular finalizing the regulations on securities custodianship. At the same time, it rejected calls for the deferment of the rule's implementation.

In line with this, all banks and quasi-banks will be prohibited from entering into any securities transaction with an institution that has outstanding securities that were not delivered to a third party custodian.

A securities custodian safeguards the securities of the client, holds title to the securities in a nominee capacity, executes purchase or sale orders, represents clients in corporate actions and conducts mark-to-market valuation.

The BSP has tightened the regulations on the securities custodianship and registry operations to ensure investor protection in the hope of gaining their confidence and encouraging their participation in the development of the domestic capital market.

The use of third-party custodians, for instance, is seen to minimize unauthorized repurchase agreements as the underlying securities will no longer be kept by banks and quasi-banks.

"Those with securities transactions regardless of date of execution must comply by Nov. 16," Reyes said.

The BSP has so far accredited four banks as securities custodians—HSBC, Citibank, Deutsche Bank and Bank of the Philippine Islands.

Reyes said the BSP turned down the request to defer the effectivity date for transactions involving foreign currency-denominated securities purchased by residents.

He said there was also a proposal to exempt the retail T-bonds from the custodianship requirement for the sake of small investors, who will benefit from lower transaction costs.

However, Reyes said the cost could still be kept manageable for retail investors using the registry system of the Bureau of Treasury.

The circular said existing securities holders who would prefer not to deliver their securities to a BSP-accredited third party custodian could do so subject to the following conditions:

- The custody arrangements with dealing banks have been in existence prior to the effectivity of the circular;

- The client informed his dealing bank in writing that he was not willing to have his securities delivered to a third party custodian and authorized the dealing bank to disclose to the BSP that he has outstanding securities holdings;

- Submit a list of the clients who refused to deliver their securities holdings to a BSP accredited custodian, and,

The BSP said it would be the responsibility of any BSP-regulated institution to find out that the person purchasing securities from it had no outstanding securities holdings kept outside a third-party custodian.

By Michelle V. Remo

IN A BID to raise the level of tax compliance, the Department of Finance has decided that tax remittances of all taxpayers shall no longer be confidential and will be regularly published for everybody's scrutiny.

The DOF has directed the Bureau of Internal Revenue to publish every year the tax remittances of both corporate and individual taxpayers. The DOF is looking at publishing the tax payments via the BIR's website for easy access.

"Through this move, rich people paying small taxes will be put on the spot," said Grace Tan, finance undersecretary. "This will prod people to ask questions like, 'why is my neighbor, who is much well off than I, pay a much smaller amount of tax?'"

The DOF official said the move to publish tax payments would complement the proposal to require all taxpayers to regularly submit their statements of assets and liabilities (SALs). With the SALs, the revenue agency could detect whether or not taxpayers remit the proper amount of taxes.

The submission of SALs is incorporated in the Tax Amnesty bill, which the House of Representatives' committee on ways and means agreed to approve this week.

Under the Tax Amnesty bill, delinquent taxpayers shall be immune from penalties and will only be required to pay a small portion of their unpaid tax liabilities. The idea is to convince underground businesses to come out so that the government may generate additional revenue from those that do not normally pay taxes.

But aside from the objective of collecting more taxes, the tax amnesty proposal is also aimed at strengthening the BIR's capacity to detect tax cheats through the use of SALs and the linkage of database of government agencies.

Tan said the DOF is pushing for the regular submission of SALs, contrary to Congress' versions of the Tax Amnesty bill requiring that the SALs should only be submitted once.

"If Congress will approve the regular filing of SALs, we can better detect tax cheats by tracking the changes in their tax remittances and by comparing their tax declarations from previous ones," Tan said.

The Tax Amnesty bill, various versions of which are being consolidated by Congress, is expected to be the first legislated tax measure of the Arroyo administration.

FPI has room for one more tax measure

By Ronnel W. Domingo

THE FEDERATION of Philippine Industries said it was amenable to yet another tax amnesty measure proposed in Congress if steps would only be taken to ensure that this would be the last one to be implemented.

In a position paper, FPI officials said they had strong reservations on the government's move to grant yet another tax amnesty as this "entails a moral hazard due to the encouragement it will give to cheating."

The group said a new tax amnesty would help condition the minds of the public that it would be permissible to cheat since there would be future amnesties anyway.

FPI said the 15 tax amnesties granted since 1973 leads one to question the effectiveness of such grants.

"Also, forgiving tax evaders implies penalizing dutiful business taxpayers who are competing with tax evaders," the FPI officials added.

Malacañang broached the subject in July, with a new tax amnesty being part of a package of new tax measures that was touted to solve the country's budget deficit by broadening the tax base.

The government expects to spend this year some P200 billion more than its budget, roughly the same level it did in 2003.

But the FPI said it was open to the amnesty proposal, provided that measures were taken to offset the "inequitable treatment" of taxpayers who pay on time.

The group also raised concerns on whether the proposed amnesty would ensure that the so-called underground economy would surface.

"(Experiences) from previous amnesties do not bear this out," the FPI said.

BIDS AND AWARDS COMMITTEELoan Agreement #PH-P200
September 3, 2004

INVITATION TO APPLY FOR ELIGIBILITY AND TO BID

The Republic of the Philippines, through the Department of Education, has received an official Development Assistance (ODA) loan from the Japan Bank for International Cooperation (JBIC) in the amount of P1,749 Million (Y7,210 Million) under Loan Agreement #PH-P200, towards the financing of the Secondary Education Development and Improvement Project (SEIDIP) dated December 28, 1999. It is intended that part of the proceeds of this loan will be applied to eligible payments for the new construction of school buildings. In view hereof, the Government of the Philippines through the DepEd-SEIDIP with the participation of the Local Government Unit (LGU) of the City of Davao as Implementor, heretofore called the Agency, wishes to receive bids for the new construction of the following:

FOUR (4) STOREY SIX (6) CLASSROOM BUILDING WITH LIBRARY in Tabon M. Estrella National High School located at Barangay Tabon, Bislig City, Surigao del Sur.

Disbursement of the ODA loan by JBIC will be subject, in all respects, to the terms and conditions of the Loan Agreement, including the disbursement procedures and the "Guidelines for Procurement under JBIC ODA Loans". No Party other than the Department of Education shall derive any rights from the Loan Agreement or have any claims to loan proceeds. The above Loan Agreement will cover only part of the project cost. As for the remaining portion, the Agency will take appropriate measures for finance. JBIC requires that bidders and contractors, as well as DepEd-SEIDIP under contract funded with JBIC ODA loans and other Japanese ODA, observe the highest standard of ethics during the procurement and execution of such contracts. In pursuance of this policy, JBIC:

- Will reject a proposal for award if it determines that the bidder recommended for award has engaged in corrupt or fraudulent practices in competing for the contract in question;
- Will recognize a contractor as ineligible, for a stated period of time, to be awarded contract funded with JBIC ODA loans if, at any time, determines that the contractor has engaged in corrupt or fraudulent practices in competing for, or in executing, another contract financed by JBIC ODA loans or other Japanese ODA.

Bidding is open to all Philippine Contractors Accreditation Board (PCAB)-registered contractors or joint venture contractors, with PCAB License at least Medium A Classification on Building. Prospective Bidders/Contractors shall meet the minimum qualifying criteria of three (3) years construction experience. The schedule of activities for the above listed projects is indicated below:

- Application and Issuance of Eligibility Forms (Upon payment of a non-refundable fee of P200)
- Submission of Letter of Intent and duly accomplished Application for Eligibility
- Issuance of Bid Documents to Eligible Bidders (Upon payment of non-refundable fee of 5,000.00)
- Pre-Bid Conference
- Opening of Bids

- Sept. 14-27, 2004 to 5:00PM at the BAC Secretariat Office, CPDO, City Hall, Bislig City
- 5:00 PM of Oct. 4, 2004 at the BAC Secretariat Office
- October 11-18, 2004 at the BAC Secretariat Office
- Oct. 26, 2004, 2:00 PM at the City Eng'g Office, City Hall, Bislig City
- Nov. 9, 2004, 2:00 PM at City Eng'g Office, City Hall, Bislig City

All particulars relative to eligibility, bidding, evaluation of bids, award of contract and enforcement hereof shall be governed by the Implementing Rules &amp; Regulations (IRR-A) of R.A. 9184 otherwise known as the "Government Procurement Reform Act"

The BAC reserves the right to reject any Application for Eligibility, or all bids, declare a failure of bidding or not award the contract if, among others, there is evidence of collusion, including any act which restricts, suppresses or defeats competition, waive any required formality therein, and to make an award to the bidder whose proposal is most advantageous to the government.

The BAC also assumes no obligation whatsoever to compensate or indemnify the bidder(s) for any expenses or loss that they may incur in the preparation of its bids, or any obligation to inform the affected bidder(s) on the ground(s) of BAC action, nor does it guarantee that an award will be made.

All communications should be addressed to the undersigned at the aforementioned address.

Smart enters wireless Internet mart with Meridian buy-in

By Erwin Lemuel G. Oliva
Contributor

PHILIPPINE Long Distance Telephone Co. (PLDT), through wholly-owned subsidiary Smart Communications, is set to enter the wireless Internet market after buying 40 percent of the common shares of Meridian Telekom Inc.

PLDT and Smart spokesperson Ramon Isberto told Infotech that the deal will broaden the wireless service offerings of Smart.

"With this acquisition, we now have satellite, cellular and wireless broadband Internet services," Isberto said.

PLDT said in a separate statement the "acquisition will strengthen Smart's position in the wireless data segment and is in line with Smart's overall strategy of providing the widest range of wireless services in the most innovative manner possible."

Isberto said the deal is expected to be finalized by the end of 2005 but will be subject to various regulatory approvals, especially if Smart intends to increase its stake in MTI to 100 percent.

Last week, Meridian Telekom chair Myla Villanueva denied news that the company was being sold to Smart.

She said "there was nothing major happening in Meridian. But it is doing a lot of projects with (Smart). So I think it was misinterpreted," Villanueva said in a telephone interview.

"I really don't know where our relationship ends and starts," she added.

Villanueva said Meridian will remain independent, as it expects to introduce more aggressive pricing for its fixed wireless broadband services to the small- and medium-sized enterprises beginning next year.

Earlier, a former telecommunications executive who declined to be named told Infotech that Smart was buying Meridian because it was interested in the wireless broadband market in the Philippines. "It is a done deal," the executive said.

Meanwhile, Mosaic Communications Inc. president William Torres said the acquisition of Meridian would benefit Smart.

"This deal will widen the services of Smart," he added.

Torres said Smart is obviously interested in Meridian's fixed broadband wireless technology called Wi-Max, which it has been offering to Philippine clients. He said Smart is also likely interested in using Meridian's fixed wireless broadband network to interconnect its cellular networks.

Wi-Max provides wireless connectivity to organizations. Unlike Wi-Fi (which is essentially a wireless local area network) which provides connectivity up to a radius of 300 feet, Wi-Max extends up to 15 kilometers or even farther, making it a wireless wide area network.

AMD partners with Oracle, Sun for enterprise market

ADVANCED Micro Devices (AMD) Inc. has partnered with Oracle and Sun Microsystems to penetrate the country's enterprise market, an official told Philippine reporters.

While the chipmaker has yet to put up an office in the Philippines, AMD is starting to "create demand" for its high-performance Opteron chip that will work with Oracle's 10g technology for grid computing on Sun boxes.

Tan Hong Hock, regional manager for enterprise business development for AMD South Asia Pacific, said the AMD-Sun-Oracle partnership also intends to "encourage" Philippine independent software vendors (ISVs) to develop solutions around the technology of the three vendors.

Tan said the partners will assist ISVs in commercializing homegrown solutions on a regional level.

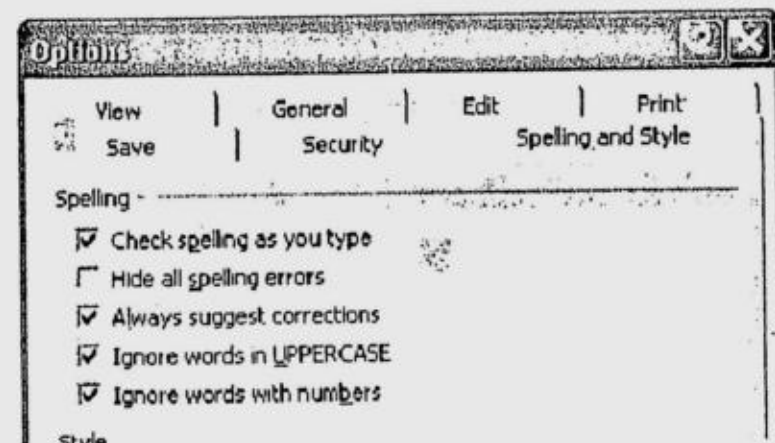

The AMD executive admitted that, in the Philippines, the chipmaker has traditionally been strong in the consumer market. This year, it will roll out more initiatives to break into the enterprise space.

Meanwhile, Gunasekharan Chellappan, regional director of alliance and channels of Oracle Corp. South Asia, said the joint initiative of the three vendors will enable small- and medium-sized enterprises deploy the software vendor's 10g technologies.

Oracle, in collaboration with SunPhil and AMD, will assist ISVs in porting applications to Oracle 10g, he said.

would take every opportunity to learn as much as she could and share the same experience with her classmates.

"There were so many things I learned here that I'm sure would not immediately reach our school. When I get back, I'll give insights on what are the latest technologies and where these are being used," she said.

Some of the students who attended Y4IT said their IT knowledge mostly centers on technical aspects and is not geared for practical application. That changed when the students got acquainted with some of the Y4IT speakers who spoke about careers in IT. Among the careers mentioned were in bioinformatics, mobile application and gaming development.

A student who requests anonymity said prior to taking up an IT course, he was already studying biology. He took notice of what Dr. Alvin Marcelo of UP Manila's medical informatics division said about the growing business of bioinformatics.

The student said he was just plain curious about IT when he was still a biology major. But after hearing what Dr. Marcelo said, he knew there's a place for biology in IT. He plans to enter this field later.

Third year computer science student Josef Buac, also of UP Visayas, said he became more convinced to enter the mobile and video game development business after sitting through the presentations of Microsoft, Level-Up Games (distributor of Ragnarok) and Ateneo de Manila, which is doing mobile applications. Previously, Buac thought that mobile application and game development were largely for enthusiasts. He later realized that these were serious industries that could become major markets where the Philippines could excel.

"I never realized I'd learn this much in so little time and there is so much more to learn. I'm happy I was sent to attend this event. I just wish more of us could attend but I'll do my part by imparting what I've learned here to my classmates," Buac said.

A Force to reckon with

As my encounter with Boss Nass shows, however, just because you're playing a character in Star Wars doesn't mean anyone's gonna want to make a movie about you—at least, not yet. I have to confess that prior to last week, I've never played any MMORPG, or any MMO game for that matter. But since a free 14-day trial version of the full SWG game is currently available for download, I figured I might as well take on one of the biggest and best MMORPGs for my first encounter.

After activating the trial account, it was pretty easy to get into the swing of things in SWG. In fact, I wish I skipped the tutorial phase (you have the option to do this) because any question you might have can be easily answered by browsing the in-game Holocron, which you can bring up either by clicking on the appropriate icon on your HUD (head's up display) or by pressing Control H. After logging on, you have to create a character, first by selecting which server (which is referred to as a galaxy). Your choice of server will determine on which planet you'll start out and whether it will be lightly or heavily populated with other players.

Next, you have to choose your character's race and gender, whether you'll play a human, Rodian, Mon Calamari, Bothan, Wookiee, Twi'lek, Trandoshan or Zabrak. You can spend time customizing your character's looks or just randomize. Then you'll have to pick out a starting profession: artisan, brawler, entertainer, marksman, medic or scout.

The beauty of SWG is that the classes of characters aren't restrictive. You're not just a fighter or a ranger or whatever, but can choose which skills you'll specialize in—you can even become a jack-of-all-trades, but this means it will be harder for you to get far in any single profession. These six basic professions only provide the basic abilities of your characters—my character, for example, is a brawler and I decided to train in the use of two-handed weapons. I could have just as easily chosen to specialize in unarmed combat, one-handed weapons and polearms, and in fact I still can since I've also gained experience points in unarmed combat. SWG doesn't offer levels (a 15th-level fighter or a 20th-level magic-user, anyone?), but you have an upward path to advanced professions based on the specializations you choose. And if you decide at some point that your heart is really set on becoming an entertainer rather than a warrior, you can choose to change professions and live the life you want without being penalized for it.

After the initial tedium of creating your character, the first thing you'll notice about SWG is that it's a gorgeous game. You feel that you're actually exploring the sandy wastes of WHAT, you mean I have to walk some more?

Tatooine—my starting planet—and that you really are in a galaxy far, far away. The good news too is that SWG was designed with 56K dial-up users in mind, so you don't need broadband to enjoy all this beauty without lag and atrocious frame rates. In fact, just to test LucasArts' claim, I tried playing it with a PLDT Vibe dial-up connection, and I'm happy to report that I didn't experience any difference from playing it with my DSL connection. Whether on dial-up or DSL, however, every now and then the game does have some graphical hiccups—when you're entering a new building or area for example—but this doesn't happen that often. More annoying is the obvious draw-in distance—I hate it when parts of the terrain suddenly pop out as you move closer. Also, since you have a 3D camera that you can adjust to different angles, I caught a hilarious glitch when your character is swimming in water. If you move the camera at a certain angle, the water disappears and your character will look like he's floating on air. Just check out the screenshot.

One of the drawbacks of SWG is actually something that's common to most MMORPGs and traditional RPGs, for that matter—all that damn walking. You have no idea how huge this game world is until you've walked from one city to another, and another, and another—and this is just one planet. Sure, you can take a ride at a shuttleport to go to another city or even at a starport to go off-planet, but when your character's a poor shmoe who's just starting out, you want to hold on to all the credits you can. But no matter how gorgeous your surroundings are—and in some places SWG looks really amazing—you really do get tired of walking and walking. Let's have a show hands: Anybody out there who's really excited about walking? Didn't think so, yet you spend hours of your precious in-real-life time doing just that. Not exactly the glamorous stuff you want to base a movie on, huh?

Also, since you're starting out as a pretty weak, "first-level," at first you're limited to the old reliables of hunting down assorted bugs, rats and reptiles because they're all you're capable of killing. I'm talking rills, kreebles, slum rats and lesser womp rats—sure, some of them may be big creatures, but fighting them won't exactly make you the stuff of legend. Plus your starting missions will be of the FedEx go-fetch or hunt-and-destroy variety. That's life when you're a grunt. No princess to save, just yet.

So far, playing SWG has been just like real life, with moments of boredom interspersed with thrills and fascinating encounters. The question is whether you're willing to invest that much time on exploring these worlds. That's the thing about MMORPGs, I think, which makes them riskier than offline RPGs and other plot-driven games—the fact that there's really no storyline to move you forward. Sure, there's a bigger story in SWG and as you rise up the ranks, you might play a pivotal role, but for the most part you're creating your own story. The success of SWG depends not only on the world and tools the developers created, but also the stories each player will churn out and the communities they will build. It's the difference between, say, a traditional RPG like Star Wars: Knights of the Old Republic and a MMORPG like SWG. The first experience is like being part of a movie, with a scripted (though flexible) plot and interesting NPCs, while SWG is more like a sandbox with raw materials that you can shape in different ways. That kind of freedom is great but it can also be overwhelming and even boring, if you don't have strong story elements and truly interactive NPCs. Otherwise, the burden is solely on the players, and you have to remember that not everyone on SWG is really interested in role-playing. I mean, it's great to chat about Star Wars trivia or movies or whatever, but how does that advance the experiences of your character or move the story forward? You might as well just go to a chat room.

Till then, my main motivation is to level up until I can teach a certain bunch of Tusken Raiders a much-needed lesson.

MANY provincial schools still rely on traditional, theoretical approaches to learning which only work for more established courses such as accounting, math and engineering. IT, on the other hand, has a much more dynamic approach.

Provincial students hunger for more news on IT trends

By Alexander Villafania
Contributor

COLLEGE students of provincial IT schools are not as privileged as others in the country's educational system. This becomes evident when IT graduates from provinces could not secure proper employment in IT companies because they don't have the necessary skills companies are looking for. Many IT graduates end up working with lower paying jobs, often not even related to their course.

Partly to blame is traditionalism. Many provincial schools still rely on traditional, theoretical approaches to learning which only work for more established courses such as accounting, math and engineering. IT, on the other hand, has a much more dynamic approach. Concepts and ideas often change as fast as the technology and it's hard for schools to keep up.

Some students who attended the recent two-day Philippine Youth Congress in Information Technology 2004 (Y4IT) workshop in UP Diliman had very basic knowledge of many new developments in information technology. A few admitted that their school only provided theories and barely discussed the movement of technology on a practical approach.

Some students said they are taught on a theoretical level—almost all of their lessons are done through books and classroom-type teaching. Field lessons like practical development approaches would have greatly improved their studies.

On the other hand, students do not blame their schools for any shortcomings, but instead praise their schools for making proactive efforts to bring IT students to an event such as Y4IT.

"My colleagues and I are still lucky that our school sent us to Diliman to learn the trends and developments in IT," one student said.

Another student, Marcelino Pajita Jr. who is taking up BS in Information Technology at the Divine Word College in Laoag, Ilocos Norte, said he appreciates his school's approval for him to go to the Y4IT event.

"One of my objectives is to learn as much as I can about the IT industry and not just the technology that runs it. This way, I could better understand my course and be able to decide where I want to apply what I've learned," he said.

But apart from understanding the IT industry and the speed by which the technology changes, another objective of Y4IT is to have attendees share their experience with each other. More important, the event calls for students to share experiences with their classmates when they return to their schools.

Carol Liza, a computer technology student from the Isabela State University, said she wants to relay what she has learned from Y4IT to her classmates. According to Liza, an event such as Y4IT comes rarely. Thus, she

AND so, after miles and miles of walking, climbing mountains and swimming in this part of Naboo, I finally reached the Hidden Gungan Sacred Place, when who do I see but a familiar figure from the wretched new Star Wars trilogy: Boss Nass.

Okay, so this was hardly as thrilling as seeing Darth Vader, Luke Skywalker or Princess Leia, but still Boss Nass wasn't your run-of-the-mill NPC (non-player character). So let's see, will he send me off on an important mission? Will he give me vital information that would help me play a bigger role in this Galactic Civil War? Can I attack him and finally get some payback for having to endure "The Phantom Menace"?

Well, no, the only option I have is to converse with him, and all Boss Nass has to say is: "Yousa not supposed to beesa here. Mesa not speke wit yousa now."

Welcome to "Star Wars Galaxies (SWG): An Empire Divided," the massively multiplayer online role-playing game (MMORPG) that lets you live out your dreams in the Star Wars universe. If you've always wondered what it's like to be a character in Star Wars, this game will allow you to explore different possibilities, from becoming a bounty hunter to pursuing a career as a bio-engineer to becoming the most famous dancer in the galaxy. If you play the game long enough and get lucky, you might even be able to unlock the Force Sensitive Character Slot and end up with another character who can take the long difficult path toward becoming a Jedi or falling to the Dark Side. After celebrating its first anniversary in June, SWG only has a few Jedi and those that exist lead very difficult lives, so if you do eventually end up a Jedi Master or Dark Sith, you know you're in an elite group.

New SEC chief's rule: Tight lips on pending cases

By Elizabeth L. Sanchez

PACKING her boxes from the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) has not always been easy for former Monetary Board member Fe Barin, who recently assumed office as the new Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) chair.

Barin, who replaces incoming Ambassador to Belgium Lilia Bautista, leaves a little piece here and there, probably some documents on her desk, while getting teased that it must be some form of premonition she will come back, being one of the longest serving employees of the BSP with over 40 years spent there.

But it is with a full heart that she is tackling her new assignment in the SEC.

She says her appointment was quite unexpected having spent half of her life already at the BSP.

She says although her husband had been a junior partner at a law firm led by former president Diosdado Macapagal, she had been in government long before she even got married and before President Macapagal-Arroyo's father was president.

"When you work in government, the financial returns are nothing to crow about. I like the life of a politician. It is interesting. I don't have political ambitions but it is an opportunity to serve," Barin says.

Some brokers have been curious on what kind of a regulator she was and will be. She tells them to look at her short stint as chair of the Energy Regulatory Commission from August 2001 to September 2002.

During her term, generation and transmission charges for the National Power Corp. were set.

The ERC at that time also confirmed that Lopez-led Manila Electric Co. had collected from its

How not to fix the deficit crisis

By Dennis M. Arroyo
Contributor

MEDIA reports on the fiscal crisis have opened up a host of solutions. This article will point out dead-end alternatives. They were rejected by the UP economists in their paper, as well as by other authorities. I will cite former cabinet secretaries.

'Grow our way out'

The idea is to push the economy to grow by 7 to 8 percent for a few years. The deficit will become less of a problem: incomes will rise, allowing more people and firms to pay more taxes.

The trouble with this argument is that it's unrealistic. We haven't experienced such high growth in decades. Even if attained, 8 percent growth is difficult to sustain.

'Cut the budget'

But vital social spending is already low or falling in real terms. Spending on education and infrastructure is threatened because of the fiscal crisis. In fact, education and infrastructure should be increased by P43 to P64 billion per year for the sake of competitiveness.

Besides, the real cause of the deficit is not an overblown budget but (1) falling revenues and (2) the state's habit of assuming the liabilities of government corporations.

'Focus on the revenue side'

The main problem is lack of government income, so the state should tweak the BIR.

But corrupt spending also matters. Filipinos evade paying taxes partly because they see the money being misused. For example, the road users' tax was meant for road maintenance—not for emergency employment via beautification. Regaining public trust is vital for getting people to pay their taxes.

A related problem is "unfunded mandates." Congress legislates new expenditures that are not backed up by new revenues.

Here's a cure from former Finance Secretary Isidro

Camacho: "We must encourage Congress to adapt the proposed Fiscal Responsibility Act which will ensure that all future legislation creating additional expenditures or tax incentives are accompanied by revenue measures to make them fiscally neutral."

'Monetize the deficit'

That is, the government "prints" money to pay its debts to the public.

But this will cause double-digit depreciation as well as inflation.

The depreciation (the fall of the peso against foreign currencies) will swell the foreign debt burden.

The threat of depreciation will also lead to capital flight. Capital controls will have to be installed to stop this. But the nation has never succeeded with capital controls, even during the dictatorship era.

And we do not want an era of hyperinflation.

'Shrink bureaucracy now'

There is a need to cut the dead-

Survive and excel in turbulent times

"SURVIVING and living your life successfully requires courage and risk-taking. Learn from the turtle—it only makes progress when it sticks out its neck." Anonymous

The Aug. 24 headline of the Philippine Daily Inquirer read, "RP already in midst of fiscal crisis—GMA". The same article made reference to the warning of the UP School of Economics Faculty that the Philippines is facing an economic crash in two to three years similar to the Argentine collapse.

According to "The Webster's New Riverside Dictionary," Crisis is "a decisive or crucial moment." Turbulent is defined as "causing disturbance or unrest; unrest as a state of turmoil; turmoil as a state of great confusion."

What causes confusion?

Normally we see confusion when there is much uncertainty. Uncertainty is present if: (1) the country will weather or not this economic crisis; (2) there is an anticipation of worsening political, global developments; (3) purchasing of large ticket items are being delayed and there is a preference to remain liquid; (4) there is a belief that prices of shares and real estate have not bottomed-out yet or are not expected to go up anytime soon; (5) people are thinking that the worst thing to be, is to be a seller, in this "buyer's market".

What must we not do?

First, we must not have a "victim" mentality. Instead of pointing the blame on everyone else (government, environment, politics, unfair competition, wrong people, weather, etc.), we should hold ourselves accountable for our country's performance. Someone once wrote, "It's all right to sit on your 'pity' pot every now and again. Just be sure to flush when you are done."

Second, we must not do those things that subconsciously keep us from taking action, as follows: (1) we engage in unrealistic optimism. Many times we deceive ourselves by thinking things will get better soon even when there is no basis. (2) We stay in fear. Sometimes we are so overwhelmed with our situation that we are paralyzed into inaction and we never actually acknowledge the problem. (3) We wait to be rescued. Instead, we should be our own hero. (4) We don't believe we will overcome. We must have unwavering faith. There is no crisis beyond the capacity of the Filipino people to solve; no challenge is too great!

What must we do?

First, we need to accept what is happening instead of dwelling on the "why?" Second, re-tool by extracting the maximum learning

MAPPING THE FUTURE

By Franco G. del Rosario

from our experiences and equipping ourselves with new skills and knowledge. Third, move forward by having personal humility to grasp facts not yet understood. During these turbulent times, one principle in Jim Collins bestseller book, "Good To Great" becomes even more important: "Confront the brutal facts." This includes having a conflict resolve for intense discussions in order to come up with the "best answers" each time to any of our business situations.

Fourth and the most important is to get the wrong people off the company. There are two statements off the same book of Jim Collins, that we must keep in mind, as follows: (1) "The single most harmful step you can take in a journey from Good To Great is to put the wrong people in key positions." (2) "The only way to deliver to the people who are achieving is not to burden them with the people who are not achieving."

New business landscape

In a sea of uncertainty and ambiguity where change is the inevitable constant, the choice is simple—survive or perish. Yet staying afloat will not suffice because sustainability is the real challenge.

Business models and wealth creation strategies are changing. Leadership and management, now more than ever, need to come to the fore as organizations renew and reinvent themselves to respond to the realities of the new business landscape. There is no single formula for success. But there are road maps, benchmarks, and shining examples of people, organizations and businesses that know how to survive in turbulent times, and do so excellently!

On Nov. 11 at the Makati Shangri-la Hotel, the 3rd MAP International CEO Conference will take stock of how business is transforming across markets, geographies, industries, and sectors. This year's theme, "Survive and Excel in Turbulent Times," is a call for action. It focuses on strategies and opportunities—what leaders and managers can do and must do to ensure survival and sustainability in the immediate and distant future.

What's in it for you?

Hereunder are some benefits to be had from the Conference:

- Real-time understanding of forces that give rise to new business opportunities as well as those that threaten the very foundations of long-standing businesses.

• First-hand exposure to successful models of small to big diversified business organizations from across industries and markets.

• Appreciation of the increasing interrelatedness of business and geographies in a global economy and what it means to business people in the Philippines.

• Tapping into latest thinking with respect to Leadership, Change and Embracing Excellence.

• Developing your specific and immediately actionable agenda for that much needed breakthrough in leadership by you and your executive team

The CEO Conference's speakers are an excellent mix of foreign and foreign-based Filipinos as well as our own CEOs and senior management who shall come together in one forum to expound on their well-honed business savvy and experiences.

First, the keynote speaker is Ernst & Young's "World Entrepreneur Awardee," Tony Tan Caktiong. He is followed in a session on "Opportunities Abound: Turbulence Notwithstanding" with Anupam Prakash of Hewitt Associates and Rico Hizon of the BBC.

Two great Filipino leaders speak in the session, "SMEs Onward and Upward", namely: Martin Lorenzo of Pancake House and Cecilio Pedro of the "Hapee" brand toothpaste.

We have an afternoon keynote speaker, Simon Beresford-Wyle, CEO of Nokia Asia Pacific. He will be followed by a session on "Creating a Built-To-Last Firm", featuring Erramon Aboitiz of Aboitiz Equity Ventures and Mr. Henry Co of Ford Philippines.

We have Dr. Franklin Ashby, a renowned speaker and author of several books that will cap the conference and will be speaking on "Being a 21st Century Leader" together with Mr. Richard Wellins of Development Dimensions Inc. Dr. Ashby wraps the conference with "Identifying the Critical Few Objectives of the Executive Team."

Dr. Ashby has written numerous books, such as, "Embracing Excellence", "World Class: How Terrific Organizations Get and Stay That Way," "Revitalize your Corporate Culture" and "Effective Leadership Programs." The delegates to this conference will be among the first to hear Dr. Ashby before he launches his latest book this fall, "Back on Track." Dr. Ashby was formerly Vice President, Instruction & Chief Learning Officer of Dale Carnegie & Associates, Inc., the world's largest leadership training organization.

The author is Chair of the MAP CEO Conference Committee, Chair of Sharexchange Brokers and Managing Consultant of Six Sigma Consulting. Feedback at mapsec@globenet.com.ph.

STANDARD INSURANCE CO., INC.

The Insurance Standard

(The Cooperative Partner of Zurich Financial Services, Switzerland)

STATEMENT

This is in response to an article entitled "Not 'standard' practice" dated September 1, 2004 in a minor broadsheet by a business writer who has maliciously misinformed the public by misinterpreting the audited financial statements of Standard Insurance Co., Inc.

This is with regards to the qualification as stated by its auditors, SGV & Co., on its recognition of the deferred reinsurance premiums in 2003 and 2002 under its existing reinsurance contract with a subsidiary which is not in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the Philippines (also known as GAAP).

The misinformation and misinterpretation by the said writer declares the company as troubled financially and compares its accounting to those of Enron, WorldComm and Parmalat.

The consolidated financial statements of Standard Insurance as of December 31, 2003 and 2002 as reported by its independent auditors, SGV & Co., are in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the Philippines, except for the recognition of deferred reinsurance premiums under the treaty reinsurance contract for its motor car insurance with a wholly-owned foreign subsidiary.

The qualification, contrary to what is stated in the article, does not have any effect on and does not reduce the company's net income and networth, from a legal standpoint. Otherwise, the auditors would have stated such effect or reduction.

Standard Insurance has been transparent in its disclosure and recognizes such qualification under the GAAP. It has been consistently publishing its audited financials for the benefit of the public.

In the industry, the Consolidated Audited Financial Statements for the year ended December 31, 2003 of Standard Insurance Co., Inc. will show:

	(In P'000)
THE HIGHEST Combined*
Premiums Earned	1,384,195
Net Underwriting Income	525,508
Income from Operations	182,670
Paid-up Capital	600,000
ONE OF THE HIGHEST
Net Premium Income, combined*	1,814,877
Net Income	200,374
Net Worth	1,140,989

*combined with eStandard Insurance Corporation (formerly Zurich General Insurance Philippines, Inc.), a wholly-owned subsidiary

The malicious misinformation and misinterpretation of the article, which will be legally dealt with by Standard Insurance, follows the manner by which certain competition has maligned the financials and reinsurance facilities of Standard Insurance together with the misrepresentation as the cooperative partner of Zurich Financial Services. This is outright unethical and unprofessional.

We welcome fair competition on the basis of merits and we encourage other companies to also publish their financials and reinsurance facilities for the benefit of the insuring public.

Standard Insurance is committed to continuously improve the quality of service to the insuring public by raising the standard of competency, professionalism and integrity.

STANDARD INSURANCE CO., INC., The Insurance Standard has the highest Paid-up Capital in the industry at P600,000,000.00; Backed-up by Reinsurers highly rated by Standard & Poor's; Accredited with most Banks & Financial Institutions; Quality Management Systems-ISO 9000:2001 Certified; Widest branch network located in key cities of the country; The leader in Motorcar Insurance and a Major Player in Non-life Insurance; The only insurance company with its own Technical Department which provides Technical Assistance all over the country.

customers P12.3 billion in purchased power adjustment (PPA) charges without authority from the ERC. The company was later asked to stop the unauthorized PPA collection.

At the SEC, she promises to keep an open mind, regardless of what she hears about the reported politicking between stockbrokers.

"I'm looking forward to a relationship marked with candour on both sides, they should not be hesitant to let us know what they think. It will not be presumptuous of me to speak for the Commission that we will always be there ready to listen," Barin says.

Barin rose from the ranks, working in various capacities at the old Central Bank of the Philippines from October 1956 to November 1969.

A graduate of law at the University of the Philippines, she transferred as assistant legal counsel to state deposit insurer Philippine Deposit Insurance Corp. in 1969 until May 1973. In 1972, she became a member of the joint International Monetary Fund-Central Bank of the Philippines Banking Survey Commission which initiated major reforms in the Philippine financial system.

wood from the public sector. The state pretends to pay them, and they pretend to work. But retrenching now will only lead to spending for their retirement packages, thus worsening the deficit problem.

Downsize the bureaucracy when the revenue measures are in place, when the deficit has stabilized.

'Abolish VAT, return to GST'

The problem here is that a general sales tax cascades.

Taxes are imposed on taxes. For example, sari-sari stores buy from wholesalers. A 10 percent sales tax on the wholesale good is passed on to the sari-sari store, which imposes another 10 percent tax. The poor are hit twice.

In contrast, VAT cuts the scope of evasion, as compared to the general sales tax. People have the incentive to ask for their receipts so they can be added to their deductions.

'Tax text messages'

Smart, Globe and Sun are raking in gazillions of pesos, so why not tax them?

It's true that the telecom companies are making much money. But the growth benefits are reaching the poor at the micro retail level. Individual agents and sari-sari stores sell load cards.

Besides, the huge sums from texting are already flowing to the government via the corporate income taxes paid by the telecom giants.

Return to gross income tax

The rationale for this is to simplify a rather complex tax system. It also cuts discretion in deductions—which devious BIR agents exploit.

However, a one-size-fits-all approach won't do. For example, travel and training costs are large expenditures in a consulting firm, and yet they can't be deducted under the GIT. The present system is fairer.

She admits she is still studying the securities laws, and related rules to prepare for her position as new SEC chief. She added that her priority is to get to know as much as she can about the capital markets and issues pending before the SEC given that her field of expertise is with the regulation of financial institutions.

As a matter of policy, she said she also keeps a tight lip when it comes to pending resolutions and prefers not to discuss openly with the media if matters are yet undecided.

She says however that her doors are open for discussions and will uphold principles of good governance—fairness, transparency and accountability.

plify a rather complex tax system. It also cuts discretion in deductions—which devious BIR agents exploit.

However, a one-size-fits-all approach won't do. For example, travel and training costs are large expenditures in a consulting firm, and yet they can't be deducted under the GIT. The present system is fairer.

'Ignore the self-employed'

The rationale is that they are really hard to tax, so focus on those with 9 to 5 jobs.

However, for every P1 tax collected from fixed income earners, only 10 centavos is collected from self-employed professionals.

A solution for this, as proposed by former Finance Undersecretary Milwida Guevara, is to set presumptive income levels for professionals. This concept is used in various countries.

For example, some research "used estimates of doctors' fees and multiplied them with the number of patients and clinic hours to determine 'minimum income levels'."

In fact, the BIR can use the yellow pages to tax-map the self-employed. This was proposed by former budget secretary Guillermo Carague.

What about the small entrepreneurs, the informal sector, Divisoria?

Former finance secretary Roberto de Ocampo proposed deploying ROTC cadets or students doing their internship. They can map these hard-to-tax groups even in Divisoria.

Young Filipino scientists share their breakthroughs

By Corrie Salientes-Narisma

STUDENTS celebrate sports, more than their breakthroughs in math, science and engineering, says Wendy Hawkins, Intel Corp. director for education programs.

That, Hawkins said, prodded Intel to take it upon itself to ensure that important innovations in these fields would not be left unnoticed.

And what better way to celebrate important breakthroughs than by putting together all these brilliant young people for a few days to give them the chance to learn from each other's achievements and exchange ideas and experiences with people who share their interests.

What better experience could one share with the next generation of innovators than an opportunity to hobnob with the world's smartest people—the real scientists and technical experts who made modern-day advancements possible.

These exactly are what Intel Corp. is doing through the annual Intel International Science and Engineering Fair, the world's largest gathering of high school students who excel in science, math and engineering.

Flagship program

Intel ISEF forms part of Intel Innovation in Education, the company's flagship corporate social responsibility program, which also involves the Intel Teach to the Future project—a training program for teachers and would-be teachers on the more effective method of teaching with the use of technology.

For Intel, Hawkins said the ISEF "is more than a science competition, it is an investment in the next generation of scientists and engineers."

The fair aims to drum up the interest of the youth in science and technology in the hope of encouraging them to further explore ideas that may one day change the world, she added.

"We invest in education because it is critical to our (Intel's) success. We need the supply of well-trained students to become part of the industry and of a strong customer base," she said.

Through the years, the fair had shown its genuine impact on participating students to do further research, ask questions and seek the answers to their questions on their own.

Taking over

The fair started in the United States 55 years ago as an inter-school competition with only about 30 American students participating.

The number grew steadily over the years to include students from other countries, making the fair an international event.

Intel took over the sponsorship of the project in 1996, committing millions of dollars yearly to develop and promote the program. It has since expanded to involve 40 participating countries and more than 1,400 high school students competing for four major award categories and various special awards, and for prizes worth $3 million in cash and scholarships.

The yearly fair, held in the US, is the culmination of local and national science and engineering competitions held by each of the participating countries.

It is in these local and national fairs where the hard work on the part of the high school students begins and ends.

When the brightest in these competitions are selected, all that is left to do is to send them to the Intel ISEF to showcase their work.

The Philippines selects its delegates to the Intel ISEF through the yearly Intel Philippines Science Fair, sponsored by the microchips giant's local unit.

For next year's batch, Intel had already started the search for outstanding young Filipino scientists, starting with the high school division level competition to be followed by the regional competition.

The national competition, to be participated by major winners of the regional level, will be held on Feb. 15 to 17, 2005.

The winners will be sent to the Intel ISEF to be held in Phoenix, Arizona, in May next year.

Wealth of experience

"Select the best, encourage the rest."

RP's delegates to the 2004 Intel ISEF during the victory party back home.

That is the judges' and Intel people's mantra during the week-long international affair so that when the fair is over, the students will go back home, win or lose, with a wealth of experience to inspire them to do better in their chosen fields.

This year's Intel ISEF was held on May 10 to 14 in Portland, Oregon, with 1,429 participating students from around the world.

A former student-participant, in an interview published in the fair newsletter, said the Intel ISEF gave him an extraordinary experience.

"Only half of the five-day fair involved the preparation, presentation, judging and awarding. The rest was spent on other social activities such as concerts, dancing and others that gave us the opportunity to socialize and meet our peers," he added.

The students partied, played and chatted. The exhibit hall served not only as a showroom for the participants' works, but also as a venue for socializing.

Hawkins said the fair aimed to give the students the chance to meet and work with real scientists and engineers, explaining that "a conversation with those people has a real potential and a great impact on the students."

Thus, the students got to meet and talked to many of the over 1,000 scientists and professors who served as competition judges and observers during the event.

Students are also given the chance to dialogue with the best and the brightest in their fields.

For this year, the Intel ISEF student-delegates were treated to an afternoon of dialogue with some of the world's Nobel laureates such as Robert Curl of Rice University, chemistry (1996); Dudley Herschbach of Harvard University, chemistry (1986); Leon Lederman of Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory, Physics (1988); Norman Ramsey also of Harvard University, physics (1989) and Richard Roberts of New England Biolabs, medicine (1993).

The experts were generous in sharing their wisdom with the students.

From them, the students got useful tips in pursuing their dreams and goals in life, particularly in the field of science.

"In science, you can miss over and over again and they wait for you," said Herschbach.

"Be alert. Some people had luck but they let it pass them by. If you have a big idea, pursue it with vigor. If you picked something and you were not successful, don't give up, there are more big ideas to pursue," Ramsey said.

"Do not be too conservative. Explore many ideas before settling with anything," Curl added.

The students also had a chance to meet with Intel chair Craig Barrett and listen to Pat Gelsinger, Intel's chief technology executive, who posed the fair's big challenge to the participants.

"We are challenging, encouraging, motivating you to be the next innovators," Gelsinger told the thousands of participating students during a forum.

Motivation

"In high school, I did not know anybody else who had the same interest as mine, and it was difficult to make friends with people who did not have similar interest. But at the fair, I was able to meet many people and make great friends. It provided me incredible motivation to create the absolute best projects that I was capable of doing," the former participant interviewed by the fair newsletter said.

The Philippines' 10-student delegation to this year's fair in Oregon shared the same experience and more.

They left the country with hardly any idea of what to expect.

Seeing for the first time the more than a thousand other high school students they would be competing with intimidated many of them, knowing how scarce their resources were and how advanced the other students from the other countries were.

But the 10 of them returned home a few days later not only with their medals and cash prizes, but, more importantly, with a different experience, a new kind of confidence and the pride in learning how brilliant and resourceful they were to win despite their handicaps.

'It made me prouder to be a Filipino. The fair made me realize we can be ourselves and still shine'—Joy Anne

Mark Leo P. Bejemino, a 17-year-old student from Philippine Science High School-Western Visayas Campus in Iloilo; 15-year-old Joy Anne L. Aquino of the E. Rodriguez Jr. High School in Quezon City; 16-year-old Anna Kristina B. Bautista of the Philippine Science High School in Quezon City, and Domingo C. Vargas Jr. of the Claro M. Recto High School in Manila competed in the individual categories in applied science, medicine and health, microbiology and environmental science, respectively.

Aquino won two awards for her project that involved the extraction of a new anti-microbial drug from sea snakes and brought home prizes amounting to $1,500.

The six other Filipino students consisted the two groups that competed in the team category.

The Manila Science High School team of Alan Ray E. Gonzales, Maria Katrina Rivera and Anne Margrette Velasquez won third place for its project that involved the development of an electrode from green mussels that can detect the presence of lead in bodies of water.

The Quezon City Science High School group of Trina Napasindayao, Melanie Melchor and Jayson Reggie Obos won fourth place for its entry that proved the effectiveness of an endemic water-borne bacteria called Vibrio Fischeri as pollution indicator in waters.

Challenge

"The fact that we are of different races and cultures was overwhelming," Napasindayao said when asked how she felt when she got to the fair.

Obos was excited and he had expected the fair to be very difficult because "our resources were not sufficient."

"But while it is true that our resources pale in comparison with those of our peers from other countries, we have proven that Filipinos are really intelligent and resourceful. Winning awards despite our handicap is a proof to that," Jayson.

"We were really challenged, the fair brought out the best in every one. But the best thing about the experience is the friendship and bonding that we had with people who share the same interest as ours," Katrina said.

The students said the ISEF changed their lives.

"It strengthened my determination to pursue my dream. It has become my inspiration and it made me prouder to be a Filipino. The fair made me realize we can be ourselves and still shine," said Joy Anne, the youngest of the batch, who is now a high school senior.

Unlike their peers from developed countries who had their own laboratories and research facilities in their schools, the Filipino delegates, all from public schools, had to practically beg for the use of the research facilities of certain institutions and private universities to pursue their projects.

Acknowledging the scarcity of government funds to provide all public schools in the country with the needed equipment, the students called on the government and private institutions to open their doors and lend their facilities to young scientists like them.

The students also called on these institutions to adopt and make use of their projects and research.

"Filipinos can do so much even with scarce resources, imagine what we can do with a bit more of these resources," Rivera said.

AIM gets two major accreditations

By Marlet D. Salazar

IN ITS 35 years of providing top-level education to business people, the Asian Institute of Management (AIM), reaffirms its rightful place in the industry by getting two successive accreditations.

The European Foundation for Management Development (EFMD) gave AIM its European Quality Improvement (Equis) accreditation in late 2003, while the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB International) conferred its accreditation to AIM early this year. These are stamps of excellence for AIM's 30,000 alumni from 65 countries. The prestige is synonymous with quality and gives distinct advantage to their careers.

According to Ricardo Lim, the associate dean of the W. SyCip Graduate School of Business, AIM is one of only two schools with dual accreditation in Asia, the other being Hong Kong University of Science and Technology.

One of two

Equis is a leading international system of quality assessment, and accreditation of higher education institutions in management. In the Asean, AIM, again, is one of the only two business schools with the Equis label.

Insead and the London Business School are just some of the schools with Equis accreditation.

The EFMD-Equis peer review team said of AIM: "An outstanding institution, the engine of this institution is commitment to regional relevance, business opportunities and quality. It has a culture of a strong collegiality, a bold yes for the needs of its environment."

League for Harvard

AACSB's standard-by-standard performance analysis put AIM in the league of Harvard, Wharton and Stanford. It is the North American accrediting entity of graduate schools of business management. Member schools of AACSB all share one ultimate purpose: to prepare students to enter useful professional and societal lives. It also aims to help these schools meet the challenges of relentless growth of global economic forces, conflicting world values, fast-changing technology, and even demographic diversity.

AIM's degree programs are academically solid. They have proper conceptual, analytical and breadth content. (Their) programs have a strong orientation to practice and quick application to business and organization situations," the AACSB peer review team said.

Thriving courses

AIM also offers courses, which are also thriving. The non-degree programs target all levels of management, and range from one week to four weeks in length.

"One of the reasons these are very successful," Lim said.

AIM's major degree programs are: Master in Business Administration, Master in Management, Master in Development Management, Master in Entrepreneurship and Executive MBA. Degree programs give the students the chance to further hone their skills in their field of choice. Degree programs allow students to undergo rigorous training to aid them in the real world. These also provide them with conceptual foundations, up-to-date knowledge, analytical tools and people management and leadership skills. AIM is not only successful here in the Philippines. It has taken its courses to countries like Indonesia, Malaysia and India.

WP partner

AIM's pioneering process in providing management excellence earned it the selection of World Bank as its strategic partner in Asia with the establishment of the AIM-World Bank Global Distance Learning Center.

"This makes AIM the first private management education institution in the world to partner with World Bank," said Lim, who's been teaching with AIM for 13 years, and has a Ph.D. from the University of Southern California.

AIM has shaped the minds and personalities of aspiring, enterprising young men and women from all points of the globe. It continues its commitment to management excellence by being a world-class institution hurdling the challenges that it faces through all those three decades. It managed to be the best of the best and its name become synonymous with excellence and strong leadership.

China seeks Filipino expertise in business

By Tina Arceo-Dumlao

MOST Chinese living in major cities like Shanghai know Filipinos for their unequalled singing talent.

But with the entry of Filipino investors to China, such as San Miguel Corp., Liwayway Manufacturing Co., Limketkai group, Jollibee Foods Corp. and Figaro group, the Chinese are discovering that Filipinos have a knack for business, too.

Zhang Hengde, secretary general of the Council for the Promotion of International Trade in Shanghai, said in a recent briefing that the successful foray of Filipino businesses into China is adding to the goodwill long enjoyed between the Chinese and the Filipinos.

Liwayway Manufacturing, for instance, which manufactures the Oishi snack line, has 16 factories in China.

Food and beverage giant SMC just announced the start of construction of its 7th plant in China, which would entail an investment of $45 million for the non-alcoholic beverage manufacturing plant.

Jollibee, on the other hand, has recently acquired control of China's leading fast-food company, Yonghe King, after making its first payment for an 85-percent stake in the company.

The SM chain likewise has a firm foothold in China with its joint venture company that runs two SM City malls in Xiamen, with more malls in the pipeline.

The Figaro coffee chain, meanwhile, plans to put up the first two outlets in Shanghai by the end of the year.

"It used to be that we knew more of Filipino bands, but with a lot of professionals coming into China, there is greater respect for Filipinos as businessmen," Zhang said through an interpreter during a recent meeting with Filipino business people.

Zhang added that Chinese businesses were looking forward to forging more joint ventures with Filipino firms, as demand increases for services and investments.

Shanghai is a particularly good investment site due to its huge expatriate community and high spending power of the population.

While the majority of the Chinese live on a per capita annual income of $1,000, Shanghai enjoys as much as $5,000.

Huang Wen, secretary general of the Court of Arbitration of China Chamber of International Commerce, said that the association was prepared to help Filipino companies interested in joining hands with Chinese companies to set up a business in the city.

"We bridge organizations to bring Filipinos closer to the Chinese firms," he said.

The body has a website and magazine where Filipino firms could advertise their intent to do business in China, he added.

China has been sucking in foreign investments from around the world due to its huge market of one billion people, and generous incentives such as cheap labor and electricity prices, low taxes and policy to encourage foreign investments.

This beeline of investments toward China leaves very few dollars for the rest of the region, including the Philippines.

But rather than trying to reverse the trend, Figaro CEO Pacita Juan said that the growth of China could be turned into a golden opportunity for Filipino firms, given the right investment and the right partner in China.

The government is doing its part through the International Trade group of the Department of Trade and Industry under Undersecretary Thomas Aquino and the consulate in China of the Department of Foreign Affairs represented by Jorge Judan.

Juan said that aside from direct investments in manufacturing facilities, there was profit to be made in the services sector, including the basic services such as a beauty salon and day care services.

"There are about 900,000 expatriates living in Shanghai. That is a huge market for services," she said.

Juan estimated that local firms would require a minimum investment of $140,000 to make that first profitable step into China.

There are risks, as there are Filipino firms that have failed in their pursuit of the Chinese dream.

But the potential returns make that risk worth taking.

MOVEMENTS*Credit Suisse names key hires

CREDIT Suisse First Boston announced two key new senior hires for its Philippine operations, reflecting its strong commitment to the market.

Simon R. Paterno, who will join CSFB as a managing director, most recently held the post of president and CEO of the Development Bank of the Philippines.

Prior to that, he worked with JP Morgan for 18 years, where he was managing director and head, Philippine Investment Banking, from 1998 to 2002.

Chiqui A. Huang, who joins the firm as a director, previously worked with JP Morgan for 19 years. Throughout her career, she has worked primarily in investment banking and corporate finance in the Philippines.

Joselito Sibayan, CSFB's country manager in the Philippines, will continue to work on existing projects, while also assuming a new role as vice chair of Investment Banking, Philippines.

In this role, he will focus on major transactions and senior clients in the Philippines, as well as other key parts of the region.

Eric Varvel, CSFB's head of Investment Banking for Asia Pacific ex-Japan, said: "With these key hires, CSFB is significantly increasing its profile in the Philippines. We are optimistic about the country's prospects and want to manifest our long-term commitment."

CSFB was awarded Best M&A House in the Philippines by Euromoney Magazine last year, and best foreign investment bank in the Philippines by FinanceAsia in 2003.

CSFB is a leading global investment bank serving institutional, corporate, government and individual clients. CSFB's businesses include securities underwriting, sales and trading, investment banking, private equity, financial advisory services, investment research, venture capital, correspondent brokerage services and asset management. CSFB operates in 68 locations in 33 countries across five continents.

It is a business unit of the Zurich-based Credit Suisse Group, a leading global financial services company.

eTelecare appoints senior executives

eTELEcare International Inc., the largest Asia-based call center company, recently announced the appointment of Dean Bindless as director for training and quality and Mark Fuentes as senior operations manager for eTelecare's sales business unit, both of whom are based in Manila.

Dean Bindless joined eTelecare fresh from a two-year stint as HR director of TeleTech Philippines.

Prior to this, he worked for five years in various management and specialist roles at TeleTech International Australia.

He also had two years' experience at leading Australian telecom carrier Telstra Corp., handling customer service and training functions.

A consummate HR professional with extensive learning and development experience, Bindless earned his Bachelor of Education degree at the Victoria University of Technology and his MA in Education at RMIT, both in Australia.

Mark Fuentes is a sales veteran in the telecommunications industry, with extensive sales management experience and record achievements at leading telecom companies in the Philippines.

Fuentes earned his AB Management Economics degree in 1990 from the Ateneo de Manila University.

With these senior executive appointments, eTelecare continues to reinforce its management team to help effectively address the company's ongoing intensive expansion efforts, particularly with the opening of a new call center in Cebu within this year.

Araullo, Barretto lead Real Bank

JOSE G. Araullo and Alfredo Barretto were appointed chair and president, respectively, of Real Bank.

Araullo, one of the founders behind the third largest auditing firm in the country, Punongbayan and Araullo, is an expert in banking and finance.

Araullo also held top management positions in his 14-year stint with the country's largest commercial bank, Metropolitan Bank and Trust Co., where he was a senior vice president and comptroller.

He also served as director of Philippine National Bank, among others.

When asked why he accepted the responsibility to lead Real Bank Inc., Araullo said with confidence, "I never back out from a challenge especially if I know the terrain well. I have already succeeded in doing this before with another bank and I know that I can do it again and better."

Barretto is another banking veteran. He has more than four decades of solid professional experience as a banker.

From 1963-1975, he worked as assistant vice president of Traders Royal Bank. From there, he moved to Philippine Savings Bank as executive vice president and director from 1976 to 2002.

When asked why he decided to leave PSB after 27 long years of service, Barretto said: "I have known Araullo for a long time and I know his strengths and capabilities. I have no doubt in my mind that he is a very determined man. We worked together before and I can honestly say that we were instrumental in putting that company in a better position. I know we can also achieve that for Real Bank."

Real Bank has 24 branches nationwide. It is slowly expanding its branch network to reach out to more Filipino families and communities.

Q: IS image more important than knowledge? I was just recently passed over for a promotion. Although the reason given to me was that the person they promoted was better suited for the job, most of my close friends at the office say it is because I do not present myself as professionally as my other officemate who got the promotion. I know I have the skills and knowledge for the position she got and I am more senior than her. Isn't it unfair that she got the job and I didn't simply because she dresses better and fixes herself more than I do?

A: No, image is not more important than knowledge and job skills. However, image sets you apart and creates a very important impression which is crucial in business. Some companies, particularly in the US, job interviews for high level positions are conducted over lunch or dinner. This is done in order to test the applicant's etiquette skills. As the business environment gets more and more competitive, you will find an increasing number of possible upper management personnel that relatively have similar skills, educational background and experience.

What sets one apart from the other is the way they present themselves and the way they conduct themselves. Thus when a choice has to be made between two applicants with similar skills, the obvious choice would be the one who looks and acts more professional than the other.

Skills, knowledge, education and experience get you the interview, what gets you hired is the way you present yourself to your superiors, colleagues and clients. If you feel you would like to improve your image and your business etiquette skills, then take active steps towards doing so. This may help you to get started:

Employers have revealed the following professional attributes as most widely sought after by decision makers:

Self-esteem. If you don't believe in yourself, how can your employer expect you to do a good job in representing a company? Give yourself credit for your strengths and work on your weaknesses!

Communication skills. Be convincing, be eloquent in your speech and be a good communicator. Asking questions and listening to the person answering them is an important part of communication.

Speaking skills. One of the greatest fears of people is speaking in front of a group. When speaking or making a presentation to groups of 30 or 300, be prepared, be confident and be yourself! Take a class on presentation skills if you have to.

Writing skills. Whether you are speaking to someone or corresponding with the person, the first 12 words you use should include a form of thanks. Give your writing style a conversational tone. Limit sentences to 10-12 words. Your cover letter and resumé should be held to one page. Avoid being too wordy or using big words to impress. Business writing is straight-forward and unambiguous.

Giggling. Many people laugh to fill silent moments, rather than merely pausing. This is a distracting and unprofessional habit.

Hand gestures. Your hands should be used to enhance what you are saying rather than to detract from what is being said. Tests have shown that hands above-board (visible) rather than in pockets project a more positive image. The only legitimate form of touch in business is the handshake. A pat, nudge or touch of the arm can be perceived as being too friendly.

Please email your business etiquette queries to etiquetteconsultants@hotmail.com names of senders will not be published.

US FDA approves Pfizer drug to lower heart attack risk

THE US Food and Drug Administration has recently approved Pfizer's cholesterol-lowering therapy Atorvastatin Calcium for the prevention of cardiovascular disease by reducing heart attack risk in people with normal to mildly elevated cholesterol levels who have other cardiovascular risk factors.

The FDA's decision was based on the findings of the landmark Ascot trial (Anglo-Scandinavian Cardiac Outcomes Trial), which found that the lowest dose of Atorvastatin (10 mg) reduced the relative risk of heart attack by 36 percent compared to placebo. Because these significant benefits were seen so early, the trial was ended nearly two years ahead of schedule.

"No other lipid-lowering agent has shown an effect as dramatic as Atorvastatin in terms of reducing cardiovascular disease and in offering this significant health benefit as fast as Atorvastatin," said Dr. Joseph Feckzo, Pfizer's president of worldwide development. "Atorvastatin clearly is different in its early ability to reduce heart attacks among a very broad population of patients, regardless of cholesterol levels."

Another Atorvastatin study also ended two years ahead of schedule and also demonstrated its early cardiovascular benefits to patients. The CARDS study (Collaborative Atorvastatin Diabetes Study), the largest study ever designed to evaluate a statin in diabetics, showed that patients with diabetes who took Atorvastatin had 48 percent fewer strokes than those who received placebo. In addition, Atorvastatin-treated patients had significantly fewer fatal and non-fatal heart attacks and required fewer surgical procedures.

Heart disease is the leading cause of death in the United States and currently the seventh leading cause of morbidity in the Philippines. Most people with elevated cholesterol, a leading risk factor for heart attacks, are either not diagnosed or have not reached their target LDL levels with medication. "People are suffering heart attacks and dying unnecessarily," Feckzo said.

"With Atorvastatin, we have a medicine that can significantly reduce cardiovascular disease for millions of patients."

Atorvastatin also is the first cholesterol-lowering agent to demonstrate superior cardiovascular benefits when compared to another statin in two separate studies. In the Reversal study, Atorvastatin halted the progression of atherosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, while the other statin merely slowed progression. Pfizer has either submitted these additional studies to the FDA or plans to do so shortly for inclusion in the product's prescribing information.

In the PROVE-IT study, patients taking Atorvastatin had a significantly lower cardiovascular events rate than patients taking a different statin. PROVE-IT was conducted by Bristol-Myers Squibb Co.

"It's becoming increasingly clear that Atorvastatin provides cardiovascular benefits beyond simply lowering LDL cholesterol," Feckzo said. "Lowering LDL levels with statin therapy has been shown to reduce death and disability, but based on recent studies, we now know that Atorvastatin provides earlier and greater benefits than lowering LDL alone."

With starting doses of 10 mg, 20 mg, 40 mg, or 80 mg, 98 percent of patients taking Atorvastatin reach their target LDL goal level. Updated guidelines recently issued by the National Cholesterol Education Program (NCEP) confirm the added benefit of prescribing cholesterol-lowering medication like Atorvastatin, along with diet modification and exercise, to patients at risk for cardiovascular disease. The NCEP panel cited the Ascot trial as one of the landmark studies instrumental in concluding the revision of the guidelines.

Department of Health statistics show that CVD accounts for 74 deaths per 100,000 population. The most common risk factors for developing high cholesterol include age (over 55), family history, lack of exercise, obesity, smoking, diabetes and ethnicity.

Atorvastatin is the leading cholesterol-lowering therapy in the world with more than 76 million patient years of experience. Since its introduction seven years ago, its safety and effectiveness have been supported through the Atorvastatin Landmark Program, an extensive clinical program with more than 400 ongoing and completed trials involving more than 80,000 patients.

Atorvastatin calcium is a prescription medicine used with diet to lower cholesterol. Patients are advised to seek medical advice before taking any prescription medicine. Notably, Atorvastatin is not for everyone, including those with liver disease or possible liver problems, women who are nursing, pregnant, or may become pregnant.

Patients who take Atorvastatin should tell their doctor about any unusual muscle pain or weakness, as this could be a sign of serious side effects. Patients should also inform their doctor about any medications they are currently taking to avoid possible serious drug interactions.

Prescribing physicians may do simple blood tests to monitor liver function before and during medicine treatment. The most commonly reported side effects, which are usually mild and tend to go away, are gas, constipation, stomach pain and indigestion.

Pfizer is a global, research-based healthcare company that discovers, develops, manufactures and markets innovative medicines for humans and animals, and many of the world's best-known consumer products. This year, on its 50th anniversary in the Philippines, Pfizer reaffirms its commitment to making Filipino lives healthier, longer and happier.

UNOCAL REAFFIRMS LONG-TERM PARTNERSHIP

Unocal chair Charles R. Williamson greets President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during his courtesy visit in Malacañang Palace. Williamson was in Manila to reaffirm Unocal's long-term commitment to the Philippine energy sector. The meeting was attended by DOE Secretary Vincent S. Perez Jr as well as PSALM, NPC and other Unocal officials. Williamson announced that a Unocal-led consortium will shortly begin drilling two petroleum exploration wells in the Sulu Sea under a service contract with the DOE. Perez cited Unocal's strong international reputation as a leading energy developer with over 50 percent of its assets in Asia and over 40 years of partnership with host countries such as the Philippines, Indonesia, and Thailand. In partnership with NPC, Unocal pioneered the development of the geothermal industry in the Philippines through its subsidiary, Philippine Geothermal Inc (PGI). Williamson also expressed interest in evaluating the opportunity to participate in the privatization of NPC's Tiwi and Mak-Ban geothermal power plants as provided under the Epira.

Ajinomoto captures Pinoy taste anew

AJINOMOTO Philippines Corp (APC) has been operating in the Philippines for over 40 years. In this span of time it has studied and learned the culture and culinary habits of Filipinos. Hence, APC has come up with a variety of choices not only in seasonings but also in food and beverage products. Its latest product offering that is quickly becoming a hit among Filipino families is the all-new Crispy Fry Breeding Mix.

Crispy Fry enables mothers to give their families the taste of fastfood fried chicken in the comfort of their homes. With Crispy Fry, every piece of chicken is coated with scrumptious flavor and golden crispiness. Complete with spices and seasonings, no more time is wasted on marinating and experimenting. One can even choose to enjoy such crispiness in two variants; spicy or regular flavor.

Venue for party planners set

PARTY planners, suppliers, children's clothes, toys and accessories makers, get a chance to show-off their ware at a mall venue with the Baby Magazine 3rd National Baby Congress on Oct. 2 to 3, 2004 at the Shangri-la Plaza Mall.

The weekend event is expected to draw thousands of shoppers in the A, B, and upper C markets—the profile of the Shangri-la Mall's clients.

The Congress is open to the public and will have free talks on parenting and childcare, a Search for Cover Baby, raffles, give-aways, product samplings, kiddie shows, a fashion show and more. For more info, call 893-0534 or 840-1897.

The Congress is an ideal venue for entrepreneurs involved in the party planning business or makers of babies and children's needs as the expected participants will be families.

The organizer, Rita Neri of The Wedding Store, also made participation by interested exhibitors feasible with lower fees compared with those charged by events in malls.

The Baby Congress is a continuation of the very successful Baby Magazine 2nd National Baby Congress held last 2002.

Sponsors for this year's event include the Philippine Daily Inquirer, Gingersnaps, Metrobank, Canon, Sun Village Resort, Marathon Publishing Co.

modifying Western technology and making it better, so was Lorna with stuffed toys. This resulted in a market base that burgeoned and a product offering that diversified to include kitchen and bedroom coordinates and educational toys. But along with having big established exporters among her customers came harassment from her competitors. Like the bad wolf that wanted to devour little Red Riding Hood and the wicked stepsisters who made Cinderella's life miserable, the competitors tried to pull her down. But Lorna took all the negative gossip in stride and kept the competition at bay.

This can only happen to people who have arrived, she philosophized. And Lorna has indeed arrived. LOKAL Industries was getting monthly orders ranging from 3,000 to 10,000 pieces. Traders began approaching the Kalaws to apply as agents. The latter brought the company's products to markets that would have otherwise been difficult to enter.

The "new" partner

Ronnie eventually quit his job at PLDT to help out Lorna with LOKAL. His stint took all of two months. Even with Ronnie around, the business could not sustain a growing family, prompting Ronnie to go back to employment. After five grueling months as production manager of a woodworking firm, he decided to call it quits.

The timing couldn't be any better. By this time, LOKAL's growth was more than what Lorna could cope with alone. She needed an extra hand—one she could fully trust. This time, the couple committed to join strengths and talents to further expand the business and make it a more stable source of income for the family.

The couple's best intentions were not enough to realize the things they planned. Both have very strong personalities. The first few years as business partners were marked by conflicts and shouting matches. Ronnie was strict, methodical and businesslike. On the other hand, it wasn't like Lorna to easily give in. After all, she has successfully parlayed the fledgling business by herself. The twin pressures of raising a family and trying to make a business grow were slowly bringing the couple down. In time the couple realized that the friction was not doing the business, the family, the children and, most importantly, their own relationship any better. As Ronnie so aptly put it, "At the end of the day we are still the loving couple."

LOKAL today

After almost 16 years of operating and doing business from one rented place to another, LOKAL Industries moved to its permanent area early this year. And four years ago, LOKAL opened its retail arm, Angel's Touch Marketing in Malabon, right where they started. Three years later, its second branch opened in Batangas City.

The story of Lorna and Ronnie Kalaw clearly illustrates what an entrepreneur is made of. Entrepreneurship certainly is not for the faint of heart. It is a commitment that involves putting at stake the things one holds dear, and this can include one's life in some cases. The shared sacrifices and pain that the couple and their children underwent in the name of the family and the business have made their success taste even sweeter.

Today, there is no stopping LOKAL Industries from reaching greater heights since the Kalaw family has truly bonded together. Is the success of LOKAL a consequence of raising a happy family or is it the other way around? It may not matter any longer whether success or happiness is a precedent or a consequence. The couple is content with having a happy family and a growing business.

DESPITE facing stiff competition from other donut stores, Country Style Bakery Deli & Café feels confident it would not lose its throng of loyal customers.

"We offer customers not just coffee and donuts but also an alternative—a healthier dining option," says Country Style marketing manager Genaline G. Austero.

Austero explains that aside from donuts and coffee, Country Style also offers its customers a range of bakery, deli and café goodies from sandwiches, pastas, soups, bagels, omelette, croissants, turnovers to muffins. It also serves hot and cold beverages, as well as desserts.

"We are often mistaken simply as one of the donut stores. But we're actually not," says Austero. "Country Style is a donut store, bakery, deli and café, all rolled into one."

Thus, Austero adds, these donut stores cannot be considered Country Style's sole and direct competitors. That is why, Country Style does not feel threatened.

Country Style started its operations in the country in 1997, a year after Megalicious Food Corp. acquired the master franchise of Country Style Canada to develop and operate its stores in the country. It opened its first full-line store at Metropolis in Alabang, Muntinlupa.

Austero says that initially, the biggest challenge Country Style had to tackle was getting a share of the donut market, which was then dominated by two major donut stores.

Introducing deli products to the Philippine market proved to be a difficulty as well.

According to Austero, what Country Style did was to first of all, offer its products at very affordable prices, either similar or cheaper than its competitors.

"We give customers good value for their money—they get freshly-baked products, fast and friendly service, and comfortable ambiance," says Austero.

While its competitors have been aggressive in advertising and sponsorships, Country Style, on the other hand, has been investing very heavily on product development.

"We offer customers a wider food selection through regular and continuous product research and development," says Austero.

COUNTRY Style offers its customers more than just donuts, but a healthier dining option as well.

This is evident in the number of products Country Style has introduced in its stores year after year.

For donuts alone, it offers more than 100 varieties and flavors.

Made from specially formulated ingredients developed exclusively for Country Style, the dough and pre-mixes used for the donuts have to be imported from Canada.

Country Style has also brought in the country several product innovations.

For instance, Country Style has the triple choco boom, the first chocolate yeast-raised donut in the country.

It also has the old fashioned sour cream and french cruller donuts and seasonal products such as merry pops, which is a mini donut cake on stick coated with colored chocolate; and Christmas bits, which are mini donut holes with cream filling also coated with chocolate.

Country Style offers monthly and year-round promos as well.

Austero says they usually highlight a particular product every month, which they call "daily specials."

"We do this to introduce and emphasize a new, a less popular or a more pricey product," says Austero.

She explains that a customer, who usually orders donuts and coffee might be enticed to buy a bagel-and-coffee values.

Aside from that, Country Style had undergone several other changes in the past seven years to suit the Philippine market.

One was the addition of spaghetti, an old favorite among Filipinos. Another is the use of a more contemporary store design, which is more colorful and vibrant than its stores in Canada.

Country Style has also created several types of stores to adapt to the needs of different locations and market, unlike its Canadian counterpart, whose store size is usually around 100 sq.m. or bigger.

It has a full-line store or a stand-alone store, which serves all Country Style products; an express take out counter, which are usually found in food courts; kiosks, which serves donuts, beverages and a few bakery products and a cart, which serves only donuts and beverages.

In 2000, Country Style started offering its franchise program worth be-daily special, which is offered cheaper than its regular price.

When the customer orders the bagel and finds it to be good, he would most likely buy it the next time even if the promo has ended.

In this way, Country Style is able to create a following for its various products.

Austero adds that Country Style strictly adheres to its QSCV policy—quality, service, cleanliness and tween P400,000 and P1 million. To date, 50 percent of its stores are franchises, while the rest are company-owned.

Country Style now has around 40 stores in Metro Manila, 12 of which are full-line, stand-alone stores.

Austero says Country Style is planning to build 20 more stores by end 2004. It also plans to make its presence felt in the provinces, with Cebu as its first stop.

NOT QUITE A FAIRY TALE

Girl from a dress shop ventures into toys with prince

By AJ Esguerra
Contributor

LORNA and Ronnie Kalaw's residence used to be a messy and claustrophobic studio type apartment—a far cry from the multi-million, three-story house they and their children now call home. It wasn't a fairy wand that wielded the magic. How the Kalaws prospered was rather a story of commitment, risk-taking, creativity and hardwork.

Before the business

The second in a family of seven children, Lorna Kalaw remembers herself as a bright and cheerful little girl who grew up in the care of her maternal grandmother. When she turned 10, her playground was her grandmother's baby dress shop. As she grew up, she started doing some odd tasks (to her it was merely child's play) like trimming the dresses. Naturally curious, she would also examine how the machines worked, how the workers performed their jobs, and everything in between. She didn't know it then but these activities were a portent of things to come.

More than one and a half decades later, after getting an economics degree, trying her hand as operations manager in an employment agency, marrying her prince charming, and nursing a month-old baby girl, Lorna found herself reprising this role. She was again cutting fabrics, this time for her mother's baby dress business. Used to keeping a tight schedule as she juggled her time between work and her law studies, Lorna fell easy prey to boredom.

Small beginnings

She worked in what the couple considers as their first home—a 12-square meter bedroom that was part of her in laws' residence. To her, this was not much of a chore, neither was it a passing fancy. In fact, it nurtured the entrepreneurial genes likely passed on to her by grandmother and mother.

A formal training on stuffed toy making was the coup de grace so to say. Seeing the potential of stuffed toys Lorna was determined as ever to set up her own stuffed toy-making business. Not even the economic crisis that loomed over the region could make her reconsider her decision.

Against all odds she took the first bold step to realizing her dream; she sold two of her most beloved jewelry for a shot at stuffed toy fame. The P50,000 allowed her to move out and rent a two-story apartment in Tinajeros, Malabon. With some initial materials, one sewer, five used sewing machines borrowed from her mom, and sheer determination, LOKAL Industries was born and registered on the same year, 1988.

Early setbacks

A botched attempt by hubby Ronnie's effort to sell her stuffed toys at PLDT where he worked and her first-ever volume contract that went awry did not dampen Lorna's unrelenting pursuit of the dream to be her own boss. The latter experience proved to be her initiation into the unpredictable world of business. She learned the value of sticking to customer specifications even if she had to borrow money. For this she was rewarded with a fruitful six-year relationship with the customer.

Wolves and wicked stepsisters

Lorna is not one to be complacent of her early success. The years that followed had her honing her marketing skills and concentrating on innovation. If Japan was successful in

Madrid's haven of Filipino past

I HAD written an earlier article on the Legazpi exhibit at the National Museum. What I found remarkable in that exhibit were the exquisite examples of craftwork. Sadly, many of the crafts represented are now dying or dead.

Noting that some of the items in the Legazpi show had been lent from the collection of the Museo Nacional de Antropologia in Madrid, I resolved to visit this museum. Fortunately, while on vacation in Spain, I ran into Cookie Feria of the Philippine Embassy, a former classmate. (Now don't ask how long ago!) She very kindly made arrangements for my visit.

The Antropologia in Madrid houses works from different countries. Among its holdings is an incredible set of objects that had originally been brought to Spain for an Exposition in 1887.

On a sad note, the Museo is located in front of the Atocha Station. This was the site of the bomb explosions some time back, Spain's own tragic 9/11. The shattering blasts were definitely felt at the Museo on that fateful day.

Cookie and I (with daughter Paloma in tow) met with the museum's director, Pilar Romero de Tejada. This friendly woman is truly interested in the Philippines. She has written many articles on our country, her specialty being the Cordillera area. We had quite an animated conversation.

At one point, when she started talking about the importance of identity issues in Philippine society, I got quite excited. At last! Someone I could talk to.

When she went on to expound on the need to evolve a sense of cultural unity arising from our diversities, I couldn't contain myself. I jumped up and hugged her! This prompted Paloma to hide under her chair.

Amazing

Pilar took us around to see the Philippine collection herself. What an amazing range of objects! It was like a treasury from our past!

There were pieces from the different regions of our country. There was an intricately carved shield from Mindanao, a lovely tea set made of coconut shells and edged with silver from the Visayas, and bulols from Northern

THE MUSEO'S façade

Luzon. The level of craftsmanship was truly astounding.

There was even a machine used for cleaning rice. It had woven sides and wooden parts. It almost looked like a quaint piece of furniture.

The work that intrigued me the most was a piece titled "El Arraigo de Costumbres" by Ciriaco Gaudinez y Javier (1848-1910). It shows a young boy carrying an open coffin with the body of a little girl inside. It is such a heartbreaking sculpture. The face of the boy is covered with tears, and one can really feel his pain as he brings his tiny burden to her grave. One wonders what the relationship between the bearer and the deceased is. The girl's dress is quite elaborate, contrasting with the simplicity of the wooden coffin and the plain clothes of the boy.

Is the boy her brother? But why is he so much more simply attired? Of course, the girl could have been arrayed in her best outfit in preparation for burial. Could the boy be a faithful servant who had come to love the young daughter of the family that he worked for?

Whatever it is, there is no ambiguity about the anguished expression on the young boy's face. I was captivated by the talent of the carver.

Talent is clearly evident in all the items in the museum. In fact, one cannot but be proud at what one encounters. And one cannot but feel sad that so much is no longer available or even forgotten.

Colonial reading

When I discussed the museum's display with a friend, he pointed out that the collection was actually what remained of the Spanish colonial masters' attempt to showcase the products of their subjects. In a way, it was really an illustration of power and how such talented people were under Spanish control.

My friend also explained how Jose Rizal actually reacted quite negatively to the Exposition. It seems that our National Hero wasn't happy that certain Filipinos were actually put on display.

Of course, part of his dissatisfaction was the fact that he didn't think that the Filipinos who were on exhibit came from groups and wore traditional costumes which he thought were not civilized.

My friend even went on to question why Filipino artworks such as the statue I described are exhibited at a Museum of Anthropology. In contrast, the artworks from other European countries from the same period are exhibited in museums of art. This might suggest that our pieces were not considered artistic.

I prefer to look at the collection at the Antropología, however, as another treasure house for our country. Among other things, it provides our cultural scholars and researchers a set of works they can use to date similar pieces in the Philippines. This allows us to really push back our art history.

Also, our designers can use the pieces as the bases for new products. I really wish some enterprising angel would produce again the coconut and silver tea set. Wouldn't that look great on the table at an important Philippine residence like Malacañang?

Most important of all, I see this collection as a source of inspiration. In a time of crisis like what we are experiencing, the pieces in Madrid should comfort us by reminding us how resilient and creative Filipinos were, and continue to be.

We are so talented that we should have nothing to fear. With the infinite power of the arts behind us, we can face any obstacle.

More heritage updates

ALARMED by the construction of a fast-food outlet in the historic rotunda at the center of Carcar, Cebu province's premier heritage town, the Carcar Heritage Conservation Society appealed to the giant Philippine fast-food chain Jollibee to redesign the façade of its new store to harmonize with its heritage surroundings. Jollibee cooperated, agreeing to some changes in the store façade.

The issue of new construction threatening the homogeneity of heritage architecture that still survives in Carcar developed into a campaign for the town officials to enact protective legislation.

Rel Micame wrote in a recent issue of Cebu Sun-Star: "The Carcar Heritage Conservation Society should lobby with the Carcar Municipal Council for the enactment of an ordinance that will regulate the construction or reconstruction of buildings in the southern municipality. I believe Carcar municipal officials, from the mayor, vice mayor and down to the councilors, are receptive to the idea of preserving the cultural heritage of the town. If Gov. Gwendolyn Garcia [of Cebu province] can help convince the town officials to pass that heritage conservation ordinance, so much the better."

"The Carcar Municipal Government should not allow the destruction of some heritage buildings in the town, especially those located along the national highway. A buyer of an existing heritage structure should be required to preserve it."

Spanish colonial period stone bridges in Bohol province declared Important Cultural Properties. A major part of the existing road system in the Philippines is based on the network of roads and bridges built as early as the 17th century, during the Spanish colonial era, heritage that is totally unappreciated today.

As a testimony to their strength and endurance, some of the old stone bridges built from the 17th to the 18th centuries are still in use today.

A highway improvement program now endangers the historic network of Spanish colonial stone bridges still in use in Bohol.

Government engineers insist on replacing the "outdated" stone bridges with their generic concrete highway bridges. In response to public outcry, the engineers suggested encasing the stone bridges in concrete, rather than demolishing them and forever burying them in concrete.

The National Museum of the Philippines has declared the heritage bridges as Important Cultural Properties because they are "artistic and engineering marvels which have stood time," and they are "extant examples of Spanish colonial expressions of unique and distinct architectural engineering designs, as in the pointed and barrel vault system of bridge construction."

Stone bridges in the towns of Dimiao and Lila in Bohol are now under custody of the Cultural Properties Preservation and Protection Act (Presidential Decree 374) that prevents their demolition.

A new solution will have to be found by local government authorities that will allow highway construction to continue, while protecting the bridges.

Restoration of the Metropolitan Theater in Manila. Built in 1939 by the noted architect Juan Arellano, the Metropolitan Theater was the ultimate theater in Asia during its day, and a national center for Philippine performing arts.

The landmark building is a stunning example of the international architectural style Art Deco, but which was reinterpreted with architectural and decorative motifs adapted from Philippine sources.

A tripartite endeavor will restore the decayed structure. The National Commission for Culture and the Arts has granted P50 million as restoration seed money.

Other stakeholders are the Government Service Insurance System, which foreclosed on the property, and the City of Manila, where the historic theater is located.

Today there is a government penchant for fast-track construction where speed, not quality of craftsmanship, is the priority. This must be a hangover from the Imelda Marcos days, when she insisted that new government buildings be constructed overnight.

Conservation, on the other hand, is a slow process. Before any construction can begin, full documentation and investigation of the structure is required.

Construction cannot be rushed, either. The NCCA has correctly insisted that thorough study must be conducted before any construction can commence.

Could progress reports showing the results of the study be published so that the public (and fast-tracking government authorities) become more aware of the steps involved in the restoration process?

Quezon Province Capitol restoration. Gov. Wilfredo Enverga of Quezon Province has committed to restoring the Quezon Province Capitol. The structure, outstanding because it is one of the rare capitols in the Art Deco style, was designed by architect Juan Arellano in the 1930s, during the American colonial era when the province was still known by its old name of Tayabas.

The governor signed a contract commissioning the Heritage Conservation Society consultancy team to provide professional conservation services for the project.

Baguio City Heritage Task Force. Congratulations to the Baguio City mayor for organizing a heritage task force after meeting with members of the HCS, who had pointed out the uniqueness of Baguio as the world's only American colonial hill station. The American architect Daniel Burnham designed the mountain city in 1905 as a summer capital for colonial government officials to escape the tropical heat of Manila during the summer months.

The city government recognizes the unique history of Baguio and proposes to pass legislation that will protect local heritage sites still to be designated. The Burnham-designed road system, itself to be declared as local heritage, will link most of the proposed local heritage sites.

Feedback

Concerned individuals e-mailed their responses to the column about heritage concerns last week. One wrote: "...for the first time I am able to understand why replacing those wooden trusses [in the Laoag Cathedral] can actually do more harm if these are replaced with steel."

Another wrote: "I am 21 years old, from Cabanatuan City. I just read your article about [the restoration of] the Pangasinan Provincial Capitol Building, and I felt envious that there were enlightened people in that province who were able to concretize their ideas in a communitarian level."

He wrote that after the provincial government moved out of the Nueva Ecija Capitol, the heritage structure was converted into a computer school where "holes were punctured in the façade for air-conditioning."

Palafox presents Harvard paper

ARCHITECT and urban planner Felino "Jun" Palafox Jr., founder and managing partner of Palafox Associates, presented a paper titled "Manila Metropolis 2020, Manila Bay-Pacific Coast Metropolitan Region: Concept Plan 2020" to the Graduate School of Design at Harvard University as part of his graduate studies.

A big part of this plan's strategy is the development of urban development corridors and clustering growth centers like Subic and Clark and the opening of new gateways on the Pacific Ocean coastline. This will spur new investments in the region and redevelopment opportunities in the inner cities, creating jobs and economic opportunities, especially for the urban poor.

Palafox has also submitted his concept to President Arroyo as a potential way of fulfilling her 10-point development plan. Palafox's plan aims to decongest Metro Manila, create jobs, and foster agropolitan development to spur urban agribusiness and eco-tourism in between the urban-development corridors.

Artists toast Gallery Nine's fifth year

"ONE Fine Day," by Tres Roman

GALLERY Nine celebrates its fifth anniversary with "The Big Show" at the Art Center of Megamall until Sept. 15.

The show includes pieces by Federico Aguilar Alcuaz, Angelito Antonio, Norma Belleza, Angel Cacnio, Arturo Luz and Ramon Orlina.

Thomas Daquiao has a painting showing a flooded area by LRT buttresses, Ferdinand Doc-tolero tackles a boxing scene.

On exhibit is Orlina's champagne fountain of green glass leaves and grooved fruit orbs that stem from a spiraling branch of steel. The fountain was the centerpiece during the wedding reception of Rep. Jules Ledesma and actress Assunta de Rossi.

Also on exhibit are works by emerging talents such as Yveese Belen, Art Bermido, Romeo Forbes, Tres Roman, Bin Samonte, Christian Tamondong and a host of other new artists.

Also on display are the works of Emanuel Garibay, Fatima and Marcel Antonio, Michael Cacnio, Camille Ver, Grace Taylor, Jun Tiongco.

GUESTS of honor De Rossi-Ledesma and Duque sample the wine from the Orlina Fountain.

Carlo Magno tackles ancient East in new abstracts

TOP abstractionist Carlo Magno's major show for 2004 opens on Sept. 11, at the 2nd Level of The Podium. Curated by Galerie Joaquin, "Transcendence" features 24 major works in acrylic.

"Transcendence" is inspired by the glorious kingdoms and ancient civilizations of the Near East and the Far East. The Near East was where cuneiform handwriting was developed and where the bronze and metal age made a distinct impact on civilization. Magno's works along this line are mainly in earth colors in various shades of brown, copper, mocha, beige and sienna.

The other half of the works are inspired by civilizations of the Far East, in particular ancient China, and are predominantly in red, the imperial color.

Notable pieces include "Glorious Kingdom I" and "Glorious Kingdom II," both 48 x 48 done in mixed media, the 36 x 48 title piece "Transcendence," the 36 x 48 "Primordial Elements I" and the 48 x 36 "Primordial Elements II."

gether they came up with a collection of 20 paintings, under the guidance of their uncle, Rache Cuna—artist, painter, stylist and "floral architect of the Philippines."

The paintings will be on exhibit as part of Kiddie Land at the three-day Shopping Carnival on Sept. 10, 11 and 12 at the World Trade Center in Pasay City.

Patrick and Simon have been raised to appreciate all things bright and beautiful. Having traveled to many parts of the world, from Hong Kong to Tokyo, from Seoul to many parts of the United States, they have at such a young age acquired an eye for visual splendor.

What's more, they have spent many a summer learning the craft, experimenting with oil, oil pastel and paint to share with others through the canvas all that have captivated their imagination.

The shopping festival offers families a wide array of world-class products: home décor, furniture, food, fashion and appliances.

At Kiddie Land, replete with kiddie rides, clowns and inflatable toys, an art corner will provide visiting children an opportunity to paint, draw, play and learn fun crafts. Patrick will be around to share their love of art. Patrick and Simon are gradeschoolers at La Salle-Zobel in Alabang, Muntinlupa.

Artists of dystopia

By Constantino C. Tejero

A THEME that hasn't ceased to fascinate artists and writers is the Unreal City. The vision is usually of a wasteland populated by semi-humans living a synthetic reality.

A version of this dystopia is Ronaldo Ruiz's "Virtual World," 13 pieces in mixed media (acrylic, computer hardware discards, fiber, sand) and 25 smaller pieces in acrylic, recently displayed in Renaissance Gallery at the Artwalk, 4/L, Bldg. A, SM Megamall, Mandaluyong City.

Eight of the large pieces are composed of central processing units and motherboards mounted on canvases, textured with abaca fiber and sand, then painted with acrylic, in red, green, ochre, gray, black, blue, maroon.

These paintings are really reliefs on canvas. The imagery produced is that of a series of aerial shots of complexes of infrastructures, building compounds, or floor plans of a housing project, factories, depots, military installations, nuclear reactor plants.

This objectifies Ruiz's concern with technology, urban congestion, an artificial world, the synthetic experience. It is a vision of cruel steel and concrete, empty of humanity.

The gold parts of the microchips the artist has left unpainted, maybe to evoke the tiny points of light in the earth's populated areas one sees from an airplane at dusk—a faint sign of life.

By the artworks' titles one can deduce what the artist thinks of this kind of life and world:

"Red Alert," "Under Control," "The Border," "The Model," "White House," "The Project," "Rush-Rust."

While these painting reliefs verge between the figurative and the abstract, Ruiz's painting proper is nonrepresentational.

Penetrating vision

He started as a figurative artist, aligning himself with the social realists. His usual subject then was the overseas Filipino workers, having himself worked for two years in Saudi Arabia and thus empathizing with these long-suffering people.

He professes admiration for Bosch, Michelangelo and other Renaissance artists, Jean-Michel Basquiat, Antipas Delotavo, Nune Alvarado, Ang Kiukok.

"I've been discovering my techniques by myself," he says. "I cannot really trace the influences, but I'm sure they're there."

What he is not sure is, when he is going back to figurative painting. "I want to grow in creativity. I'm just playing with my art. I'm constantly seeking innovative techniques, wanting to create art that is always new."

A Fine Arts graduate from University of the East, Ruiz was artist in residence at Artspace in Sydney, Australia. He was twice Jurors' Choice in the Philip Morris Philippine Art Awards.

Ruiz is also into performance art and installation. A young man with visual flair and penetrating vision, he is undoubtedly one of the most important Filipino artists today.

The vanishing image

Meanwhile, Ferdinand Montemayor seems to have made it his mission to record, phase by phase, the turning of his hometown into a wasteland. Depersonalization is increasingly occurring in his art.

A founding member of the Antipolo-based group Salingpusa, who studied painting at the University of the Philippines College of Fine Arts, the artist has become known for his "Bayan" Series.

In his previous townscapes, he showed only buildings and silhouettes of human figures. Later, the billboards started taking over the landscape, jostling and facing one another in lieu of people. The presence of humans could be seen only as sketchy illustrations on those billboards.

The distancing effect was carried over in "Fiestang Bayan," the artist's recent exhibit in Crucible Gallery at the Artwalk. These are five pieces in acrylic on canvas depicting crowds of people and clusters of buildings and rooftops, seen as panorama or bird's-eye view in a monochrome of magenta.

Although the scenes depicted are not necessarily the artist's hometown, and the fiesta not specifically the Sumaka (suman, mangga, kasuy) Maytime festivities of Antipolo, the theme of industrialization, overpopulation, urban development and blight threatening the Philippine countryside is still in place.

And here Montemayor has further increased his distancing effect, playing to the hilt the proverbial role of artist as God.

"Plaza" is an aerial view of buntings, rooftops, and a multitude of sketchy figures. One could see the church's belfry, but the scene could be an encampment of tents. The horizon is a curve, which could be an outline of mountain or the edge of the earth.

Tension and paradox

"Town Fiesta" is a panoramic view of the town as isthmus with the church as focal point, bordered on both sides by inlets of the sea, and spreading out to a horizon spiked with tall buildings and cranes, which represent encroaching industrialization. The image is that of the globe, and the figures are getting smaller.

In "Province," the scene has become just bright points of light in the distance. In "City Fiesta," the lights are dimming.

Finally, in "Barrio Fiesta," the place is reduced to a dark haze in the horizon, as the image threatens toward abstraction.

This then is the paradox in these fiesta scenes: They're populous but curiously without human personalities, crowded but oddly cold.

Montemayor reveals he did the pieces at the height of the recent election campaign and during a heat wave, and the celebratory mood he expressed in a monochrome of ferocious hue.

"I started with multicolor composition, pero masyadong magulo ang visual," he says. "I wanted a cohesive presentation. Gusto kong pahingahin ang viewer."

To capture the sense of energy and excitement, the atmosphere of anxiety and menace, he used a vibrant red, specifically luminous red-pink with alizarin crimson for binder or glaze.

"Tapos na tayo sa mabantot na kulay," he laughs. "Masarap gamitin ang masaya na color dahil masarap sa mata. It is very lively. Masaya ako 'pag makita ko. Ang images, marami naman 'yan, e. Ang kailangan, kung paano mo mabuhay ang image... But red is hard to handle. It is also the color of revolution."

LINO Severino's ideas on what lies beyond continue to pour in "Eternity II." The exhibit is on view at West Gallery in SM Megamall on Sept. 9-21. Through abstract collages, Severino manages to incorporate his Christian faith into his compositions.

FINALE Art Gallery showcases Lui Medina's "Peep" until Sept. 12 at the Artwalk, 4/L Megamall A. The artist's oil paintings are based on photographs that she took.

GERRY Ingco's "Propaganda" at the Galerie Astra (LRI Business Plaza, 210 Nicanor Garcia St. [formerly Reposo], Makati; until Sept. 17) defies the common conception of the abstract as mere beauty. Ingco himself says he's a conceptual artist rather than an abstractionist, who puts more attention to ideas. He fills his canvases with earth colors similar to prehistoric paintings to depict primal consciousness. Call 8903988 or 7243032.

CHRIS Daniel exhibits his first collection of clay art at the 6th Annual Student Exhibition of the Pettyjohn-Mendoza Pottery School, ongoing until Sept. 8 at Art Space, 3/L Glorietta 4, Makati. His pieces include platters, vase and sculpture.

The event was organized by the AAP in cooperation with the Korea Fine Art Association and the GSIS Museum. The show runs until Sept. 15.

Bright Manila skies under the Pavilion

By James P. Ong
Contributor

YEARS ago, when a group of culturati was lobbying for the preservation of the old Luneta Hotel, it cited, among other things, the building's unique location and how it was the only hotel that enjoyed a perfect view of historic Luneta Park.

It turns out that, all the while, there's been another establishment also offering a beautiful and almost breathtaking view of Manila, the way the city's architect, Daniel Burnham, perhaps meant it to be.

We recently spent a weekend at the Manila

Pavilion under its rainy day "Homespun" package and surprisingly enjoyed the delightful view from the top floor.

On a clear day, we saw the old Finance Building, Post Office, City Hall, National Museum and, of course, Luneta Park.

It didn't take us long to map out our Sunday itinerary, the best day in the week to rediscover any old city by foot.

As we sat down to enjoy our in-room Filipino set breakfast, we began to realize where some pro-cultural heritage groups were coming from when they accused a recently built mall of being an ugly structure.

Side by side Manila's old structures, the building does look monstrous, a giant slab of concrete that looks like a factory from an aerial view.

Manila Pavilion, of course, was the old Manila Hilton, built in 1969 by the Delgado family. The hotel has undergone several changes in name over the years, from Hilton to Pavilion to Holiday Inn, to today's Pavilion.

Soon, it will again change names, as management has been taken over by the Gatchalian family of Cebu, which operates the Waterfront chain of hotels.

According to the hotel staff, renovations, set to start soon, will be implemented in phases. That should be good news to its loyal guests, especially to long-time residents like artist Federico Alcuaz, who stays on the sixth floor.

New carpets, curtains and beddings are just icing on the cake, however. The view from the hotel is the real gem.

"Homespun," Manila Pavilion Hotel's rainy day package, is available at P2,000 net until Sept. 30. Call 5261212 locals 2333 or 2343.

Filart's nudity, Dela Cruz's spirituality

By Gino Dormiendo
Contributor

THE FEMALE nude may not be a totally unrewarding subject to pursue, given the vast potential of the genre and its power to express timely and significant statements about contemporary womanhood.

It is in this light that the recent works of Carlos D. Filart can be best appreciated. They offer a panoply of beautiful attributes of woman, from the soft contours of the female body to the diaphanous fabrics that best highlight her femininity.

The show's main inspiration is ostensibly the Japanese kimono. Titled "Kimono: Clothing the Muse" (Galerie Joaquin, Lower Ground, The Podium, Ortigas Center, until Sept. 8), the exhibit is bannered by portraits in mixed media of women captured in various poses and moods, the wildly erotic being the dominant element and the infinitely rich mosaic of fabrics as the most distinctive feature of the works.

A veteran advertising executive and art director before he decided to work full-time as artist, Filart demonstrates his rare ability to mix and match fabric designs and textures, reinventing the kimono's wild turns from cloak to headdress, from sarong to backdrop material.

Though Filart's women are in various stages of nudity, it is the fabric that easily steals the show, and the faces could have been simply blurred or suggested, rather than well-delineated or worked out.

The other suite of works is superior in both composition and impression. Done in watercolor and mixed media, they show the female in a larger milieu. Here,

"OPEN Doors than Barriers," by Arthur Dela Cruz

"ETERNAL Ride," by Arthur Dela Cruz

the artist does not feel constricted, and the kimono also ceases to be a decorative motif or artifact.

The women are also more at ease in their environment. It would not have been a bad idea if the artist had himself infused a liberating sense of sexuality into his subject, rather than re-

"A FISHY Engagement," by Arthur Dela Cruz

True to form

The works of Arthur Dela Cruz, on the other hand, have remained true to form, reflecting the artist's deep sense of spirituality, which, in turn, confront the bigger theological issues concerning man and his destiny.

A Sacred Heart Brother for 11 years before leaving the congregation a year before his final vows, Dela Cruz started out as a figurative painter at the UST College of Fine Arts and Design before he turned to abstraction.

Through this show of recent works titled "Soulcape," (NCC Mall, Davao City), the artist had personally invited me to witness the show's opening, which made it possible for me to revisit the city after 20 long years. The organizers were the Brothers of the Sacred Heart, and the guests of honor were prominent city folk, but the special performers were children from the city's poor and depressed areas, who would receive the proceeds from the show.

As my gracious hosts, the Brothers, led by Bro. Noelvica Deloria, made sure my stay would be pleasant and comfortable—and a culturally enriching experience.

The artist's recent works have evolved steadily from his last outing. He has become more expressive in his brushwork, and the works are now visually stronger and more daring.

The real challenge for the artist has been to translate into visual forms ideas or concepts that are essentially abstract. But he has passed muster, relying on his admirable use of neo-colors and biomorphic forms that symbolize some deep-seated religious beliefs.

What is even more admirable is the rare sensibility at work, which is neither preachy nor proselytizing, but just as aesthetically absorbing.

Deeply rooted in the concrete realities of his milieu and doubly inspired by his strong spiritual foundation, Dela Cruz is a fine example of the regional artist whose concerns and insights are truly reflected in his art, a deep kind of spirituality fusing with all-too-essential humanity, a combination that is truly rare to find nowadays.

Metro mag features more 'lutong bahay' South Beach Diet menus

HAVE you lost those 12 pounds yet? Metro Magazine dares you to maintain your new weight—and still lose some more—as it follows up on its hit "Lutong Bahay" Guide to South Beach Diet, last month's talk of the town.

In its September 2004 issue, Metro offers readers an easy-to-prepare lutong bahay menu for Phases 2 and 3 of the hit "right carbs-right fat" diet created by Dr. Arthur Agatston.

Once you're down to your ideal weight, it's time to exercise and, if you have the time and money for it, go for mesotherapy. The medical procedure, invented in France in 1952, claims to do what liposuction can't: Get rid of even the most stubborn cellulite.

In the issue, find out why mesotherapy works for Pinays like Zsa Zsa Padilla and Lorna Tolentino.

Also in the September issue: 10 pages of never-seen photos from the 40-year reign of José "Pitoy" Moreno, the Fashion czar of Asia.

Plus, hot off the press: the sexiest photos from the Bench "Understatement" party.

Not to miss: Cover girl Korina Sanchez talking about having it all—a high-rating TV show, beautiful home, great catch of a boyfriend—in a time of grief (she recently lost her parents); how Manila's young and moneyed are indulging in cocaine; and how to live without a man by designing your private space.

Ballet Manila stages 'La Bayadere'

WHAT exactly is "La Bayadere"? A three-act ballet set in India, this Petipa/Chabukiani/Minkus masterpiece tells the story of Nikiya, a bayadere or temple dancer who is caught in the middle of a forbidden love for the warrior Solor and the unrequited love of the High Brahmin. Forced to wed Gamzatti, the Rajah's daughter, Solor watches helplessly as Nikiya is murdered during the celebration.

An opium-manifested dream reunites the two lovers in one of the most demanding acts in Russian ballet—the evening's finale set in the Kingdom of the Shades.

The prime of Liesl Batucan, actress

By Zeneida Amador
Contributor

ABOUT 11 years ago, Liesl Batucan was a young, energetic and good-looking girl who had a good job at SGV.

But one day, she joined a play, and that was it. She was bitten by that virus from which there is no escape—the theater bug.

Liesl thought long and hard about it, eventually making up her mind. With the consent of her very supportive parents, she resigned from SGV and went full-time into theater via Repertory Philippines.

She followed her heart. But heart was not all she had to give. Blessed with a keen intelligence, great determination, a sensitivity of feeling and enormous talent, she poured everything into her new and, as she confirms now, everlasting love.

I watched her once at a rehearsal giving her all. Afterwards I told her, "You're enjoying yourself, aren't you."

Her answer was, "I just love theater. But I also feel a great responsibility toward it."

This sense of responsibility has made her take all sorts of jobs in the theater, aside from acting and understudying. She has been assistant director many times, she teaches at our workshops, and when Baby Barredo and I feel that some actors are lagging behind, she lends a hand with extra coaching, especially for the newer, less experienced hopefuls.

Her 11 years at Rep have not all been days of wine and roses. There were the usual disappointments, heartbreaks, frustrations. But she just went on, taking small parts, any part assigned to her, but always learning, learning, learning. She honed herself daily, taking the good with the bad, growing, maturing at her craft all the way.

Second nature

Now, discipline, focus, mining a text for meaning, digging deep into the subtleties and pregnantcies of text, making the lines come alive, a sense of vulnerability, and creating a character, have all become second nature to her.

A colleague in the theater says of Liesl: "She's never just Liesl. She's always whoever she's playing."

And the British actors from the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts who came here recently to give workshops to local actors were so

This Rep stalwart followed her heart by opting for theater rather than a corporate job. But heart isn't all she has to give amazed at her, they kept plying her with questions. About her background, her experience, where she learned her craft. They couldn't believe they could find such a one here.

Liesl Batucan may not be a "star" in the way the word is understood hereabouts. But she is certainly an actress. And I never use the word loosely.

I remember, a stage mother came to me once to ask if I could train her daughter who passionately wanted to become a star. I answered that she probably got the wrong company. We do not train "stars" at Rep.

We train actors and actresses. There is a world of difference.

LIESL as one of the wives in the farce, "Run for Your Wife"

SHE will alternately play the role of Portia and Nerissa in Rep's upcoming Shakespeare production of "The Merchant of Venice"

IN the stage adaptation of "Dracula"

Liesl is now playing "Pinocchio" seamlessly and will also play "Portia" (alternating with equally talented Ana Bitong) in our production of "The Merchant of Venice." What two roles (Pinocchio and Portia) could be more different. But Liesl does both with ease and aplomb. She is, you see, an actress.

I do not recommend the long, hard road to "actress" for everybody. Those in search of fame and fortune would find it a drag. But once in a great while, somebody comes along who knows the difference between being a showbiz star and a genuine actress—and appreciates and shows that difference.

Zeneida Amador is the President and co-founder of Repertory Philippines, the company that trained the likes of Lea Salonga, Monique Wilson, Menchu Lauchengco-Yulo, Miguel Faustmann and a host of other respected theater thespians in the country. For information about Repertory Philippines, call 8870710.

Faith, hope and prejudice

By Cora Llamas
Contributor

THE ROMAN Catholic Church still stands as a beacon of hope and stability to its millions of followers.

Like children under the shadow of tough but concerned parents, the devoted may question teaching or behavior, rant against dogma, even walk away for a time to get breathing space—but in the end, return, even if at a distance.

One may leave home, but never really and truly disowns family.

But if the Church is a light to a dark world now plagued by family breakdown, a crash-and-burn lifestyle that blurs ethical lines, and growing doubts about once revered social institutions, what form should it take?

A lighthouse that stands immobile, left unchanged equally by the assault of storms or the welfare of the population living beside it? Or should it be a user-friendly lamp, easily carried by those who need it, the volume of its beam adjusted to the degree of darkness?

That is the deeper issue explored by New Voice Company's new production of Diane Shaffer's "Sacrilege."

The gauntlet is hurled by Sister Grace (Tami Monsod), the nun who runs a New York crisis center. She has the heart of Mother Theresa, the feel-good sensibilities of Oprah, and the never-say-die courage of a battle-scarred general. To her priestly superiors' horror, she outspokenly endorses sex education in the classroom and passes condoms around in public, all delivered with her singular wit and charisma.

Is it "sacrilege" for a nun to become a priest? New Voice Company's new play examines the issue

But Grace eventually crosses the line when she asks that nuns like herself be admitted into the priesthood. Her reasons sound logical and sensible: the diminishing number of male clergy, the competence of the nuns, the importance Jesus Himself gave women.

Her opponents on the other side see it differently. Says Paul Holme, who plays one of the priests at her hearing, "The Church is the anchor of society. [The changes that Grace is advocating] are the beginnings of an avalanche that will make that society give way. She is a loose cannon."

Monsod herself describes her character as "very impulsive, impatient, and stubborn," but nevertheless a "Joan of Arc who sees the prohibition of women into the priesthood as an injustice."

Patriarchal power

One single lady going against centuries of tradition and "one of the last fortresses of patriarchal power," as one cast member puts it, may not sound like a fair fight. But director Rito Asilo maintains that "there are really no bad or good guys here." It is a heated war between strong individuals who passionately believe in what they are fighting for.

Caught in the middle is Cardinal King, the American Church primate who happens to be Grace's close friend and former mentor. The most poignant and powerful verbal duels in the script happen between these two characters who feel betrayed by, and yet cannot quite abandon, the other.

Leo Rialp, who plays King, describes his character's position, "He believes that the Church is at the front line of big issues like capital punishment, euthanasia, and human rights. They have to take a firm stand."

Asilo says, though, that the play is more than just a political-religious epic. Personal dynamics that mirror the human beings caught in this maelstrom provide the human face. Neither Grace nor King comes out of this war untouched.

Another conflicted figure is Ramon (Jamie Wilson), the new young priest passionately in love with his God and his flock. Representing the new generation of clergy, he is torn between his duty to his religious superiors and his friendship with and gratitude to Grace, who picked him up from the slums and set him on the path to redemption.

By play's end, Grace's work is just beginning, as her real-life counterparts and antagonists are still wrestling with the questions and solutions in real life.

Holme comments that this probably reflects Shaffer's own take on things. "The issues are current and ongoing. [The author is saying that] Grace's battle has to be, and can still be, won."

New Voice Company's "Sacrilege" runs at the Republic of Malate Theater Sept. 3-11. Call 8966695 and 8990630.

"La Bayadere" is first and foremost a love story. What the Filipino public loves to see in television's soap operas today, the classic love triangle, plots and conspiracies, murder and intrigue—it's all there," says Ballet Manila artistic director Lisa Macuja Elizalde.

Restaging the ballet are Russian People's artist Sergey Vikulov and Russian Vaganova Academy's Tatiana Udalenkova.

Starring as the tragic heroine Nikiya, Lisa Macuja Elizalde has performed the ballet during its full-length Philippine premiere in 1987. Since then, she has also performed "La Bayadere" in stages across Russia—with a special performance during the 1992 International Arts Festival in Krasnoyarsk, where she was given a 20-minute standing ovation by the Siberian audience.

Also starring in the production is Russian guest artist Maxim Chashchegorov, from the Marinsky Ballet, as Solor, with BM's talented Francis Cascano as his alternate. No less

Love poetry reading, musical show mark 5th year of UST writing center

PREMIER love poet Ophelia Dimalanta will be featured in a poetry reading and a discussion of her works on Sept. 10 at 3 p.m.

The event, "Love Woman: The Naked Truth About Ophelia Dimalanta," is sponsored by the University of Santo Tomas Center for Creative Writing and Studies (CCWS) to mark its fifth anniversary. It will be held at the CCWS conference room at the UST St. Raymond's (AB-Commerce) Building.

Dimalanta will be interviewed by journalist-poet Ramil Digal Gulle. Later, there will be a panel discussion by poets Cirilo F. Bautista, Lourde de Veyra and Nerisa Guevara, and an open forum.

Readings of Dimalanta's poems will be made by campus poets, including Angelo Suarez, winner of the Unesco Struga Literary Prize of Macedonia and the National Book Award.

UST writers will hold a musical program "Chords and Dischords," on Sept. 11 at 5 p.m. at the UST Museum of Arts and Sciences.

The writing staff of the USTCCWS do not only write but are also involved in creative activities outside their writing, like De Veyra, a prize-winning writer and poet, who is also a recording artist, musician, and front man of the Radioactive Sago Project band.

Providing real musical treat are special guests, pianist Greg Zuniega and soprano Luz Morete. The public is invited to both events. Call 7313101 loc. 8282 (Tuesday-Saturday).

FEEL STRONGER EVERYDAY FEEL STRONGER EVERYDAY FEEL STRONGER EVERYDAY

Aging with strength

ADVERTORIAL

"I noticed that my father started getting weak. He got easily tired and appeared so drained at the end of the day. He also lost weight," shares Eena Kanapi, a 32-year-old advertising executive. "My father looked haggard and older than his years. He had no appetite and did not like to eat. It became frustrating sometimes. I just wanted him to be healthy."

Are you caring for your parents or an elderly relative? Or maybe you are experiencing the effects of aging like Eena's father? Do you have the same concerns on losing appetite and feeling weak? Do not worry. Aging is inevitable but maintaining strength is also possible with good nutrition.

Eena can attest to how providing complete nutrition through supplementation changed her father's life. "After giving my father a meal supplement, he started eating well. He developed a good appetite. His weight gain was noticeable after 3 weeks. Supplementation gave him more strength. Now, my father has optimism. He believes in himself again – that even at 60 years old, he can still do things."

What makes you feel weak as you age?

As you grow older, your skeletal muscle mass decreases and your body fat increases.<sup>1</sup> These physiologic changes of aging make you feel weak. The elderly experience decreased muscle strength and activity levels. Most of them become easily tired and they are not as physically active as before.

The weakness associated with aging is aggravated by low dietary food intake, particularly of protein-rich foods.<sup>2</sup>

Malnutrition may be undetected in the elderly because its symptoms can be mistaken as part of the natural consequences of growing old. Nutritional intervention may be helpful.

Insufficient protein in the diet results to further loss of lean muscle tissue.<sup>3</sup>

Inadequate supply of nutrients not only weakens the elderly but it also increases their risk of developing malnutrition. However, this risk is not usually recognized nor anticipated. It is hard to detect the symptoms of malnutrition among the elderly. The onset is slow and insidious and may mimic the normal changes of aging.<sup>4</sup>

Why are the elderly at risk of developing malnutrition?

According to Dr Timothy Kwok, an associate professor of Medicine in Hong Kong, decreased food intake among the elderly puts them at risk of developing malnutrition. Old people tend to eat less because of the physiological, psychological and socioeconomic changes that accompany aging.

Physiological changes. The elderly lose their ability to taste and enjoy food because of decreased taste buds and diminished smell sensation.<sup>5</sup> Some may have dental problems that make chewing difficult. They experience early satiety due to the changes in the stomach and the decline of feeding signals from the brain.<sup>2</sup> Age-related changes in the stomach also prevent them from properly digesting and absorbing essential nutrients from the food they eat.<sup>6</sup> Diet alone is unable to provide their nutritional needs.

Psychological changes. Sometimes, loneliness and depression in the elderly cause loss of appetite.<sup>6</sup> These may be brought about by loss of spouse, family members and friends.

Socioeconomic changes. Some elderly persons hesitate to communicate their dietary concerns. They do not want to be an economic burden to their families. They eat whatever food is available, though it may not meet their nutritional needs.

What are the other factors that affect food intake in the elderly?

Older people have higher prevalence of chronic diseases that include hypertension, cancer, arthritis and diabetes mellitus.<sup>7</sup> Such diseases restrict their dietary intake and often require them to lose weight. Dietary restrictions together with inadequate nutrient intake can be detrimental to their health. Most of the elderly may also need multiple medications that can affect appetite and absorption of certain nutrients.

What happens when the elderly suffer from malnutrition?

Dr Kwok explained that malnutrition in the elderly causes weakness, constipation, osteoporosis and anemia. Moreover, malnourished elders have impaired immunity and healing. They easily become sick and slowly recover. They also have poor memory and impaired cognitive function.

What can be done to avoid these conditions?

Optimal nutrition should be provided to the elderly population even before they manifest symptoms of malnutrition. A dietary supplement that provides all the nutritional needs of the body may be added to the diet. The protein content should be complete and easy to absorb. This will help the body combat the effects of aging. Furthermore, this guarantees physical and mental wellness in the elderly, making them healthy and strong to enjoy life.

Timothy Kwok, MD, FRCP, MBChB, is an associate professor of Medicine at the Prince of Wales Hospital in Hong Kong. He is also a consultant in the Department of Medicine and Therapeutics in the Chinese University of Hong Kong, where he attends mostly to chronically ill patients.

IF SOMEONE YOU ARE CARING FOR HAS SPECIAL DIETARY NEEDS, BUILD THEIR STRENGTH WITH NUTREN.

When you're looking after a loved one's particular needs, you become aware of how things can suddenly change.

Now, their current medical condition prevents them from being as active as they once were.

Bring back the spark and energy into their lives with a better way of caring. One that can make them feel stronger everyday.

Nutren is a delicious meal replacement product and supplement in powder form – a breakthrough from the Nestlé Research Center in Switzerland. Known and prescribed by doctors, Nutren provides support for medical conditions where the role of nutrition is vital. In itself, Nutren is more than a complete meal since it contains whey plus all of the essential nutrients, vitamins and minerals in every glass.

In fact, Nutren contains at least 3 times more whey protein than any other commercially-prepared food product or homemade alternative. Whey protein has been clinically proven to:

- help maintain muscle mass throughout aging and repair body tissues<sup>1</sup>
- help boost the immune system by raising levels of glutathione (an anti-oxidant), thereby helping reduce the risk of infection<sup>2</sup>
